Computers change students' lives

The rapidly-advancing science of computer technology has at last arrived at Granite Hills. While some computers were on campus last year, this year saw a torrent of applied computer science. The attendance system, for example, has been completely computerized. If a student is absent, a computerized message telephones parents to notify them. This practice was instituted to curtail truancies. Although the computer-takeover is more efficient, many teachers find it a hassle.

The utilization of student numbers has increased dramatically this year. While making last-minute schedule changes last September, Seniors were the first to be confronted with the new system. For the first time, they were identified solely by their student numbers rather than by names.

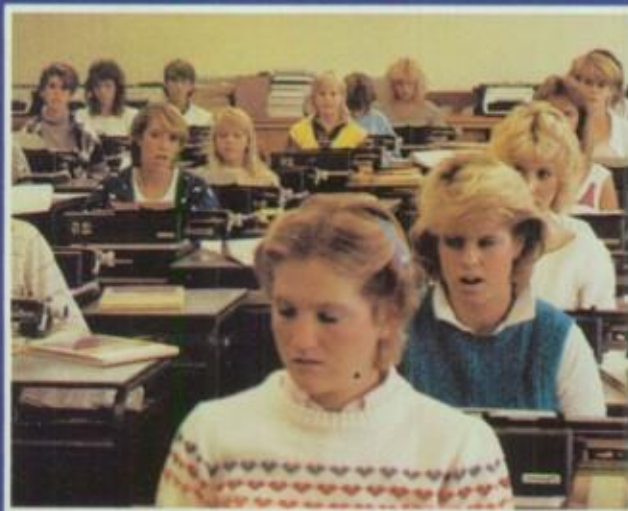

Computerization is not, fortunately, as negative as foreseen in prophetic novels such as 1984. Computer-oriented activities like video-movies and video games have permeated the lifestyles of students at Granite Hills and have made it possible for them to take a byte out of life.

◀ While in computer class, Shawn Redmond plays a game. In many computer classes, Friday means free time to experience the fun aspects of a computer.

▶ Students pound away in typing class. Even though most keyboards are electric these days, students are still forced to learn on a manual typewriter.

▶ In the front office Neil Faubion operates the computerized telephone. The phone is a definite asset, as it enables the office to take more incoming calls, as well as allow conference calls for teachers!

Granite Hills gets a face lift

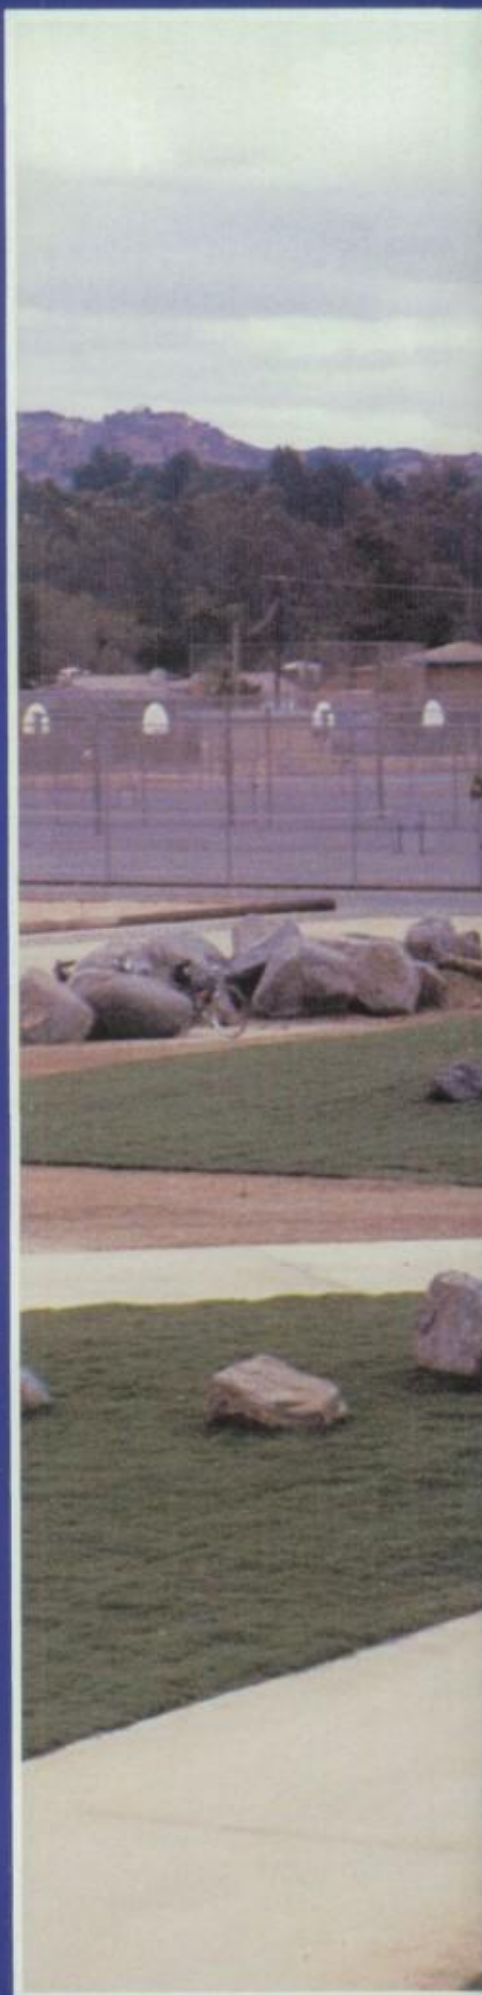

Computerization was not the only change at Granite Hills. The aging campus had a "face lift" over the past year. The most significant change was the new quad. With the transition to one lunch instead of two, this space was sorely needed to accommodate the extra people.

Students were delighted to find newly-painted lockers as well as walls and doors. All of the rooms were renumbered. The numbers were placed more logically, but students were forced to relearn the room locations. Some sympathetic upperclassmen assisted Freshmen who "had a terrible time, as the maps on their Eagle folders were numbered to fit last year's numbers!" said Matt La Rochelle.

The Varsity Football field also boasts of many recent improvements. A new scoreboard stands tall to tell everyone of the Eagle's numerous victories. To accompany the scoreboard are new lights, both of which were donated by the Class of 1985. Many other schools who lack a stadium of their own would like to claim Valley Stadium. That is impossible now, however, as a huge "GH" is painted on the bleachers.

Progress of all sorts continues to encourage students to take a byte out of life.

◀ A workman risks his neck to install the new lighting system. The lights have been a great help at dark games.

STUDENT LIFE

Students bytten

The life of a Granite Hills student is many — faceted and, at times, hectic. Students involved in many school activities find their day a short one. At school, students endure many classes. Although some seem boring, electives that students really seem to enjoy are their computer courses because they have the opportunity to write programs, play computer games, and be a part of the computer generation. Computers have bytten most upperclassmen; even many of those who do not have a computer class have a computer at home.

Students can take a bigger byte out of life because computers cut down on homework time. Theresa Kenyon finds her computer a definite asset — "to do my English essays, write my programs for Computer Programming, and everything else! I don't know what I'd do without it! It really helps!"

Many after-school activities compete for a student's attention. A lot of students hold part-time jobs, many of which are in fast-food restaurants. A vast number of students participate in sports and practice daily. For those who prefer less strenuous activities, clubs provide an exciting alternative. Some clubs produce something such as the Clarion of the Pageant.

Fads change

What's hot? What's not? These questions concern many fashion-conscious students at Granite Hills. Why do they wear what they do? While some students wear various styles of clothes to express their personalities, others tend to wear what they do simply to conform to new fads and fashions.

First of all, girls love to wear stylish, comfortable pumps. One can see a rainbow of different colors of these shoes any day. Another type of popular shoe this year is Reeboks tennis shoes. These stylish, multi-colored shoes walk all over the campus.

Now, look closely at all those wrists! Are those bracelets? Handcuffs? No, they're Swatches — the latest watches disguised as bold jewelry. Some students wear ◀ Michelle Lewton, Catherine Halte, Tatja Guida, Scott Smith, and Brad Halte model the latest hairstyles. Although many students follow the fads in hairstyle, a majority still wear casual, easy-to-groom styles.

◀ Reeboks are "in," for school wear as well as for their original purpose: aerobics. Reeboks come in standard white as well as other colors.

◀ Showing the "overall look" are Julie Jemo, Steve Houston, and Stacy Watson. This look is confined to a few fashion-conscious students.

▶ Wearing a broach, earrings, and a drooping necklace, Theresa Kenyon dons the jewelry seen on most girls this year. Most girls love to wear big, expressive jewelry with outfits ranging from jeans to dresses.

▶ Both girls and guys love to wear these new wave Swiss watches. SWATCHES come in many colors and styles and add a bold statement.

two Swatches on one wrist.

Another fad for students is large, expressive jewelry. Broaches, drooping necklaces, gawdy earrings and plastic bracelets adorn both girls and guys. Also, Mrs. Brooks is an example of a teacher who dons the hottest jewelry fashions.

Finally, whose hairstyle comes to mind when you hear the word "hair?" Most likely, those whose hair is short and somewhat spiked, or those girls with a bob. Chances are one thinks of someone like Jill Toom, Scott Smith, Stephanie Golden, or our new librarian, Mrs. Van Tassle. Many hairstyles prevail at Granite Hills.

One negative aspect of this, however, is that others "tend to judge others by what they wear," says Julie Howe. More and more people, though, are learning to look beyond a person's exterior and see the true individual. Clearly, fads and fashions play an important part in the lives of Granite Hills students.

MUSIC: parental guidance suggested?

Many new developments in music are altering this age-old pastime. Compact discs, the hottest items in stereo equipment, made a successful debut on the market. Individual discs cost between twelve and fifteen dollars, with players ranging from $200.00 to $400.00. While more expensive than most stereo equipment, "they are well worth the cost," says Sherri Hogue. Unlike records and tapes, discs cannot be worn out, and therefore are invaluable.

Another new turn in the world of music is the rating system. Due to excessively violent, profane, and sexual lyrics in much of today's music, all records and tapes will be stamped with a rating. "V" is for extremely violent material, "X" stands for profane, sexually explicit lyrics, "O" indicates occult, and "D/A" refers to drugs or alcohol. The National Music Review Council referred to the Night Stalker as an example of music influencing violent behavior. Richard Ramirez, also known as the Night Stalker, was an avid AC/DC fan who was obsessed with Satanism and a song about murder from the album, "Highway to Hell."

Music will probably always be an important part of high school life, despite the many changes and developments.

► Compact Disc players are the state-of-the-art technology in music and stereo. They range in price from $200 to $400.

▲ Debbie Kevane, Monica Spiron, and Kathy Talbot sit in the park listening to music. Music is a way to relieve students' tension, especially after school.

► Rock reformer Susan Baker demonstrates the type of album that she believes should be rated. Rating record albums may prove to be controversial.

Students choose favorites

This year's student poll is somewhat different from those in the past. In previous years, many students complained that their favorites were not fairly represented. To provide a more complete picture of favorites, the top three in each category are now listed.

The variety of responses showed how diversified our school is. Some people were extremely humorous in their answers, naming the K-Mart Cafeteria, for instance, as a favorite restaurant, and the PTA or MADD as their favorite group.

Many categories were almost unanimous. For favorite car, almost everyone answered that they liked any model of red convertible. Many different models of Porsches and Mustangs were also mentioned.

The all-student poll undoubtedly reveals the broad spectrum of tastes and preferences at Granite Hills.

Guys get in vogue

• Most girls are fanatics about how they look and spend megabucks on clothing and footwear.

For the most part, guys in previous years have been content to wear 501's, a t-shirt, and sneakers. That's a fading tradition, however. For the past few years, guys have become more fashion-conscious and have been giving great consideration to their appearance. The guys are now fighting for bathroom time with their sisters! Although Levi's are still common apparel, they have lost their complete monopoly to various styles of baggy pants from Bugle Boy, CODE-BLU, and GUESS. T-shirts have been replaced by TON SUR TON sweatshirts, big baggy button downs, and shaker knit sweaters. More and more guys are stepping out of tennis shoes and into Reebok high-tops, Sperry top-siders, and canvas slip-ons. Fashion has become a higher priority in the lives of guys. In the words of Mike Thweatt, "New styles are not just for girls anymore."

Videos cut cost

Mike: Hi Beth! What do you want to do tonight?

Beth: How about going to the movies?

Mike: No! It costs $5.00 a person and I only have $7.00. That's too expensive. What else could we do?

Beth: We could rent a video. It only costs $2.00, and we can watch it over at my house.

Mike: That sounds great. What do you want to see?

Beth: How about "Pee Wee's Big Adventure?"

Mike: That's still playing at the theatres. It's not available in videos yet. We have to get an older movie.

Beth: Well then, how about "Sixteen Candles?"

Mike: Sounds great. I'll go pick it up and be over at 8:00 with the movie. Bye!

Beth: Bye!

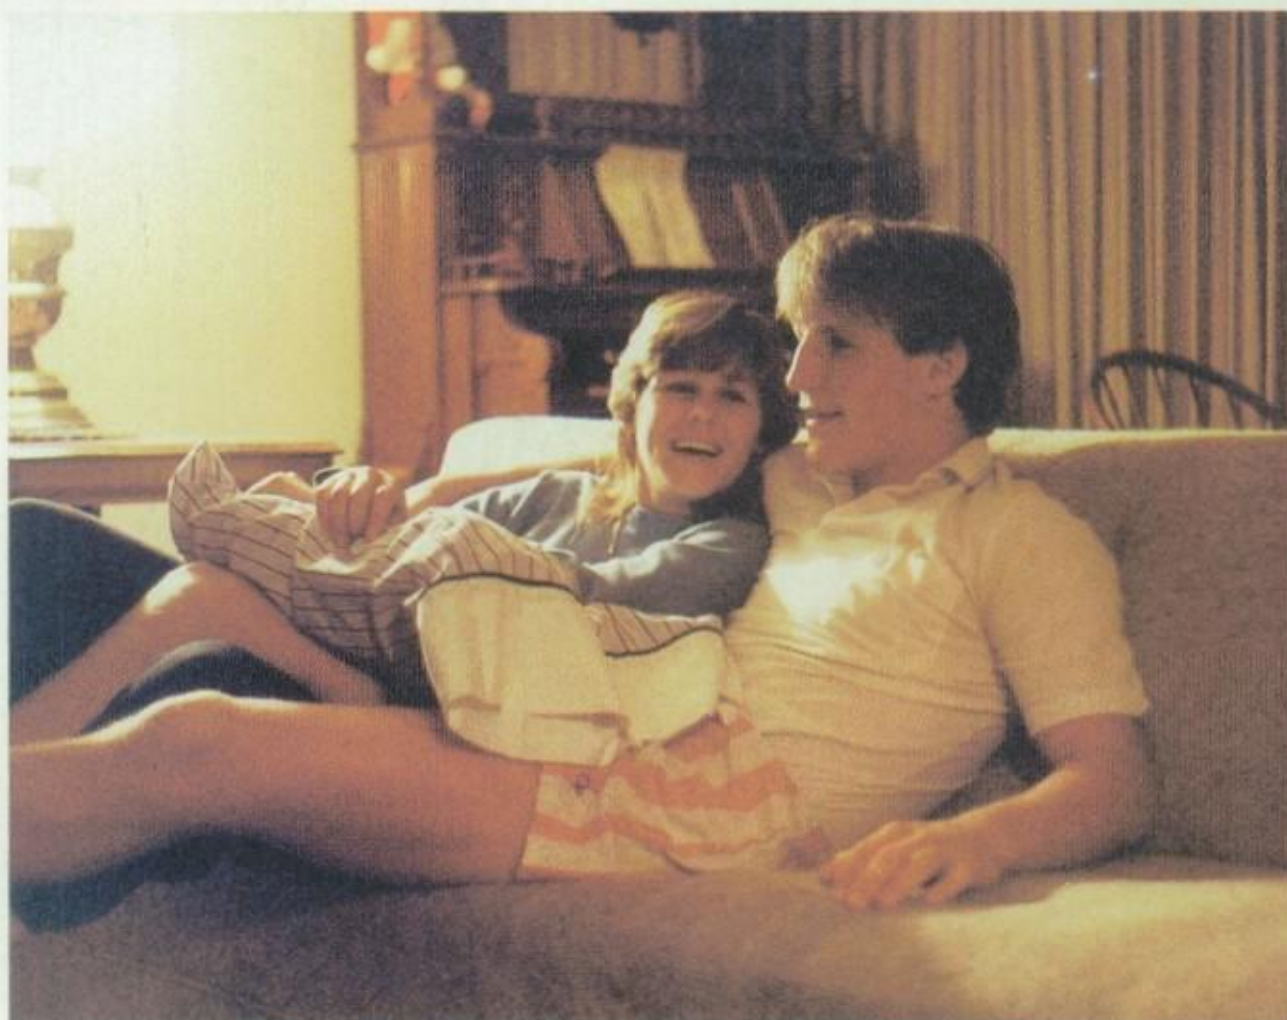

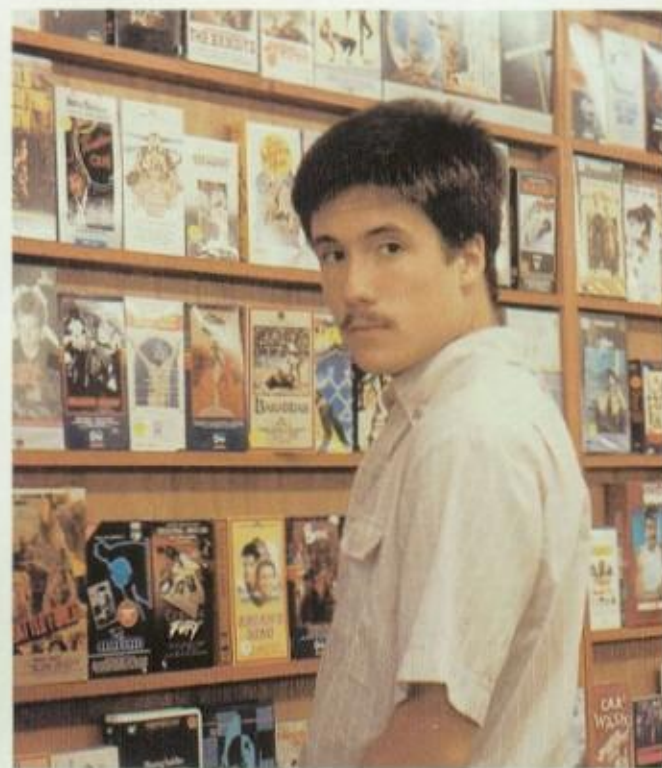

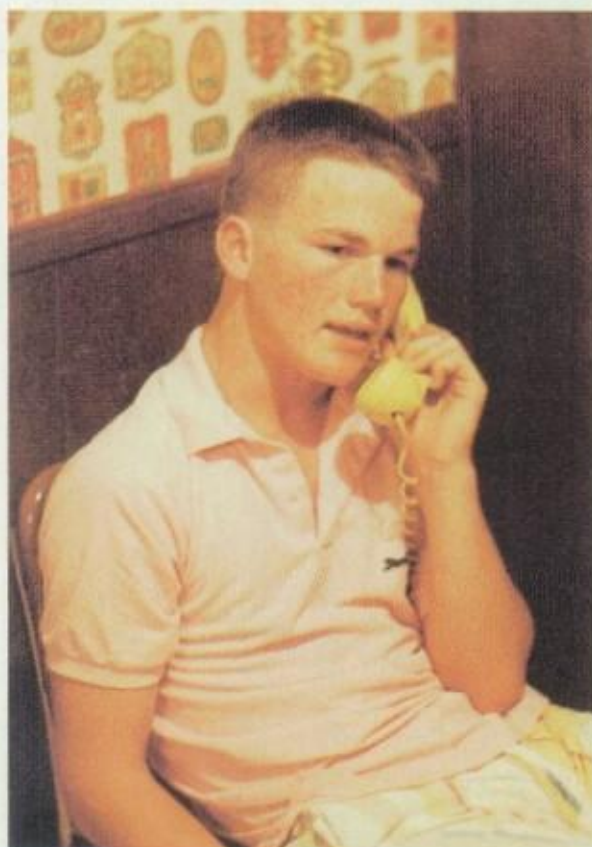

► Tim Raymond spends a lot of time browsing in the Video Library. Video Stores like this have enjoyed a large increase in business recently.

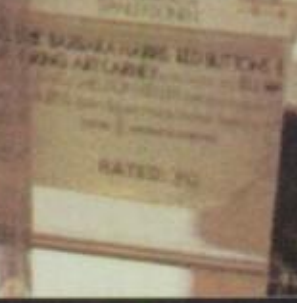

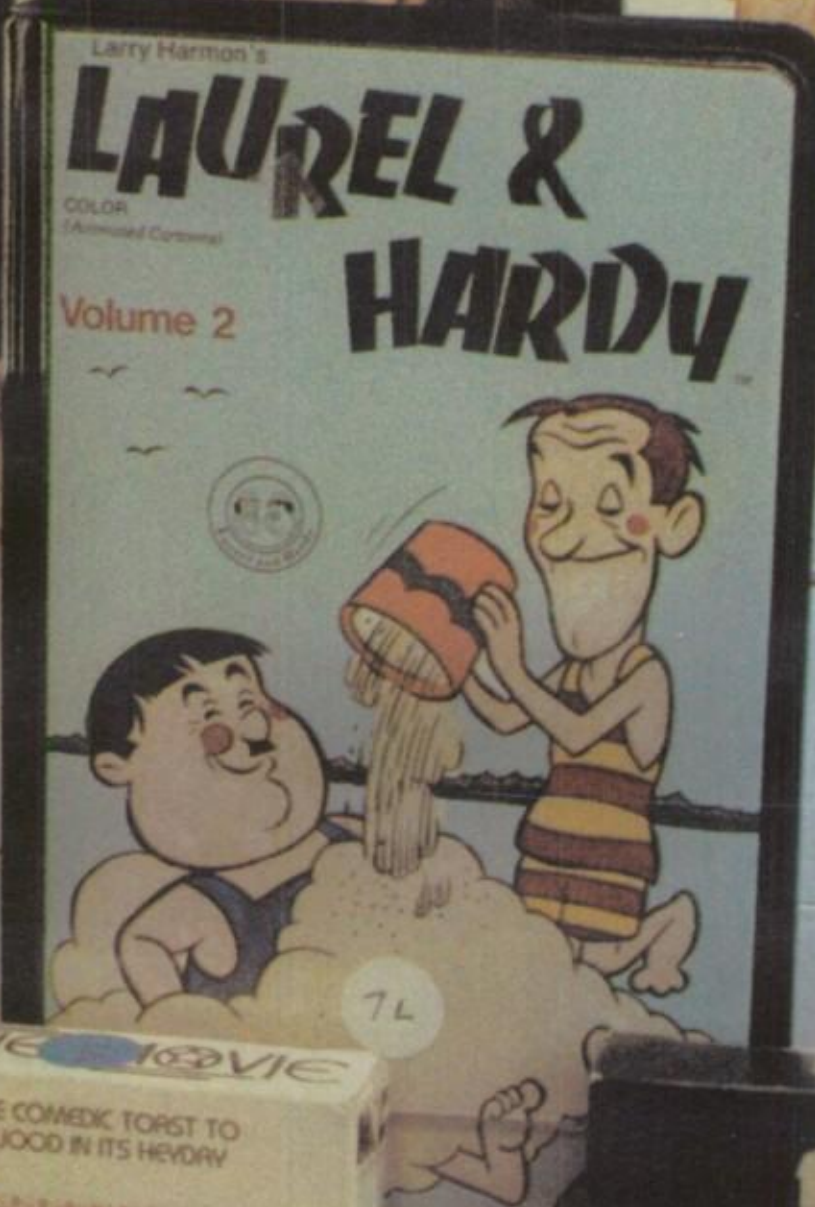

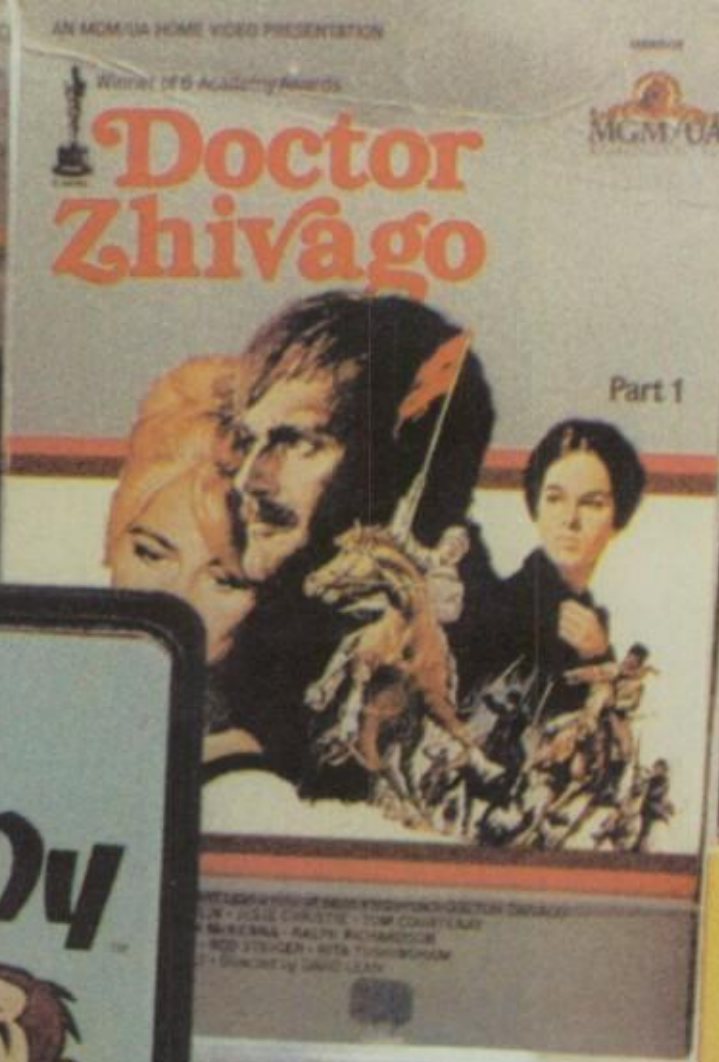

► Renting videos has become a popular pastime. Videos offer the alternative of watching movies in the privacy of one's own home.

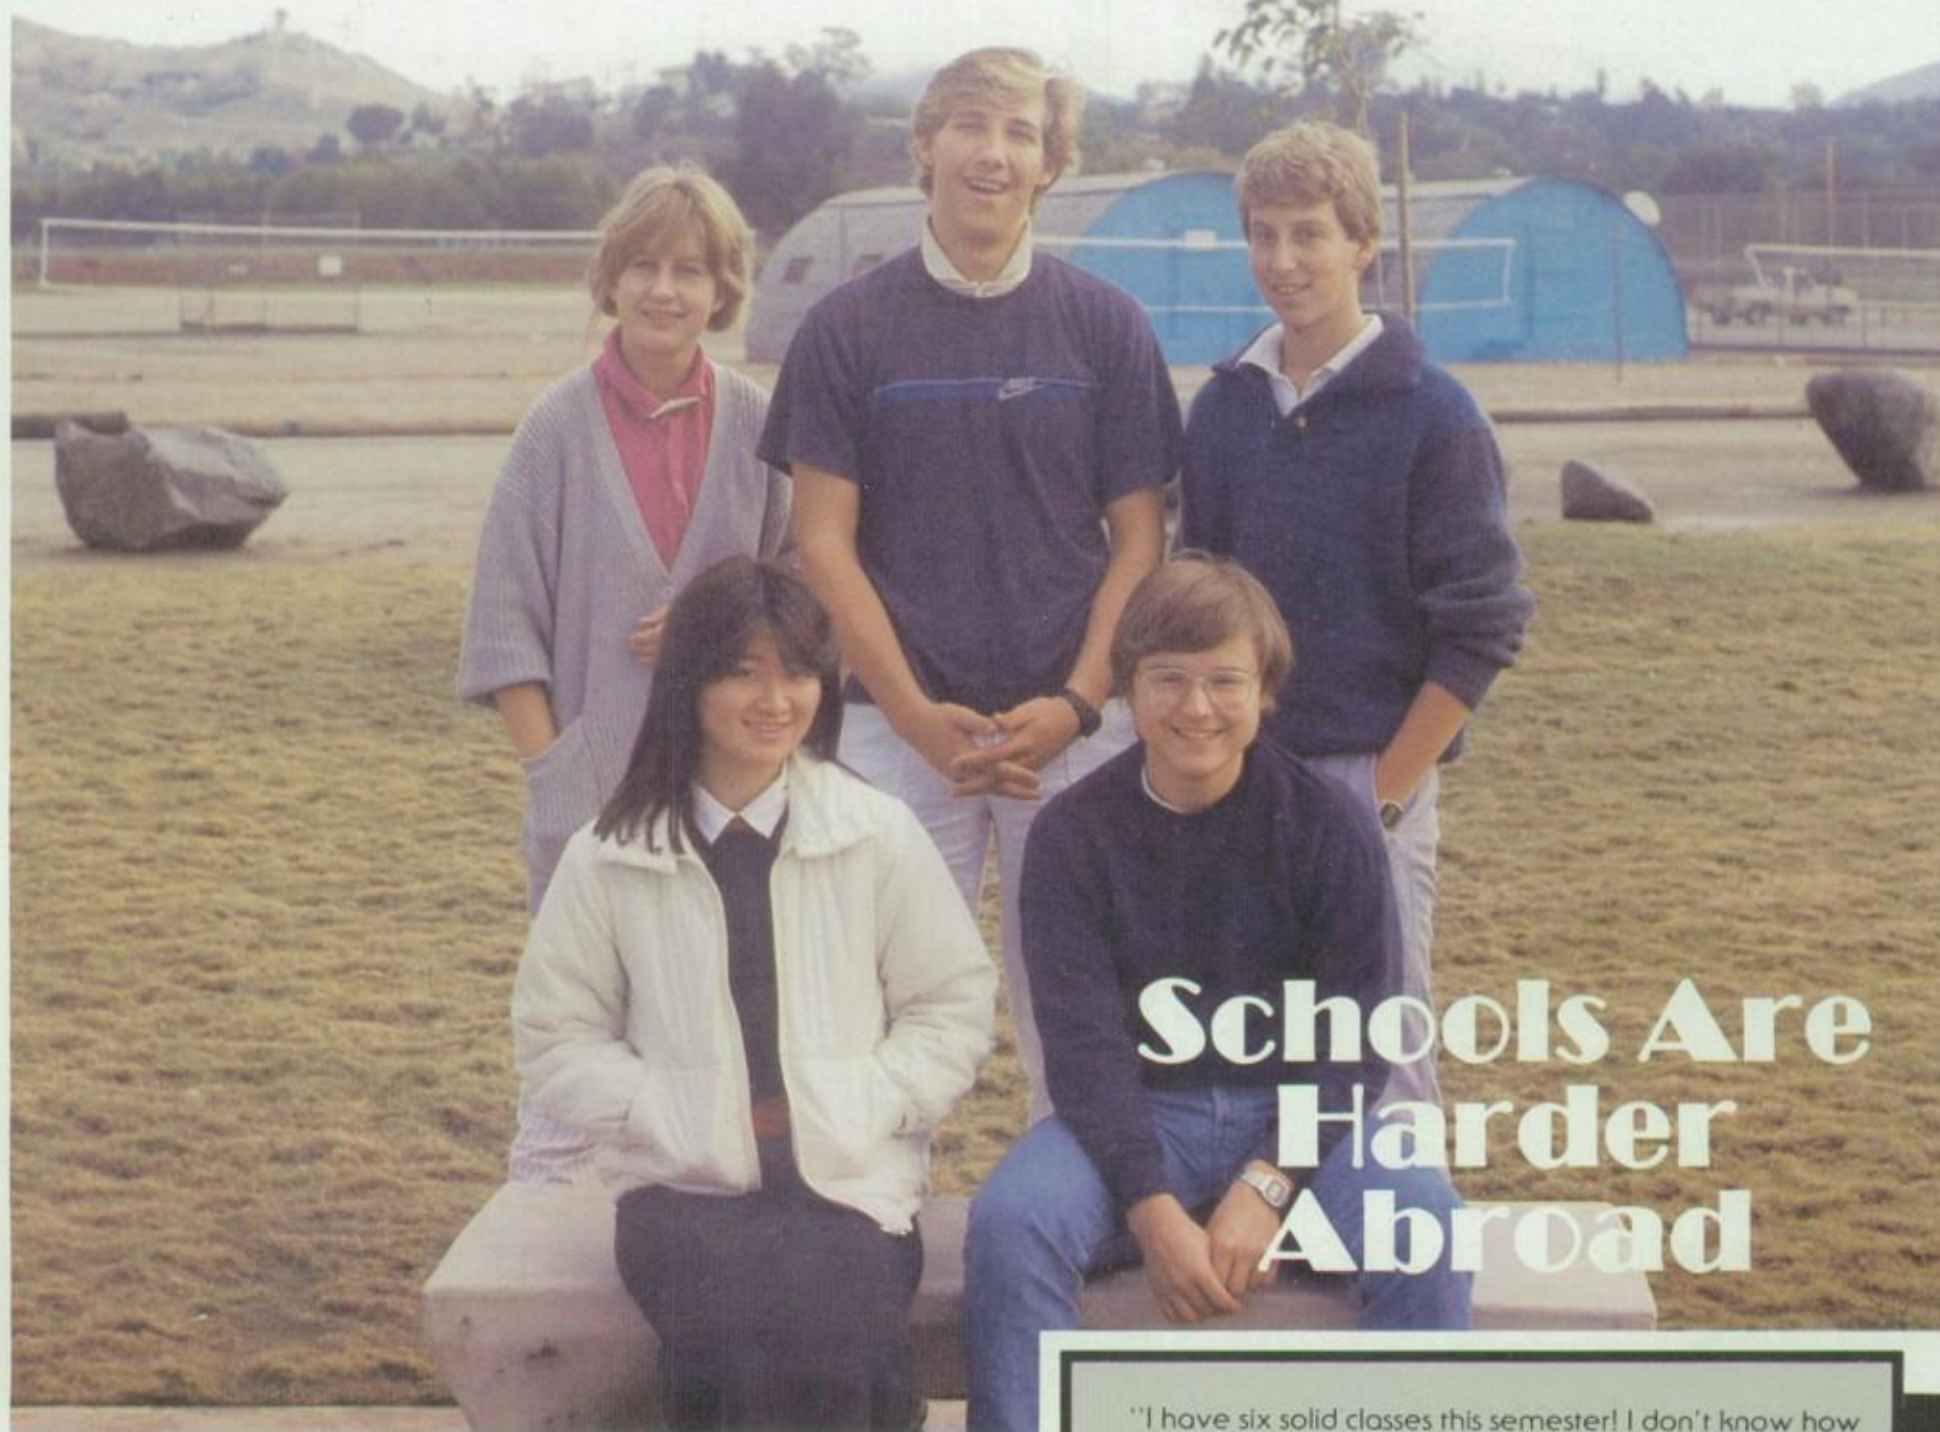

▼ Ronny Breen phones to invite a friend to come over to watch a video. As prices are skyrocketing for theater admission, many people elect to rent less expensive videos.

Schools Are Harder Abroad

"I have six solid classes this semester! I don't know how I'll make it!" Many students at Granite Hills have been heard moaning such complaints. Though many see conditions as being unbearable, school is much more demanding in some foreign countries; foreign exchange students can attest to that.

Juliane Dummler, Marko Boger, and Lutz Roepcke are all from West Germany. Pasi Tilander is from Finland, and Chisa Ohno is from Japan. All five students are spending 1986 in America, attending school at Granite Hills. When asked what they liked about American schools, they unanimously agreed that "it's much easier" than in their homelands.

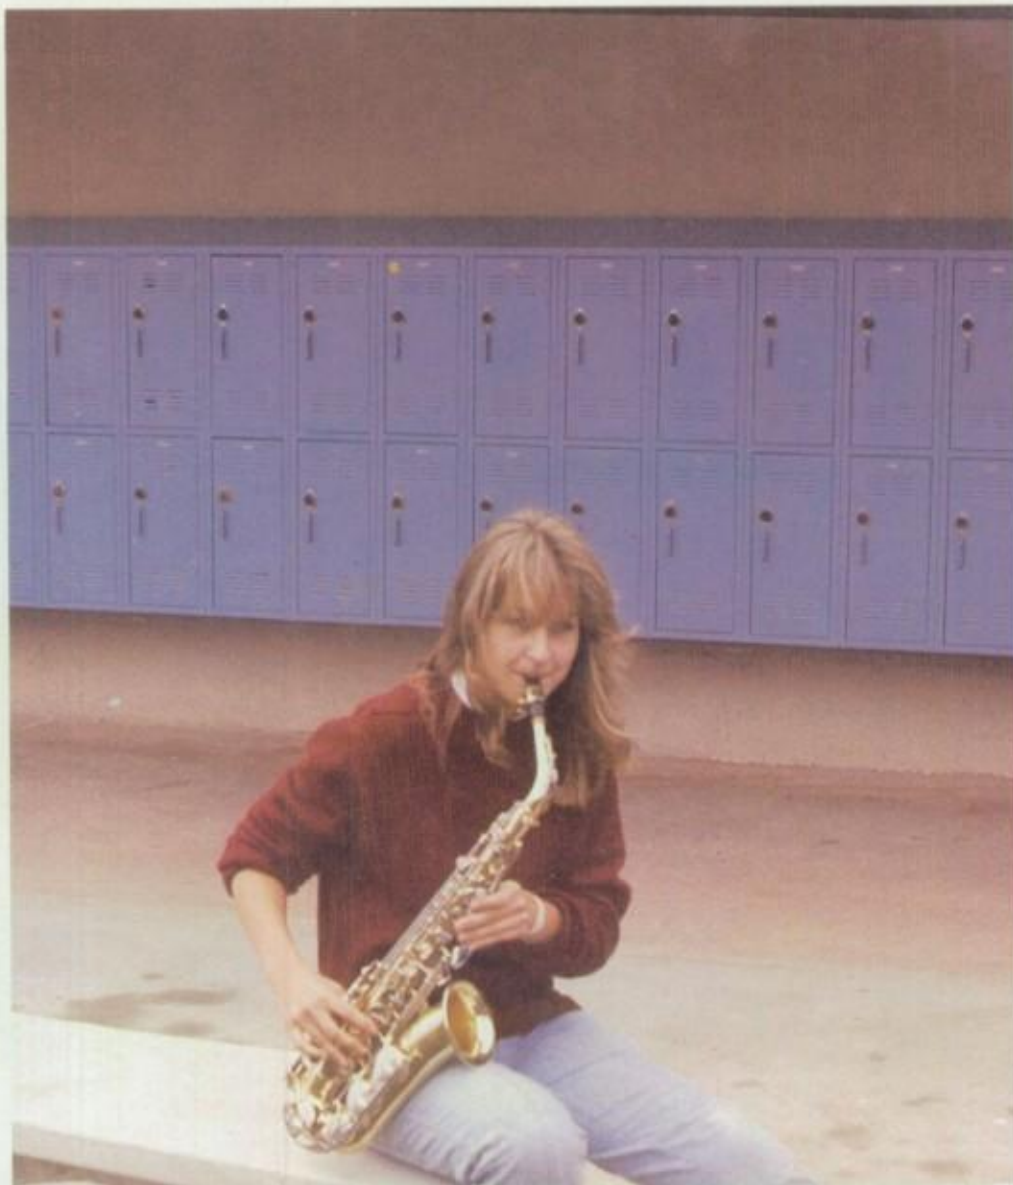

Pasi feels that Granite Hills is, "ten times easier, because in Finland we have to take fifteen to sixteen subjects in one year, and we also have to buy our own books!"

Juliane says that her school, "is harder than it is here. We get no lunch, just two twenty minute breaks. Also, it's less personal in Germany. You get to know your teachers better here."

Lutz agrees that German schools, "are harder, because we have to take eleven classes in one week. It's just like a college is here. I'm only in tenth grade in Germany, while I'm in twelfth grade here."

In Chisa's school in Japan, students attend school on Saturday and they have to wear uniforms. She says that "the teachers change classes, not the students." Also, students are not allowed to hold jobs while in school.

Pageant Harding sums it up by saying, "If I could choose to live anywhere in the world, I'd still live in America."

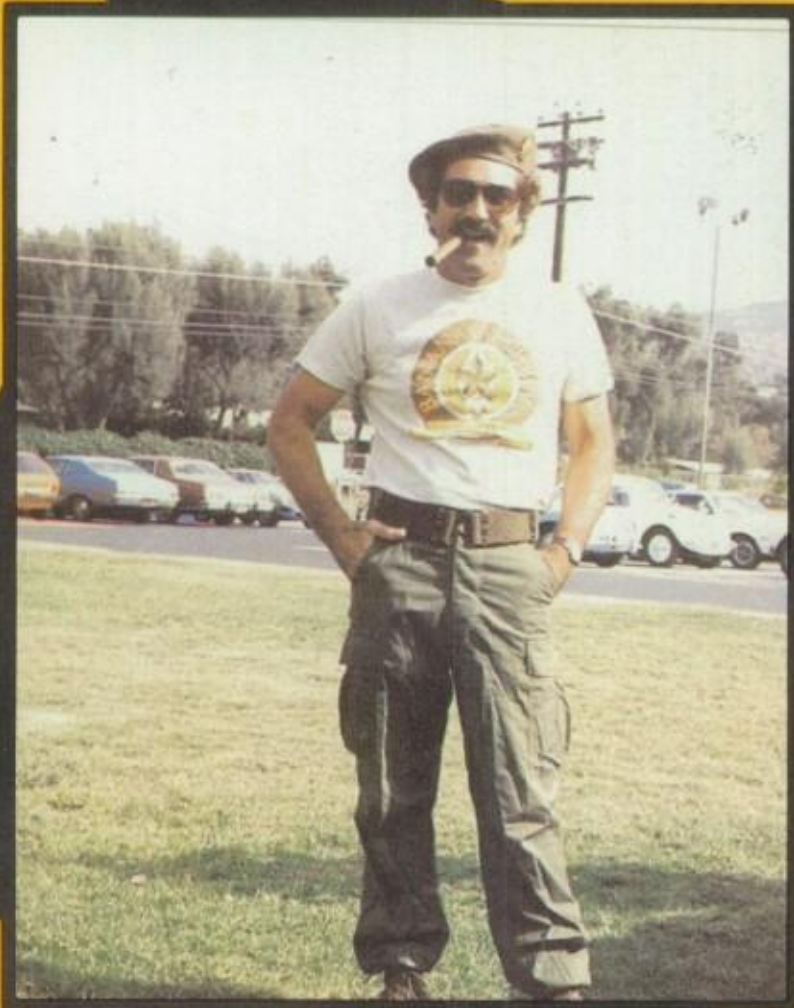

▲ One of Juliane's hobbies is playing the saxophone in our concert and pep bands. Being in ASB, she was able to get a bus to take the pep band to football games.

◀ Chisa, Juliane, Pasi, Lutz, and Marko like to "hang around" together at school. They shared many fun times during the school year.

▼ Marko, Juliane and Pasi were the honorary princes and princess for homecoming. They enjoyed dressing up and participating in this special school event.

The Minister of Propaganda, Mr. Williams, entertains his students with his costume. A large number of the faculty participated in the festivities.

Brian Geng is indeed grim as he swings his reaper. While many modern costumes can be seen, traditional ones like this still linger.

Insert: Cheerleader for the day, Dan Barnes can now sympathize with the cheer squad, who wear short skirts in freezing temperatures. Male cheerleaders are a popular costume among the football players.

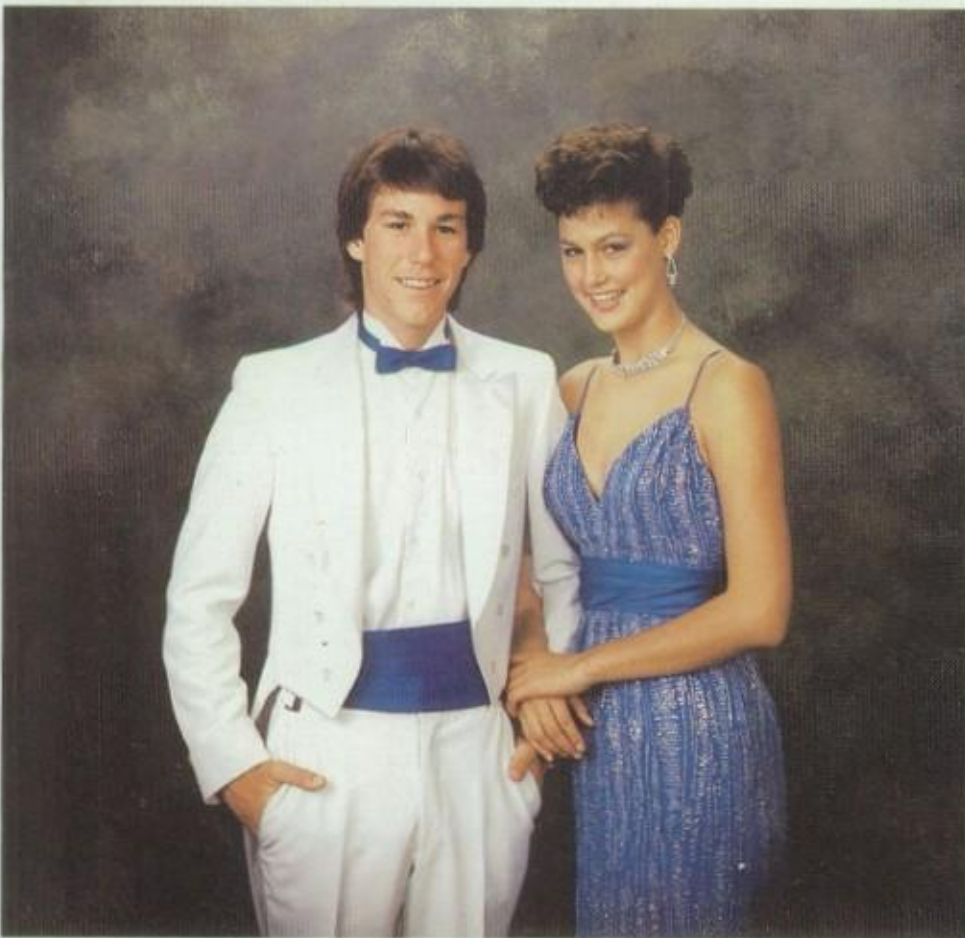

While the majority of Americans celebrate Halloween, relatively few are aware of this holiday's dark origin. Myths and legends abound, but the truth has been masked by today's customs and practices. Most people have a vague idea that Halloween is related in some way to the occult, but are unclear about the details.

When asked how Halloween originated, eleventh grader Lisa Bangle answered, "People used to think that witches went out on Halloween."

Senior John Foster guessed that, "People in masks would go to different houses to bless them. The owner of the house would be expected to welcome them. Others would wear costumes to ward off demons."

John came the closest to the truth; certain people did go from residence to residence, but not to bless them! Halloween originated in the British Isles, in the time of the Druid Priests. On the Satanic calendar, October 31 is New Years, and on that night the Druid Priests would go from castle to castle. They would demand a woman for human sacrifice. If they were satisfied, they left a "treat," a jack-o-lantern with a candle in it (these are the same candles used today in Satanic Black Mass). The jack-o-lantern was supposed to ward off demon attacks. If they did not receive a woman, they left a "trick," a painted hexagram on the door (a mockery of the Star of David.) This sign was supposed to invite demons to wreak havoc in the home. Since that time many other customs and beliefs have developed as well.

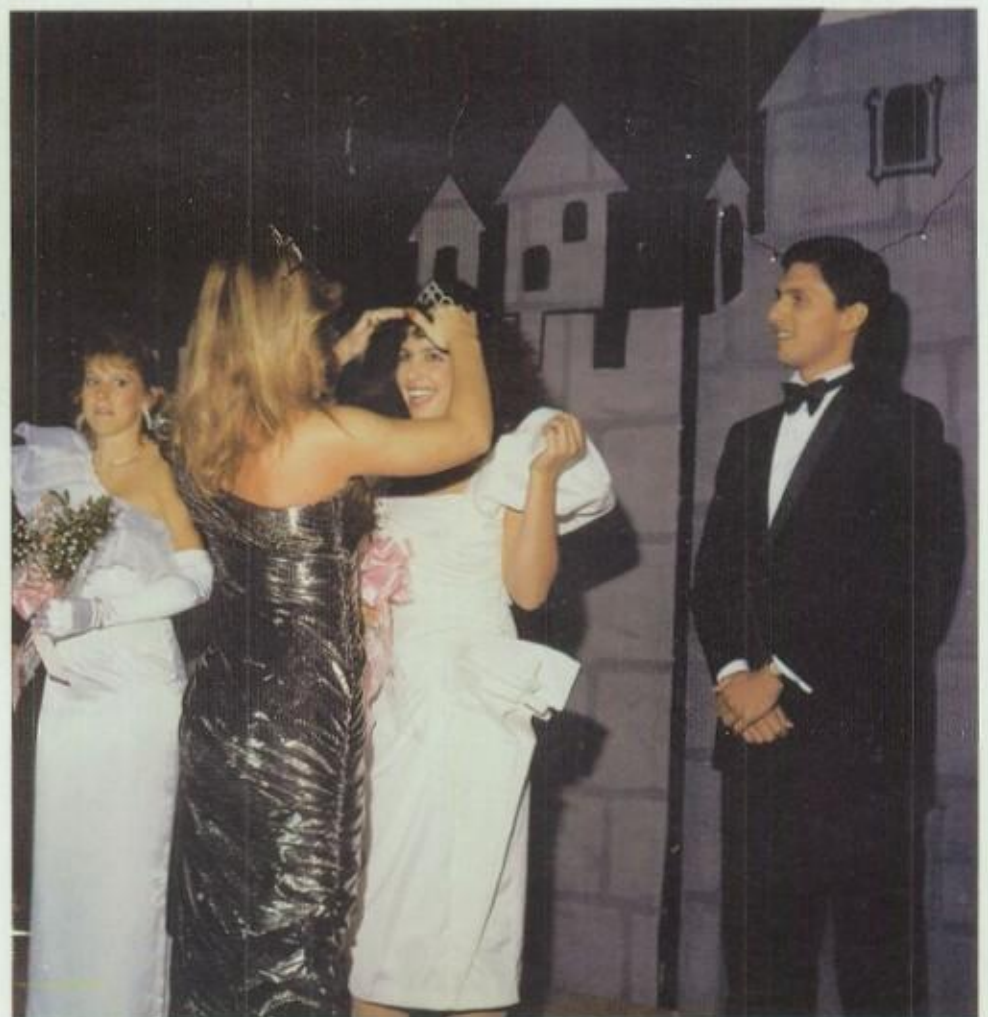

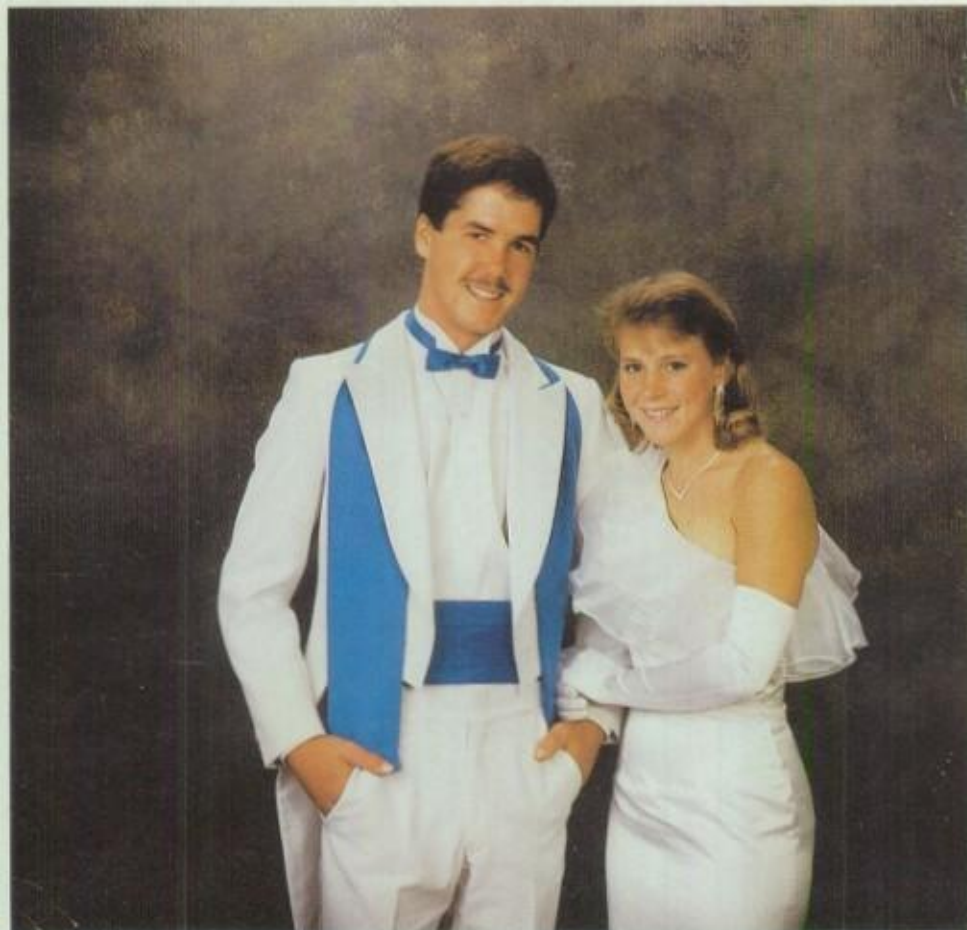

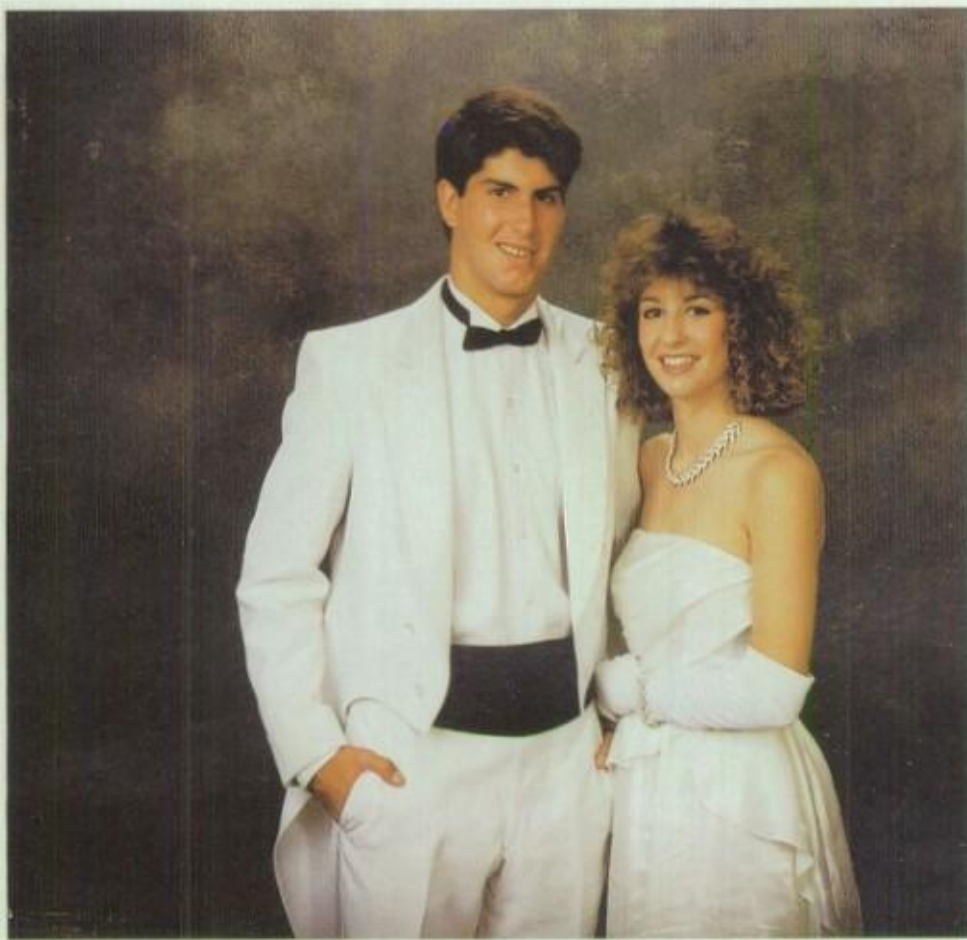

Homecoming Dreams Come True

Homecoming has always been a subject of great excitement among high school students. It is a time of school spirit, and enthusiastic predictions of who will be King and Queen, and who is going to win the big football game.

The most memorable aspect of Homecoming is the Royal Court. Many girls ran for Queen this year, and it was difficult to narrow it down to the five finalists, for whom the entire school body voted. The King and Queen are chosen not only for their appearance and popularity, but also for their school service, spirit, and personality.

The theme of this year's festivities was the magical, mystical land of Fairytales. The half-time activities did seem like a fairytale, with the crowning of Queen Lone Haisha, not to mention the brilliant fireworks. King Dan Barnes was crowned at the dance after the victorious defeat of our Highlander rivals, which put the final touch on the magical week of Homecoming.

What are you doing tomorrow night

Mickey looks in the mirror as he rushes out the door and fixes his freshly moussed hair and ultra-thin tie. Like always, he's fifteen minutes late. He quickly gets on his brand new Vespa P200E scooter and motors to Minney's house.

Meanwhile, Minney is frantically trying to get ready, as she too is fifteen minutes behind schedule. She got mascara on her new paisley blouse and her stretch pants are still in the dryer. As Mickey pulls into the driveway, Minney is just starting to curl her hair. Thus, Mickey ends up fighting off Pluto for ten minutes until Minney finally descends the stairs, tucking her hair behind her ears and blushing in her blush as she goes. They're now off and running . . .

First, they hit Taco Bell for a quick bite to eat, then jam to the AMC Santee Village Eight theaters to catch the eight o'clock showing of "Back to the Future." Afterwards, Leatherby's is the place to be.

As they gaze at each other over their dripping, gooey, sundaes, they reminisce about their six-month anniversary, which was exactly two weeks ago. They both had dressed up in their best and had a romantic dinner at Bobby McGees. Afterwards, they had gone to the Old Globe to watch a play.

They finish their sundaes, and on the way home Mickey asks Minney, "So, what are you doing tomorrow night?"

Need a ride?

San Diego: a city known for its great recreational outlets. The mountains, the beach, the desert, not to mention the excitement of city life, are all within two hours of El Cajon. But how's a teenager to get there?

A sixteenth birthday can be a magic moment, bringing with it the independence of a driver's license. Of course, a few problems may block the way to the open road: insurance, a car and the other expenses of vehicle ownership. Nevertheless, most look forward to sixteen as the year of liberation.

Until they have wheels, though, students can be ingenious in getting around. Some use skateboards or bicycles. Others, like Roshell Hill, rely mainly on parents and friends.

Travis Thomas, now the proud owner of a VW, remembers having to "walk or have a friend drive me" as a real pain.

Unfortunately, riding the city's bus lines is an adventure few wish to try. An exception, Traci Zwibel, recalls being stuck without a car last summer but determined to get out of the house. Taking three different busses each way, she managed to get from El Cajon to Mission Beach and thinks of the MTD as a god-send. "It saved my summer and helped me to achieve a California tan."

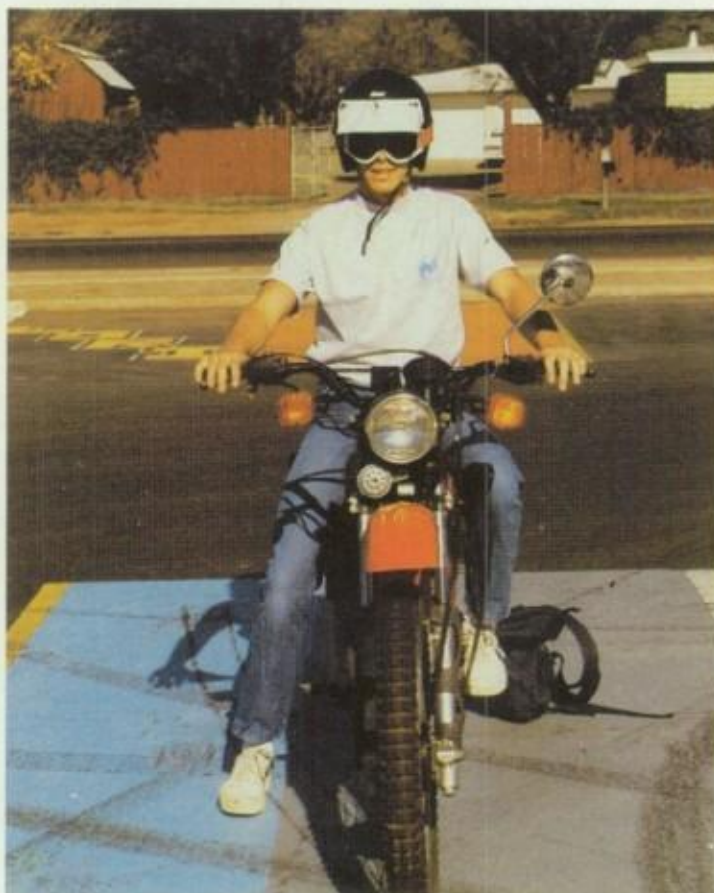

Even seeing friends can be a tortuous process for those who live in Alpine, at the far reaches of Granite Hills' attendance area. Most take the school bus to and from school, which requires them to schedule their class periods two through seven. Staying after school for sports or other activities is often overwhelming.

But whether living near-by or way out, students are always happy to hear an invitation that includes the big question — "Want a ride?"

▼ Mom and the moms of friends are Christy Schimpf's source of rides. She can hardly wait until she's old enough to drive.

▼ To get where he wants to go, Ian Funk just starts his motorcycle. Few use motorcycles for regular transportation, but many students ride off-road.

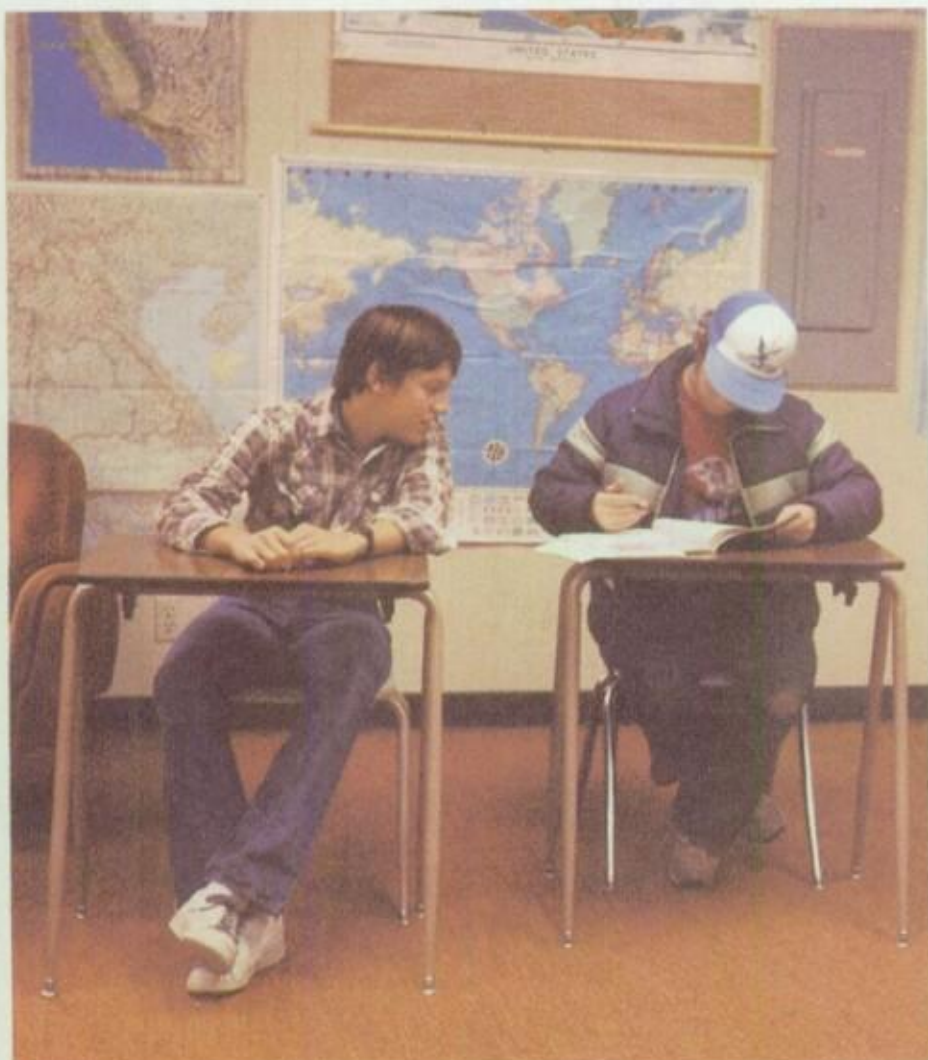

In the southwest corner of the Granite Hills campus by the junior parking lot, there are a group of nine classrooms called the Special Education Center. The first class in the Center was established in 1969 and was designed to help students with physical disabilities.

The Center has seventy-three students from all parts of the Grossmont District. The curriculum is in many ways similar to the curriculum at Granite Hills. The graduation requirements are the same for students but at different levels. They all take Physical Education, English, Government, and the other required courses for graduation.

A differentiating aspect of the Center is the fact that each student has an Individual Education Plan, or IEP. These plans allow the students to work at their own pace. Ms. Hansen, the department chairperson stresses this fact. The students of the Center have trouble keeping up with other students at their grade level. Instead they have their own program which they follow every day.

▼ Kelly Shirer picks up her favor at the door. On the back of each favor was the name of the couple.

Silver bells are still dancing in the heads of favors committee members long after the last decoration and favor have been cleaned up from the Christmas Dance. The beautiful hand-painted silver bells with green holly and red bows were the project of favors chair Ellen Henderson. After ordering three hundred ceramic bells, she and her staff spent three weekends before the dance at her house, which Ellen reports she converted into "an art studio." Assisted by her co-chairman, Jamie Duffey, Riva Calleja, Catherine Halte, and Jeff DeLaney, Ellen and crew spent about forty-five minutes converting each bell from a drab ceramic brown to a shiny ornament, complete with the name of the couple on the back.

Unfortunately, not all the bells were painted by dance night, so the committee spent several days after the dance completing the project.

Beth Rankin, a member of the Christmas Dance Committee, credits Ellen and her staff with incredible hours of service and artistic talent in producing the bells which gave the dance its theme — "Silver Bells" — and the dancers a beautiful remembrance to hang on their christmas trees for years to come.

Other committees worked on bids, food, flowers, and decorations.

Jeff Grotovsky, over-all chairman, was assisted by Kelly Shirer, Bids; Melissa Riley, Food; Carm Gallo, Decorations; Danielle Wolfe, Flowers and, of course, Ellen Henderson, Favors.

Mother of the dancers commented on the great music, provided by Sunset Mobil, a disc jockey who performed at Magnolia Mulvaney's over the summer.

What is Christmas?

The Encyclopedia Americana defines Christmas as a "feast commemorating the birth of Jesus, observed by the Christian Church." On a personal level, however, Christmas means many different things to different people. When asked what Christmas meant to them, Granite Hills students had a wide variety of answers.

Roshelle Hills, 10 — "Christmas is great because it gets people high on God. I also like the fact that it brings people closer together."

Margaret Prida, 11 — "It means spending a special time with family and friends, and seeing the faces of people that you've given presents to."

Sandy Carlson, 12 — "Christmas is the most giving, loving time of year. The reason for this is Jesus Christ was born into the world. He was the ultimate gift of love."

Travis Thomas, 11 — "Jesus Christ's b-day."

Robin Kramer, 12 — "Christmas is a time for being with those you care for, drinking eggnog on Christmas Eve, and a time not to fight. Some people forget what it's about."

Dan Barnes, 12 — "Christmas is a time of sharing with family and close friends and a time to celebrate the birth of Jesus."

Joe McLaughlin, 12 — "It's a time of giving and sharing."

Sally Darr, 12 — "It's a time when friends and family gather to celebrate the birth of Jesus Christ. It's a time of joy and happiness, and a warm feeling surrounds everyone."

Jim Patterson, 12 — "It's a time to exchange gifts with friends and loved ones and be happy. It's also the beginning of ski season — time of good times, but not forgetting the less fortunate."

"Five, four, three, two, one — Happy New Year!! Happy New Year!!! It's 1986 already? Where did 1985 go?"

1986 has caught many people off guard. For seniors, it is the realization that this is the year they are going to graduate that is so hard to handle. Underclassmen realize that the first semester is already almost over and summer is only one semester away.

When one thinks about New Year's, parties automatically come to mind. Many chose to celebrate with friends, while others welcomed the New Year more quietly at home with their families. For those who spent the night watching "Dick Clark's Rock-n-Roll New Year's" with a bowl of popcorn and three Pepsis — remember, there is always New Year's Eve 1987...

Let the good times roll

After a day of studying and exams, the final bell means that the time has come to relax and enjoy being a teenager. Before leaving campus, many students stop in the quad to unwind and talk with friends. Prior to going home to do homework, a popular place to go is Second Street. This nearby street offers almost any kind of fast food for a quick lunch. Tuesday night is "dollar night" at the United Artists (U.A.) Cinema, and a vast number of students pick this night to watch recent movies.

When the weekend finally arrives, the possibilities for entertainment are unlimited. Friday nights become synonymous with football games. After the games, a popular hang-out is Round Table Pizza on Jamacha. Shelly Timmons, a Round Table employee, agrees that it, "got so packed, you couldn't even walk without tripping over someone!" Other popular sources of weekend entertainment are the movies and the Parkway Bowling Alley.

A popular bumper sticker reads, "When the going gets tough, the tough go shopping!" It seems that a great many students consider themselves "tough!" Three popular shopping malls in the area are Parkway Plaza, Grossmont Center, and Fashion Valley.

Regardless of the exact location, the important thing is to find time to get away from the pressures of high school life. Some diversions are shared by groups while others are solitary; either way, rest and enjoyment are great for the morale of students.

◀ Melissa Stokes and Stephanie Golden decide what to order at Round Table Pizza. Round Table is considered the high school hangout.

▼ Karen Gotham pays for her movie ticket at Parkway Theater. The movies are one of many weekend diversions.

▶ Lisa Sanchez, Michelle Sronce, Pam Harmor, and Jamie Pridemore giggle over the day's happenings. The quad is a popular rest area after school.

I owe, I owe, so off to work I go

Although students work for a variety of reasons, the most prominent is to secure a steady cash flow. Erin Poulson, for example, works "only for the money. I wouldn't work if I had a choice." The necessity to work can be more bearable at interesting jobs. Common teen-age jobs include working fast food and clothing stores, but students find more unusual jobs a means of breaking the monotony. Kerry McCarthy enjoys her job as a dance/cartoon character at Disneyland, but laments, "driving up each weekend to work." Students like Ken Goss who enjoy working outside, many times pick construction as their means of income. Working at a golf course earns cash for Glenn Whiting and Wayne Carpenter.

One problem that arises, however, is that of work interfering with studies. Tony Valenzuela agrees that, "my job takes up a lot of my time. It's hard to study for a test and work at the same time." Despite the stress, students learn to organize their time and benefit from the experience.

Library welcomes new ideas

With new people come new innovations and with Mrs. Van Tassel come many fresh ideas for the library. Besides the several new computers for students' use, Mrs. Van Tassel plans to institute new programs for the library, including guest speakers and the showing of recent, artistically important films. Attention has also been turned upon our literary collection. The 28,000 + catalog is seriously lacking in technical, social and politically-based books. In addition, the magazine collection needs to be updated. Research materials also rank highly on Mrs. Van Tassel's shopping list. One new addition to our library has been the Social Issue Resource Series, a multi-volume research aid.

Future plans for our library include a thorough redecoration and refurnishing, a new information and research center, and greatly increased magazine subscriptions. Mrs. Van Tassel's greatest wish, however, is increased faculty and student input.

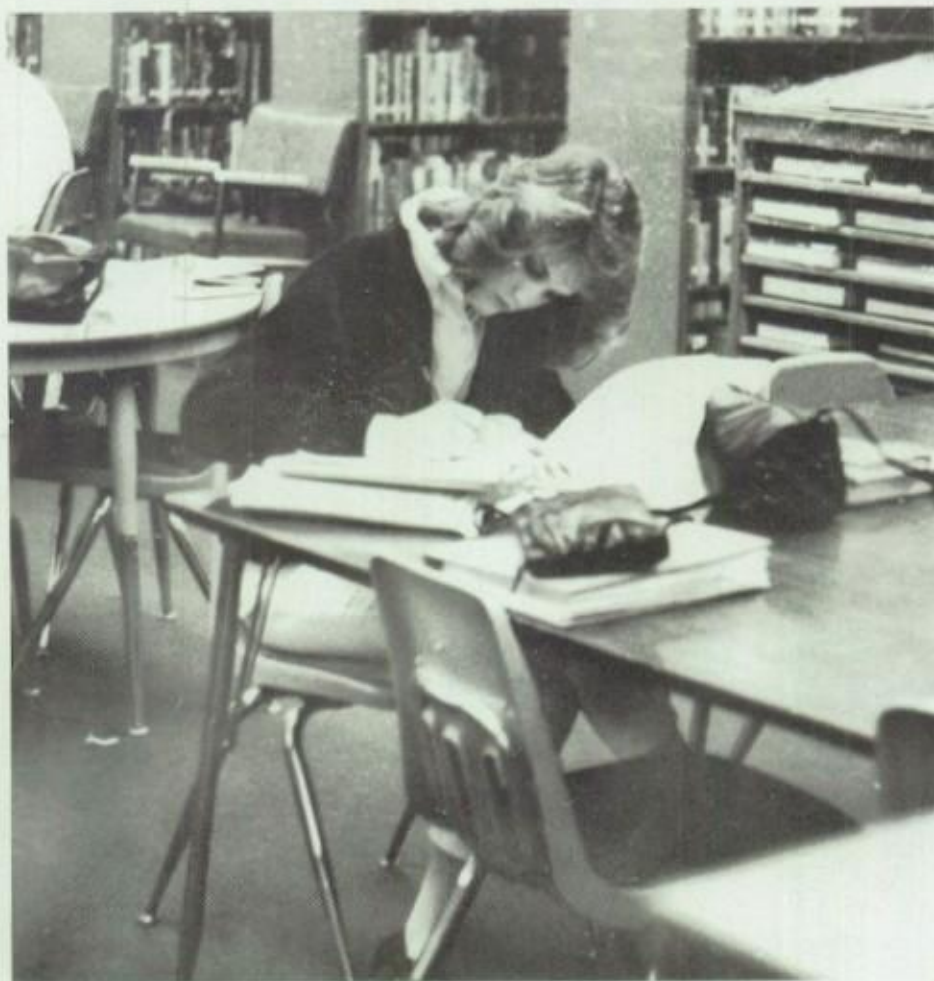

◀ Research engrosses Jim McGuire and Eddie Voss. Most junior and senior English classes require a research paper, as do many Social Studies classes.

◀ Using the Readers' Guide, Eric Willett checks on a magazine. Many magazines in our collection are on microfilm or microfiche.

▼ Mrs. Van Tassel helps a student to check out a book. Students can check out an unlimited quantity of books but must pay five cents a day if they are returned late.

▼ Business Skills materials surround Tami Roth as she studies in the library. Many use the library before and after school and during lunch to do homework.

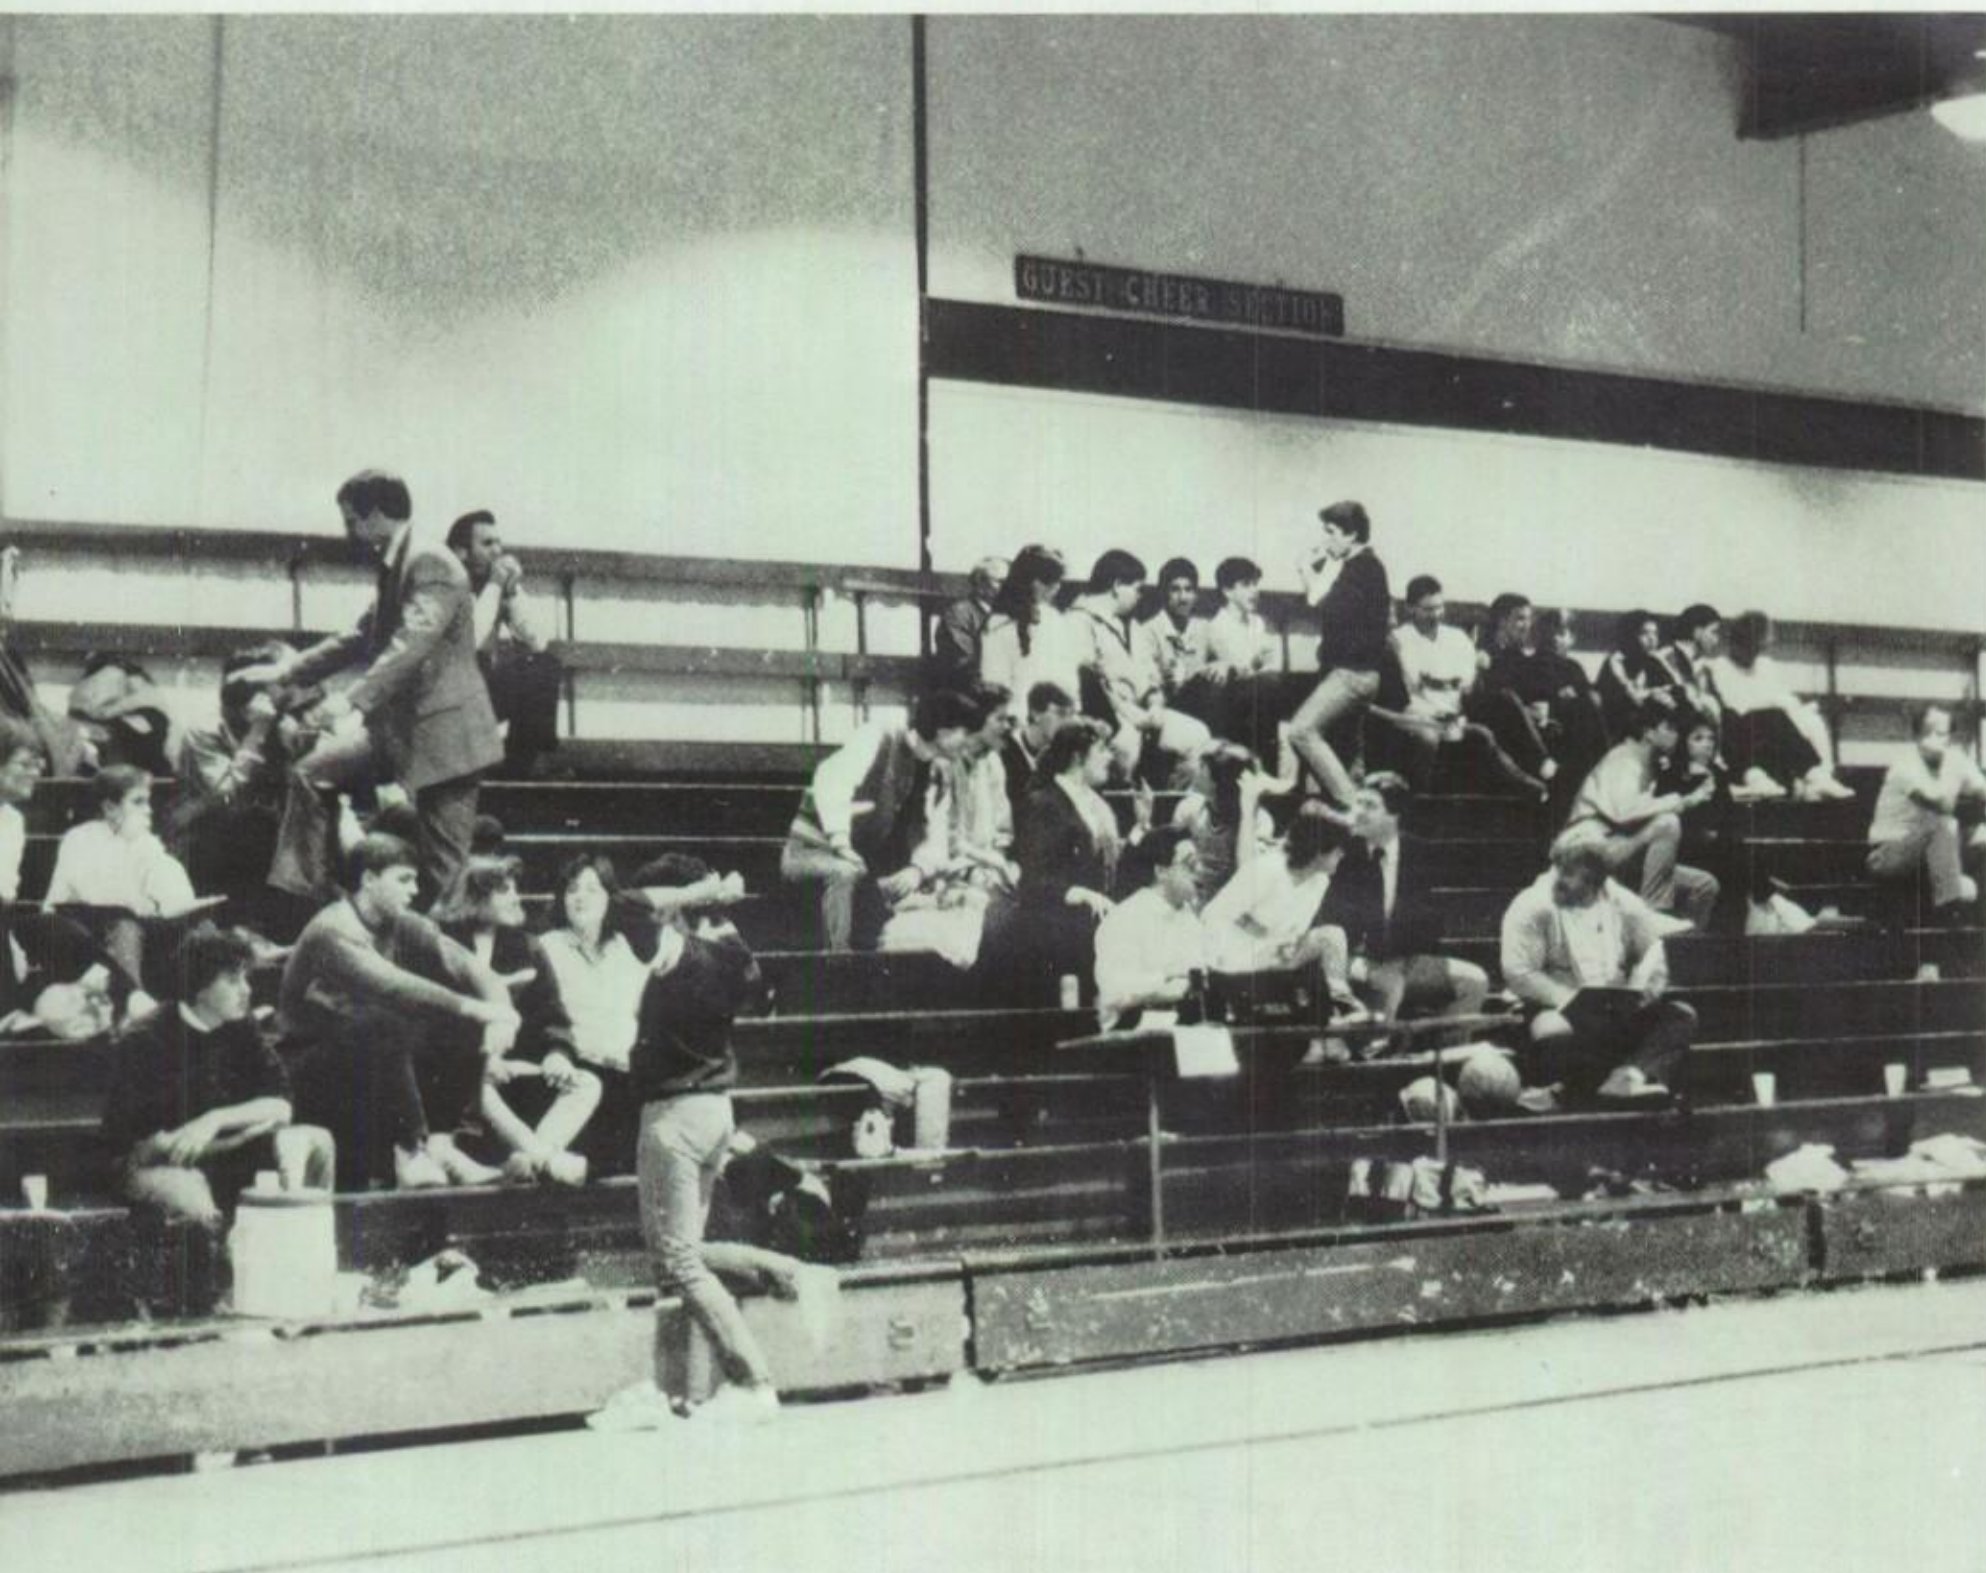

Crowd shows support

Credit is given to the players and coaches of sporting events, but one major group is usually overlooked: the spectators. Support at games is just as important as hours of practice to help an athlete perform at his best. Having on-lookers present to cheer them on has given many players the psychological edge needed to win. Whether they be little brothers or grandmothers, all those offering encouragement are welcomed whole-heartedly by the athletes.

Of course, not all spectators attend games out of pure team spirit. Many high-schoolers find sporting events a casual, entertaining place to socialize. Patty Whidby explains that games are a, "great place to meet people." Whatever the original motive for attending the event, team spirit usually pulls even strangers together and promotes unity and school pride.

◀ Observing a basketball game, Brad Halre and Erin Bailey enjoy the event. This poor attendance at this game is rare for boys' games although the girls do not draw as large crowds.

◀ Showing excitement, Josh Thorburn and fans show off their spirit during a wrestling match. Wrestling matches are a great place to meet people.

▲ Getting involved in a basketball game, spectators watch the Eagles beat Valhalla. The Eagles won 50-38.

Life's more than a beach

Summer is a time to relax and enjoy the sun. Most students anxiously await the time when they will be homework free and when they will be able to go to the beach. The beach, however, is not the only thing that students anticipate.

Summer activities also include "going to Mammoth," says Shari Pfuhl. "There's no snow, but the view from the top of the mountain is awesome." Students also find the time to go water-skiing, to go three-wheelin', and to travel.

Students also like to visit amusement parks at this time of the year. Magic Mountain, Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, and the San Diego Zoo are some of the many places to visit in the summer.

Besides having fun, many students face the necessity of working over the summer. The difficulty in holding down a job while school is in session prompts some students to earn the most possible at summer jobs. If successful, one can quit at the end of the summer and use the money throughout the school year.

Whatever a student plans for the summer, that final bell in June means one thing: freedom!

◀ Dan Barnes, Tiffany Selness, and Jim McMahon watch a volleyball game. The beach is a hot spot for many Granite Hills students.

▲ At the San Diego Zoo, Ellen Henderson and Gina Butts ride a turtle. Besides the beach, students also enjoy visiting various places of interest around San Diego County.

► Waving to his friends, Steve Swanson departs from a friend's house. During the summer, students like to hang out with friends.

Learning continues over the summer

Remember summer camp? You know, the camp Win-nemucka with the Olympic-sized swimming pool, the lake with the canoes, a bunch of eager counselors, and crafts where pinecone necklaces were made?

During the summer of 1985, quite a few students from Granite Hills attended various camps. They were not the traditional YMCA-style, however.

For instance, Brent Marquand, Andy Herold, David Hackett, and Les Shrum attended Waterpolo Camp at Pepperdine University. They learned new techniques and skills which helped them in the fall season. It was not just a lot of fun and games, however; they swam laps and did drills for nine hours a day! Our top polo players no doubt came home in better shape and more ready to compete this season.

Diane Eberle, the Granite Hills Band Drum major, went to a specialized camp this summer at UC Santa Barbara. What else, but Drum Major Camp? She was able to go through funds provided by the band and the band parents. There, she learned a great deal about being a drum major, like twirling a baton and starting and stopping the band when they are marching. It was "a lot of hard work," but it is demonstrated in the quality of the band this year.

Heidi Jensen, Kim Caffey, and Al Guerra attended Year-book Camp at the University of San Diego. At the workshop, sponsored by the Southern California Scholastic Publications Association, they learned new techniques in yearbooking. It was not all work, however; they were grateful for the opportunity to, "be with friends like Joni and Robert."

Steve Swanson, along with Mr. Wakefield and other members of ASB, participated in a camp this summer at UC Santa Barbara, sponsored by CASC, the California Association of Student Councils. While there, they learned such new procedures as how to organize their meetings and be more efficient.

Kim and Jeff Pulsipher, Pauline and David Leavitt, and Lara Poulson, traveled all the way to Utah this summer for a church-sponsored week at Brigham Young University. They attended classes on self-improvement, confidence, and dating. There were also three dances and many fun activities to help people get acquainted. This week, called Especially for Youth, was attended by 5,000 teenagers from all over the U.S. and Canada.

Elaine Harrison participated in a modeling workshop/camp this summer, at the John Robert Powers Agency every day for a month. She attended classes on self-confidence, posture, hair care and grooming, wardrobe planning, and color coordination. This informative camp was ended in an exciting way: A fashion show at U.T.C.!

Carla Cleeton went to an interesting camp this summer. Because she is the Tall Flags Captain in the marching band, she went to Tall Flags Camp at UC Santa Barbara. She was the only participant from Granite Hills to attend, so she had many chances to meet people and make a lot of new friends. She worked on routines and new drills for the flags. It was a lot of work, but she enjoyed it as "a new experience."

The Varsity and JV Cheerleaders attended Cheer Camp at SDSU for a week. They learned new dances, cheers, and chants that they are using this year. Tiffany Selness says that they "grew closer to each other," and "had a great time even though it was hard work."

So, what camp are you going to next summer? It is fortunate that there is such a wide variety of camps and workshops available for almost any interest.

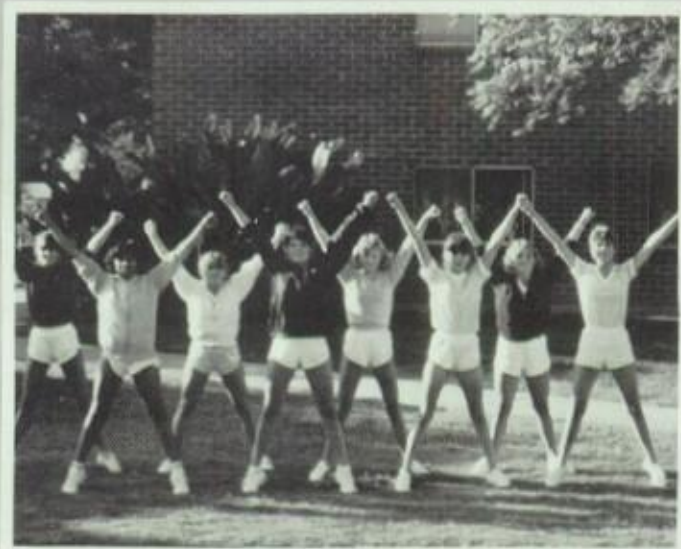

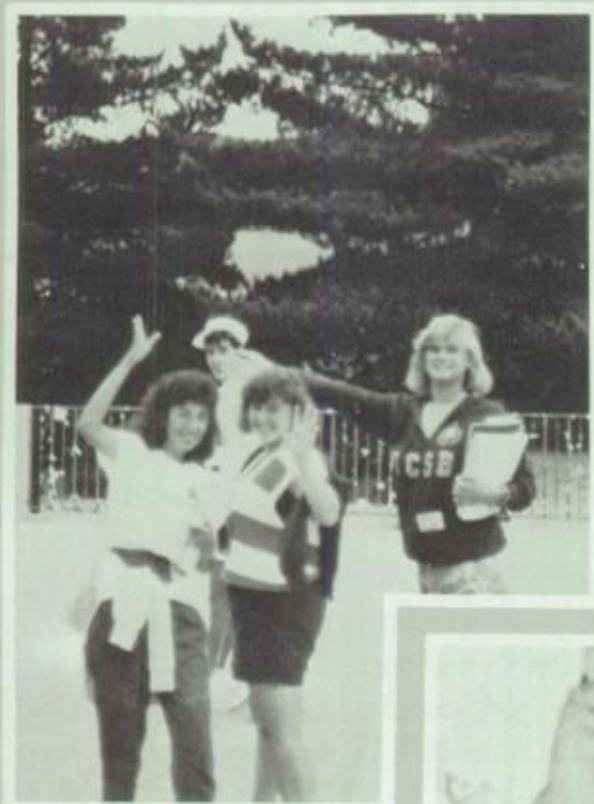

► Members of the ASB enjoyed attending leadership camp at UCSB. They returned to Granite Hills with a load of ideas for ASB.

► Carla Cleeton holds up her flag for all to see. She said Tall Flags Camp was hard work, but that it was also a good experience.

► Andy Herold, Les Shrum, Brent Marquand, and David Hackett relax by the ocean at Pepperdine University for Waterpolo Camp. The rest of the week was far from relaxing, however, as they practiced skills and swam laps for nine hours a day.

► Cheerleaders show their style at Cheer Camp. They won several awards for their skills.

Students take off on vacation

"What are you doing over the vacation?" This question is asked often by students when holidays are near. Whether it is a three-day weekend, two weeks, or three months, Granite Hills Students look forward to their time off from homework and studying.

A wide variety of activities are done over the vacations, ranging from water skiing, snow skiing, going to the beach, shopping, or just hanging out and sleeping in.

Although the summer vacation is the one most anticipated, many other breaks from school include Christmas, Thanksgiving, Easter, and many three-day weekends. April Butcher says she, "mostly spends time with her family," during vacations, and Elaine Harrison, "sleeps in and has fun." Whatever the occasion, students are always looking forward to the next break for relaxation and fun.

► Pam Baker and Bonnie Smith take it easy on their aqua-cycle at Lake Havasu. Water sports are favorite vacation activities.

► Les Shrum takes off on his three-wheeler on Thanksgiving vacation. Because the deserts are close, many students take advantage to have fun.

Born in I.S.A.

In School Assignment, more commonly referred to as "I.S.A.," has become a daily attraction at Granite Hills. Infractions of school rules can result in a visit to I.S.A. A bleak, depressing building, it is located near the football field, far from normal campus life. "Tickets" to I.S.A. can be earned by such offenses as smoking, displaying inappropriate conduct, or violating the "closed campus" policy. Myriads of students, upon returning to campus after a lunch-time run to Taco Bell, have been enthusiastically greeted by the welcoming committee of vice principals and supervisors. Kim Bars, former inmate of the program, feels that many students, "want to go off campus simply because it is against the rules."

As Jodi Cameron puts it, the worst part of I.S.A. is the fact that it is, "very boring." Sheer boredom has convinced many students to steer clear of I.S.A. Jodi spent her time doing homework and writing an essay on the cause of her sentence to "prison."

While many students are disgusted enough with I.S.A. to mend their ways, others decide that it is still worth the risk.

One day in I.S.A. — It's really quite a bore, Wasting away in I.S.A. I can't take it anymore —

Confined in a room of concrete so cold,
I'd say this *!%? is getting old!

Trapped in a room of grey and blue,
What is a person supposed to do?
It's driving me crazy counting these bricks, entertaining the mind to get my kicks,
I guess I have some homework to do, but then again that's nothing new.

So here I sit, doing my time.
Why am I here? What was my crime?
I got busted going out to lunch,
Taco Bell's my mid-day munch.
Upon my return who should I see,
but good ole' Mr. Larivee.

"Hi there ladies," he said with a smile,
"I hope that trip was worth your while."
Then those dreaded words I heard him say,
"You've got one day in I.S.A."

by Trisha Venard

► Students attending I.S.A. sit, facing forward. Breaching this rule earns the student another day in I.S.A.

► In I.S.A. students are required to do homework and an essay. Magazines are not allowed, but many find ways to sneak them in.

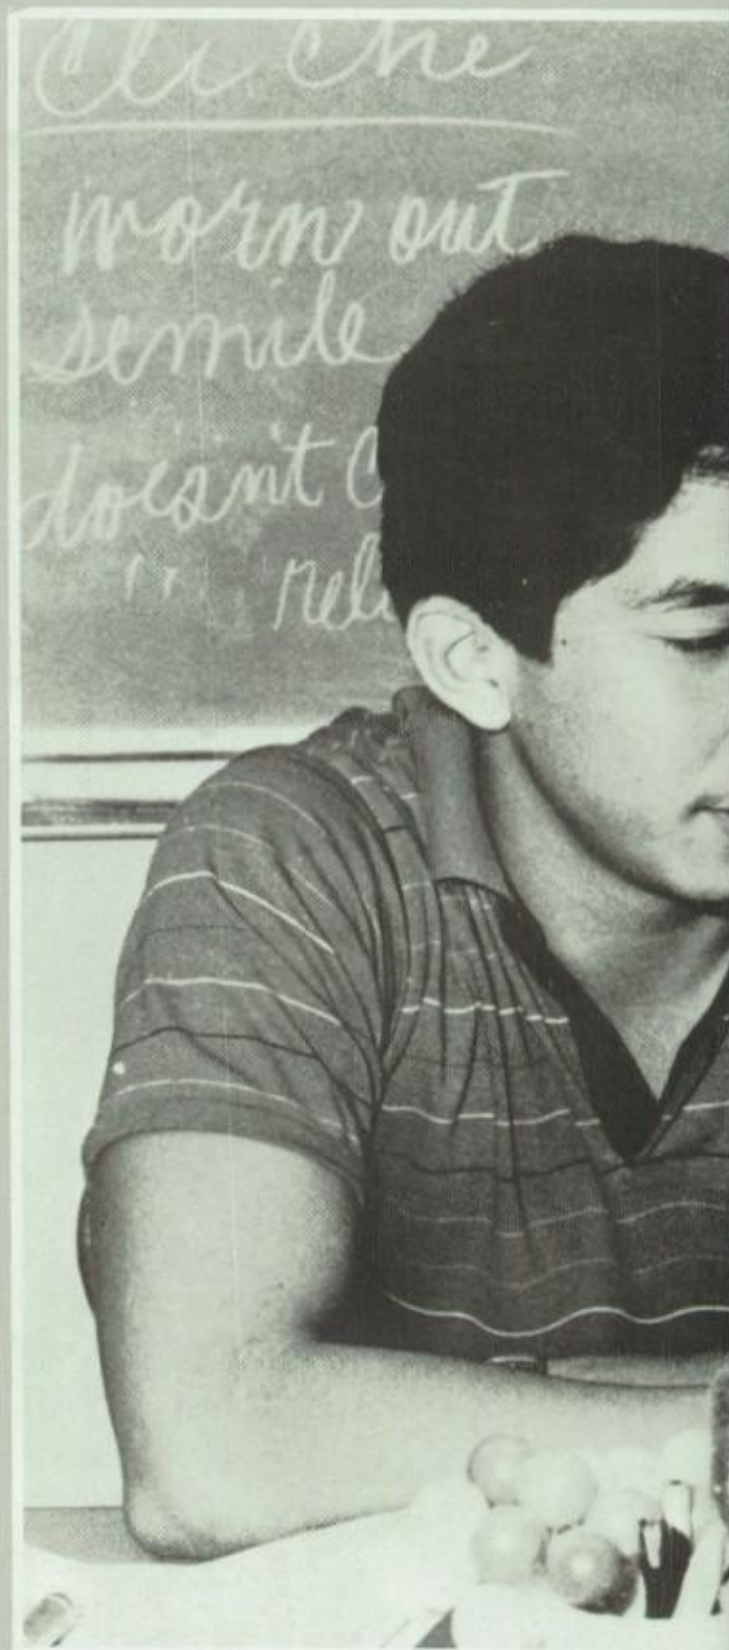

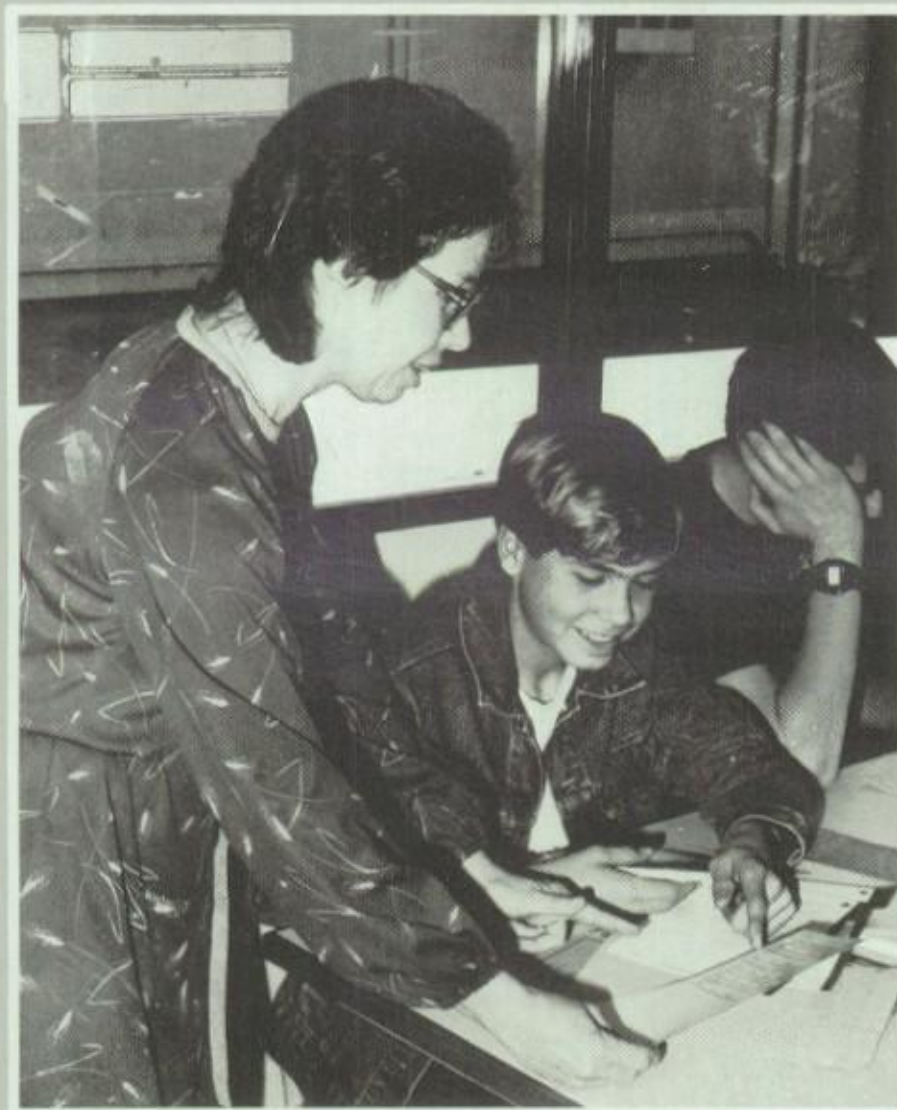

Academic bound

Education is necessary for all people who want to succeed in life. Thus, Academics plays a major role in the developing of students. Since all students have different needs, each department provides different levels to adjust to the students' ability to learn. Two major divisions in the Academic system of Granite Hills are the Social Science and English departments.

Three and one half years of Social Sciences are required for graduation. In these courses, the student obtains a better understanding of Geographic facts, of significant events in History, of political and economic issues, and of the importance of the family and personal worth. Basically, these classes, "gear the students to know where they come from and where they are going in a complex world," stated Mr. Williams, chair of the Social Science Department.

This year, students are required to have taken three years of English in order to graduate. The class of 1988, however, will be required to take four years of English. Understanding the English language is important because without comprehending the basic skills of English a student is unlikely to succeed.

While some students bemoan the hours of homework now, most students will realize that the knowledge gained is invaluable.

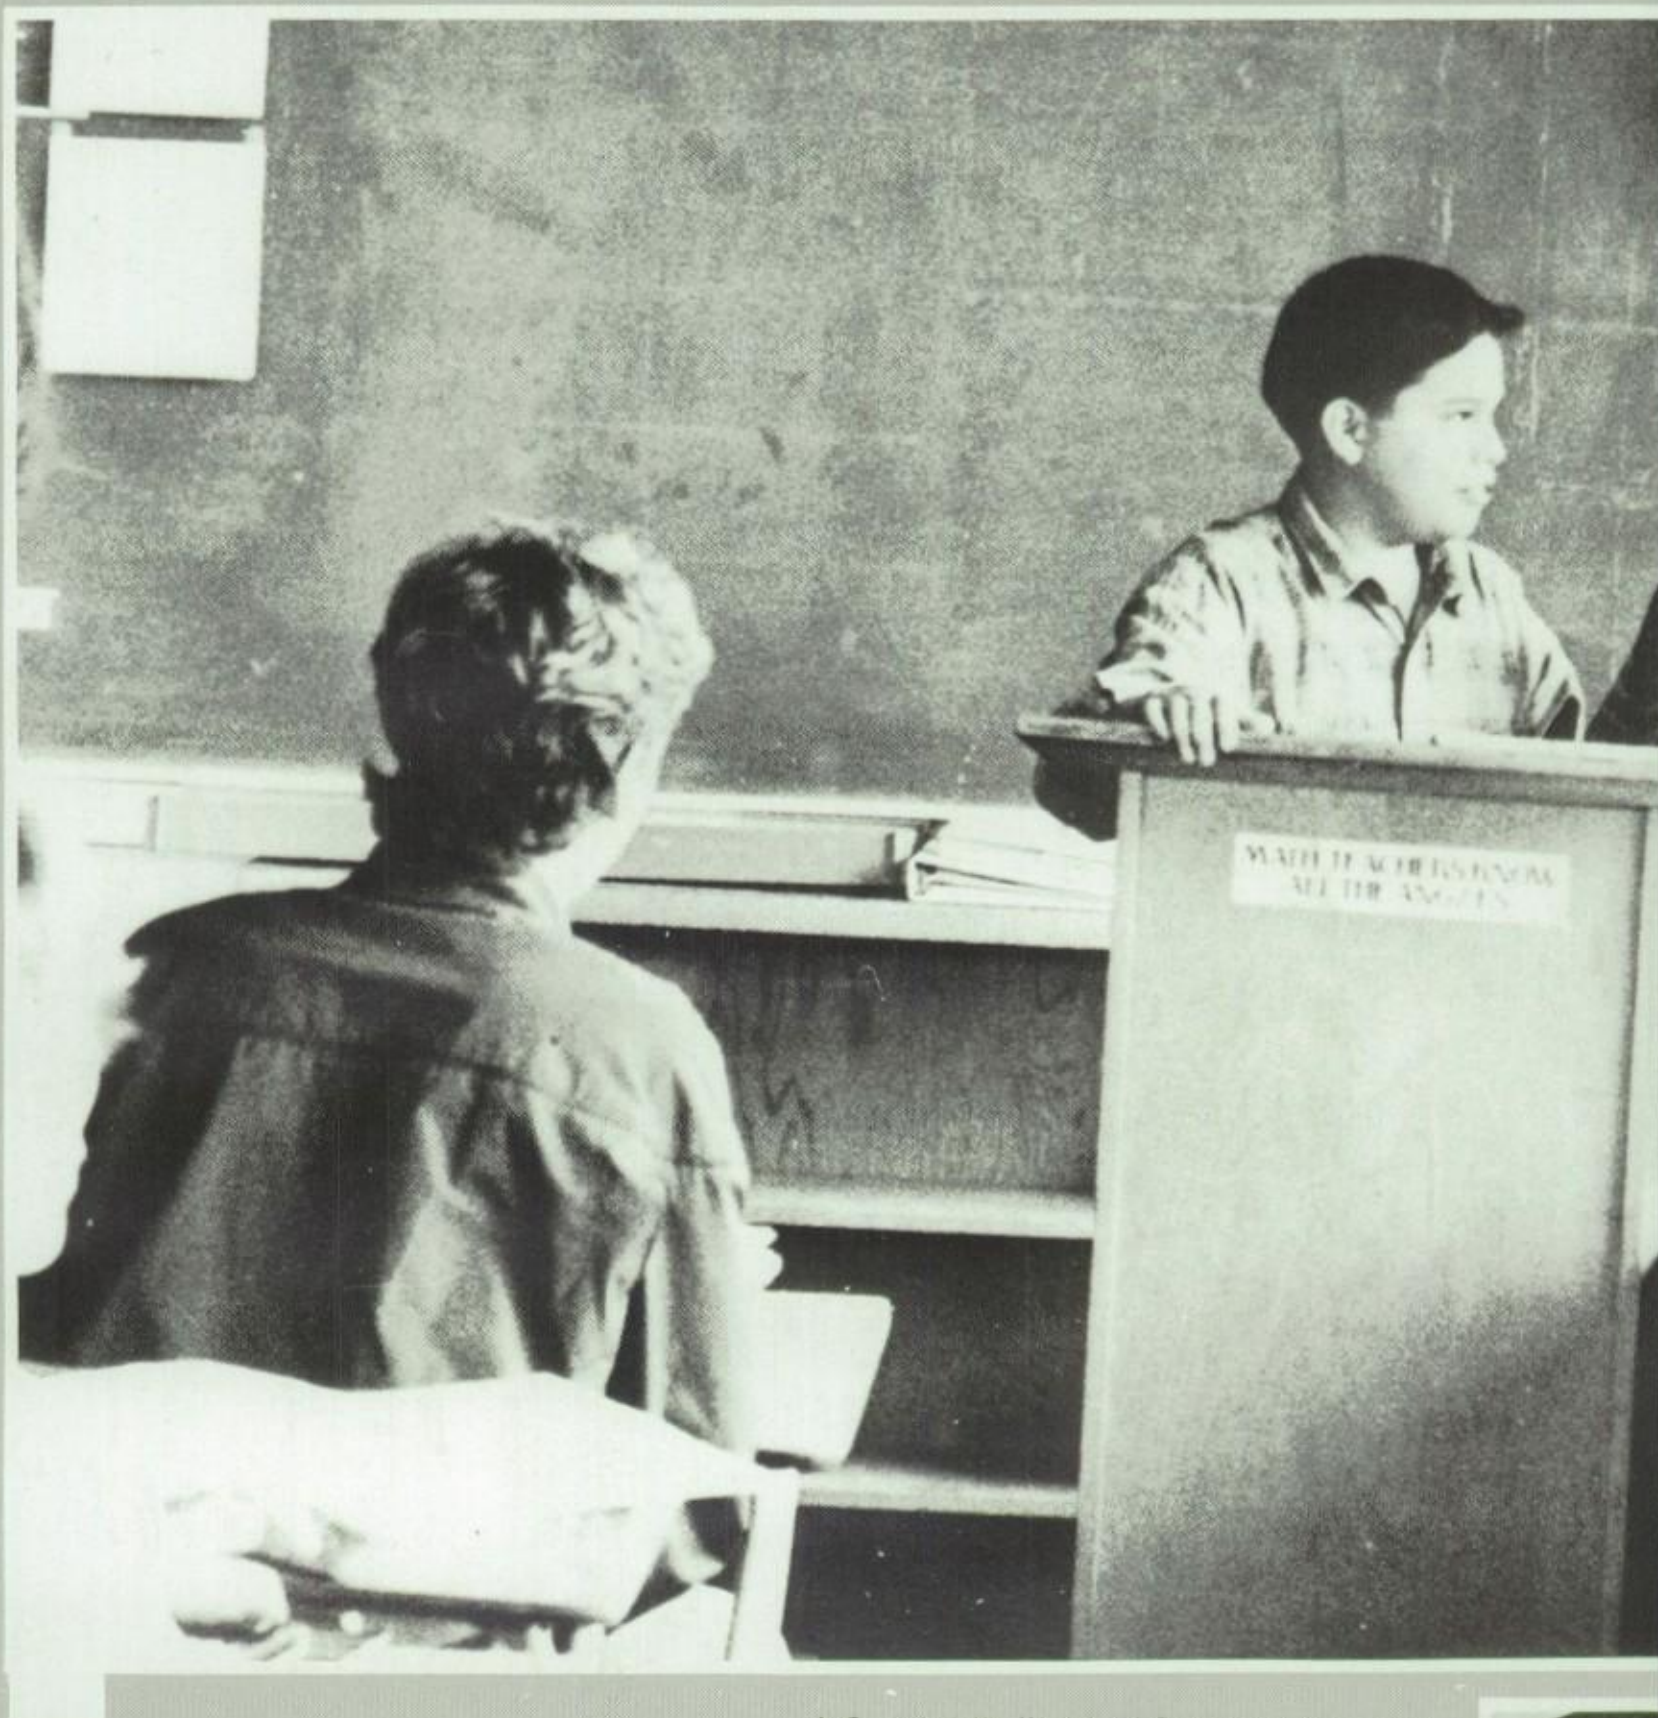

▲ Mrs. Huffman explains to Robby Santos exactly what she expects on an essay. Essays make up the major part of many English grades.

◀ Passing back a worksheet, Mrs. Fitzgerald commends Robby Wilson on his grade. Teachers like to encourage students on their progress.

◀ Senior Ted Decoteau listens while Mr. Williams explains a Freudian Concept. Freud, Skinner, and Rogers are the three major psychologists studied in Psychology.

▲ Opposing Mr. Hauser, Al Guerra argues his point. Teachers enjoy opposition because it shows interest in the subject.

► Observing her progress, Mr. McAdams suggests a new technique to Laurie Kantor. Math teachers prepare students adequately for life skills.

► Disecting Kermit the frog. Mr. Schimpf shows Nike Potter a new skill. One year of Biology is required for graduation.

School prepares

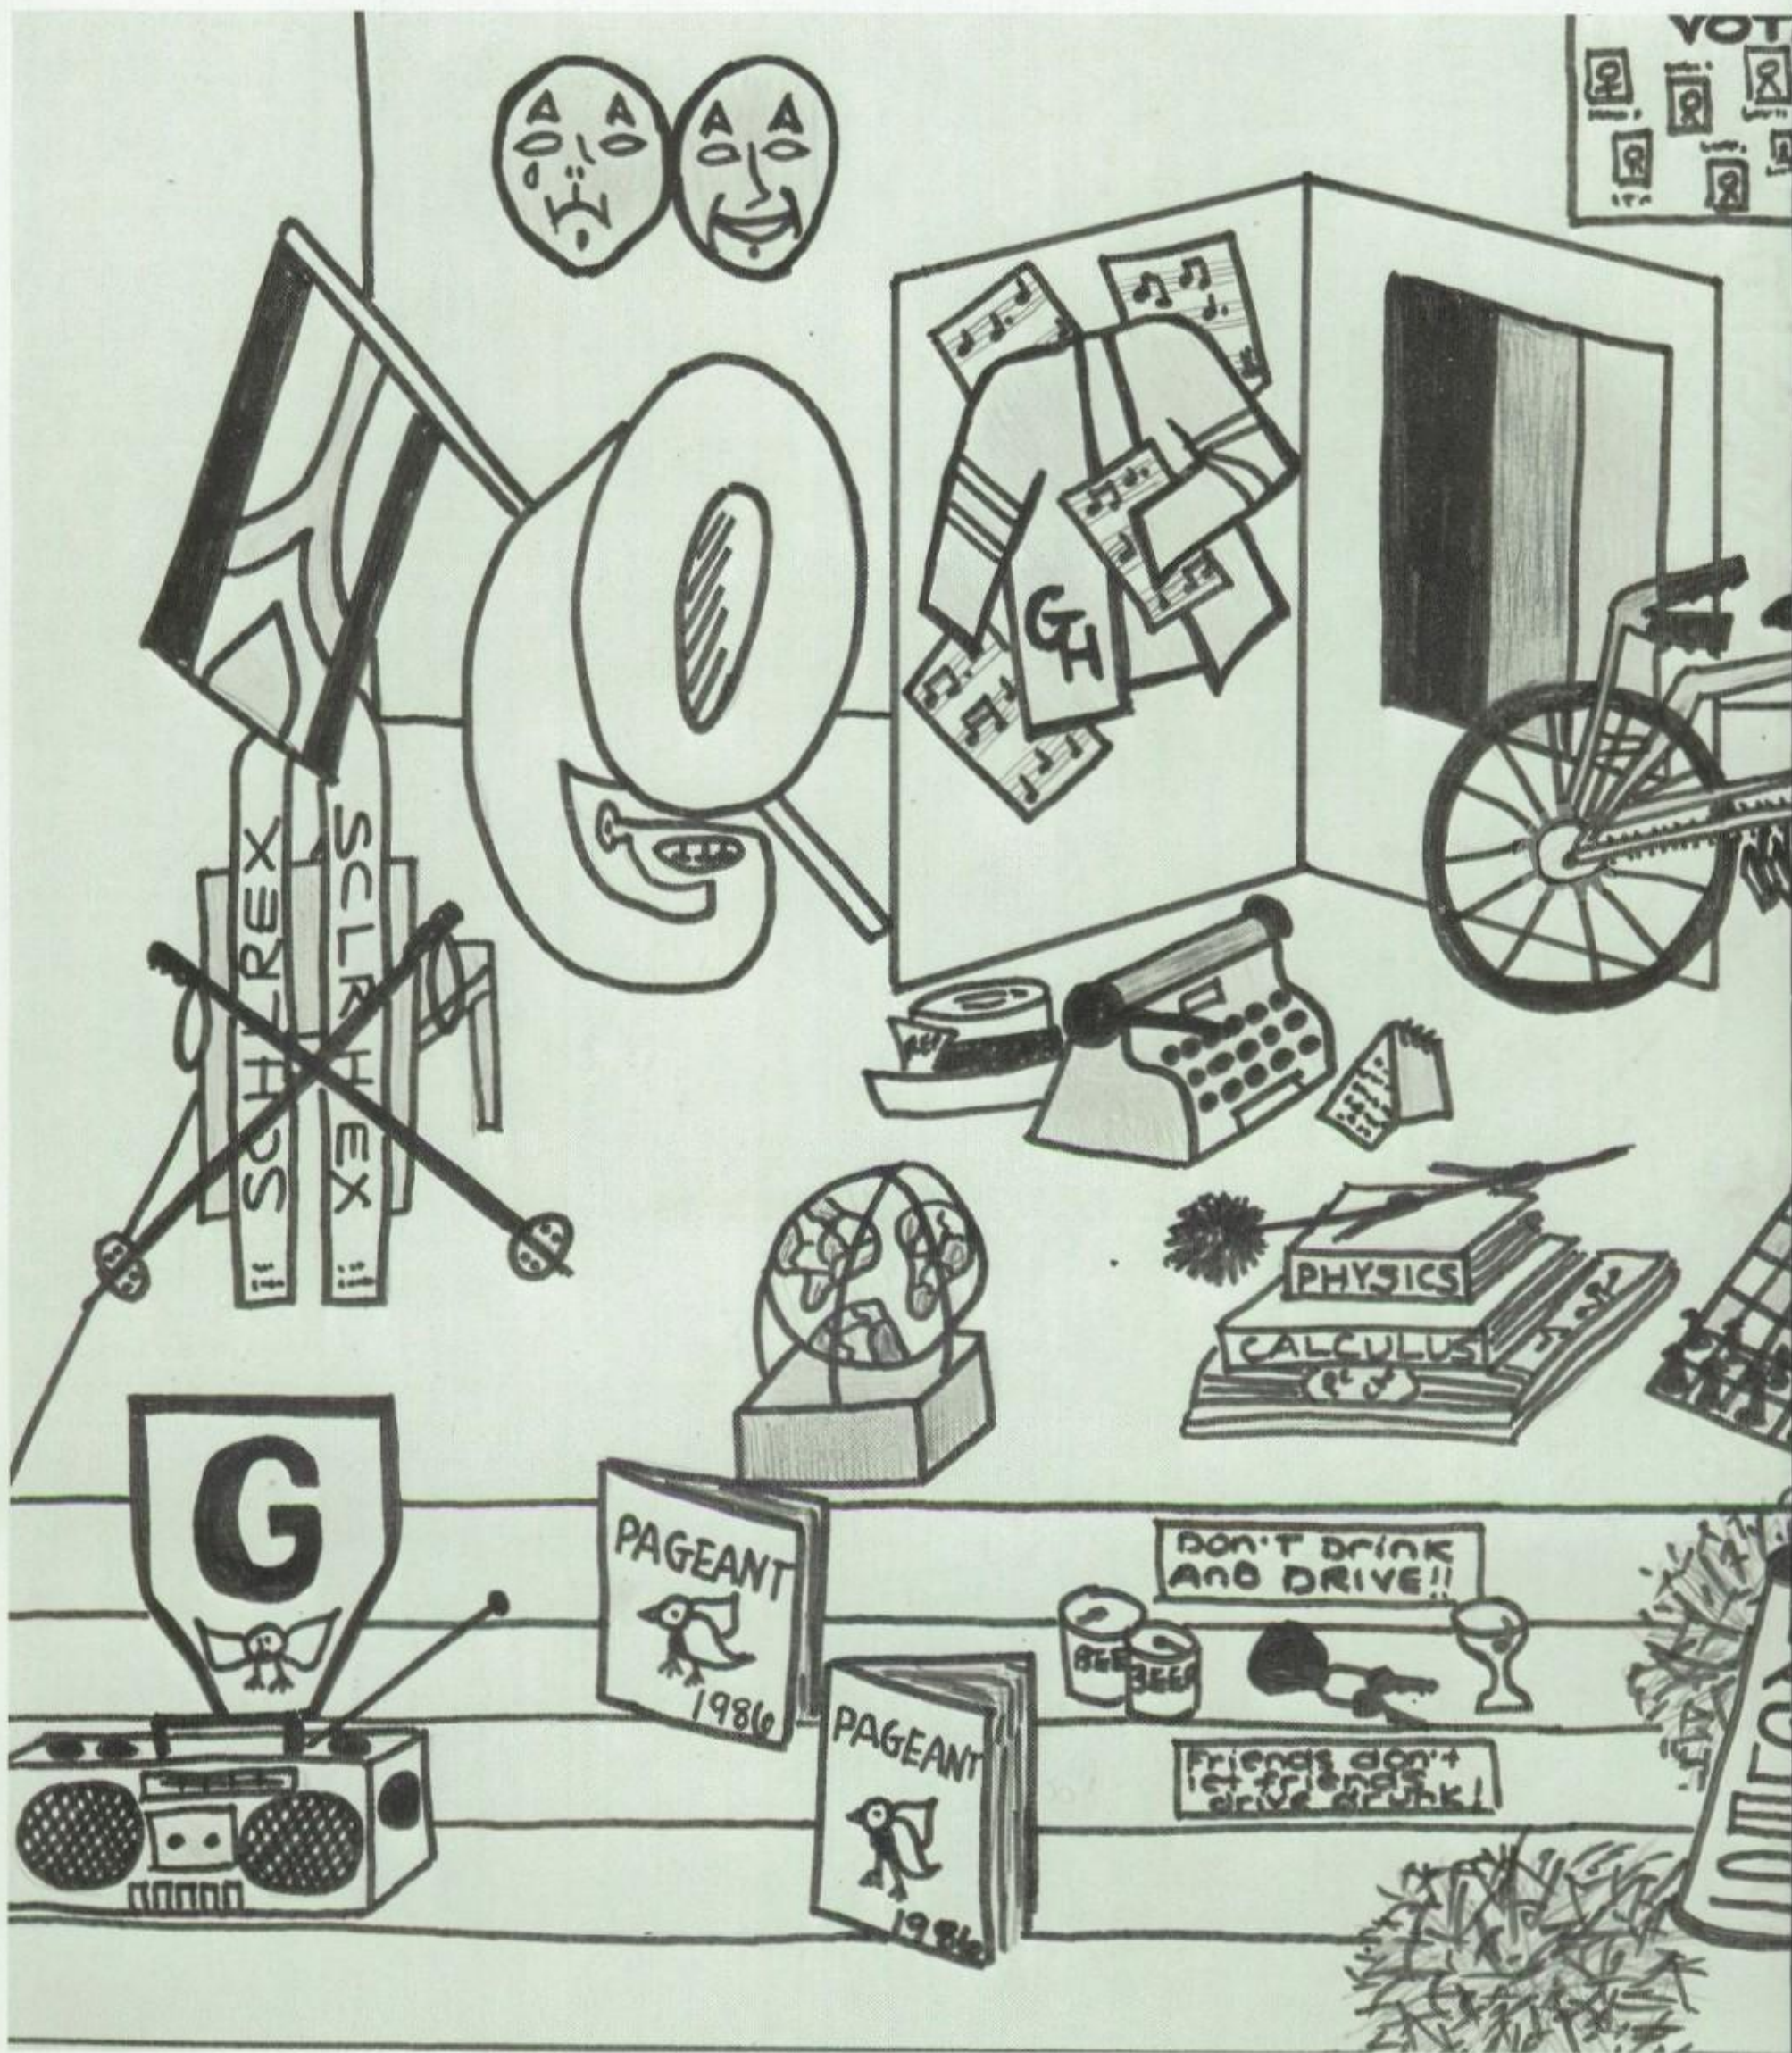

Contrasting to English and Social Studies, the math and science departments equip students with technical skills. Both departments offer a wide variety of classes to suit individual tastes.

The graduation requirement for Math at this point is two years, but in 1988, graduates must have taken three years. Students at Granite Hills show an interest in mathematics, for eighty percent of the student body takes math classes all four years. Mr. McAdams, chair of the Math department, is pleased with the math department because "the teachers challenge the students and at the same time give them a better understanding of math concepts."

At the present time, only one year of science is required for graduation. Again, classes range greatly in content and difficulty. As college requirements become increasingly more stringent, many students are voluntarily taking several more years of science.

While graduation requirements are not yet difficult, student interest has filled the many classes.

The result is beneficial

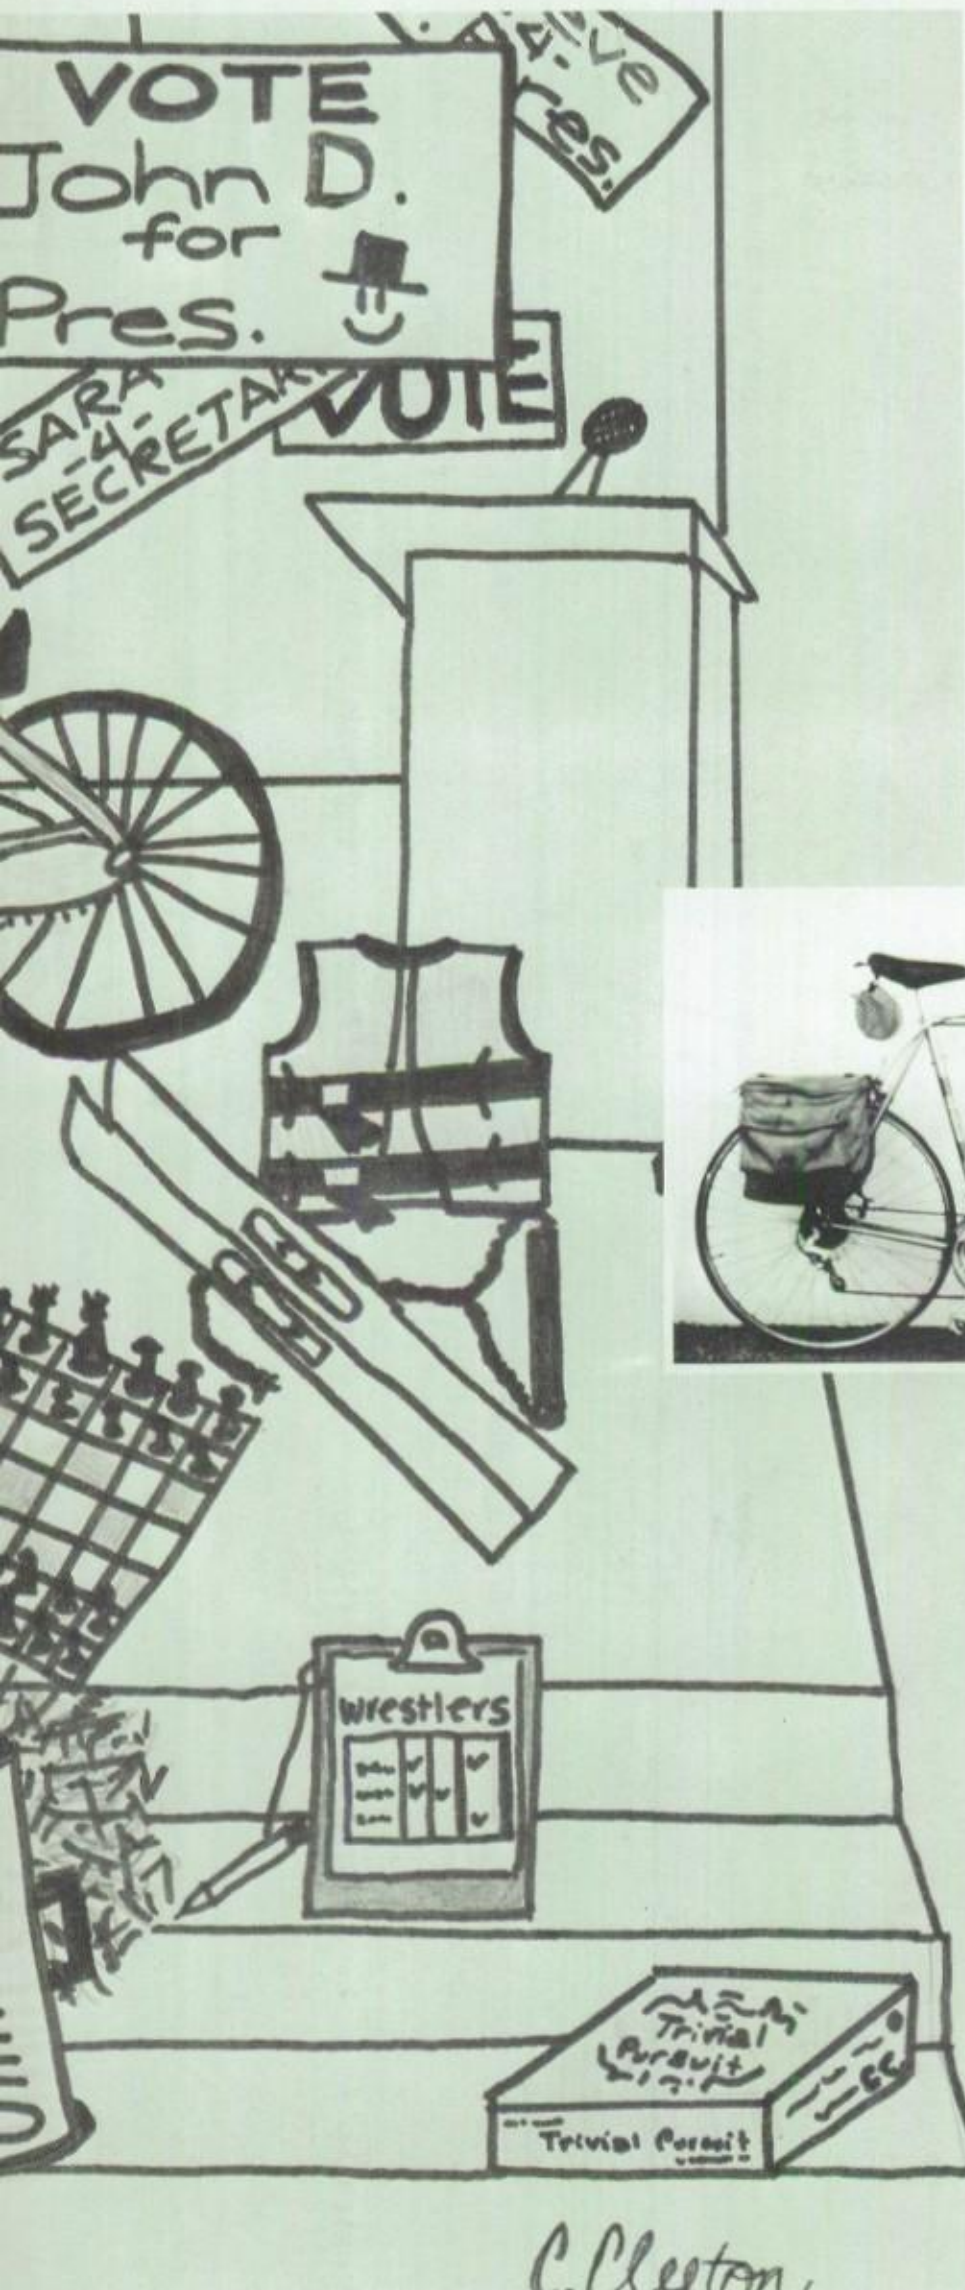

The idea of sitting in a classroom for approximately six hours a day, going home, doing homework, watching television, and then going to bed is too dull for many students at Granite Hills. That's why these students are taking a byte out of life by becoming involved in one or more of the twenty clubs sponsored by our school. Besides promoting school spirit and generating enthusiasm, clubs provide experiences which will help the participating students after graduation from high school.

The popularity of different hobbies have sparked the formation of several new clubs this year, including a Chess Club, a Bike Club, and even a Water-Ski Club. Members of these new clubs have the enthusiasm necessary to make them last, unlike other clubs that have disappeared from campus this year.

Several clubs have joined the latest craze of "computer-mania." The Clarion has become more efficient and easier to produce with its new computer. Choir students are learning to read music with a program on the computer purchased last year. Even the newly formed Chess Club has found computers to be challenging opponents.

Each morning, bulletin announcements advertise dates, times, and places of different club meetings or activities. It usually takes a personal invitation, however, to get new people to show up at a meeting. This year, ASB organized Rush Week, which provided the interested clubs an opportunity to publicize their club at lunch and extend personal invitations to other students. Clubs that took part in Rush Week enjoyed it and also noticed an increase of membership.

Lights, camera, action . . .

The Granite Hills Acting Workshop, more commonly known as the G.H.A.W., saw a record number of underclassmen this year. These freshmen and sophomores exhibit a great deal of potential talent. Underclassmen welcomed the new members heartily. The workshop organized an annual breakfast to welcome all new-comers. The officers cook the meal, and veteran members bring more food to add to the festivities.

The older members do tend to have a playfully cruel sense of humor, however. They give ominous warnings about the "induction ceremony," which will initiate the first-timers into the zany club. In dubious fear, they await their initiation. No casualties were reported, however, and the new-comers are alive and well.

Together, the group undertook a new adventure this year. Their efforts in a cave room at Scream in the Dark earned them a fifty dollar prize. Brad Thompson, president of the group, recalls that, "It was great! We worked together with a great deal of teamwork," but adds that, "the room seemed to smell like dirty socks!"

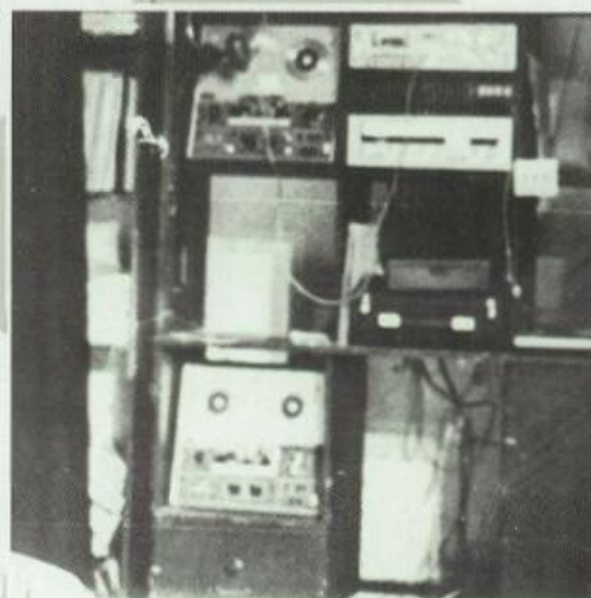

Traditionally, the workshop presents three plays per year: one comedy, one drama, and one musical. The three productions chosen for this year were The Importance of Being Earnest, The Mad Woman of Chaillot, and The Pirates of Penzance.

◀ Jeannette Thomas, Dianne Goulart, and Ron Collie eat their lunches out behind the theater. Often members eat "out back" when the drama room is closed.

▲ Gira Bolistreri is this year's Toby the mime. She puts on a pantomime before each play to set the mood.

Due to the number of younger performers, many roles were played by younger actors and actresses. Granite Hills has high hopes for the talented underclassmen. Sonrisa Palmer, Senior, voices the widely-held feelings: "There is a great deal of talent in the underclassmen, and I believe they have a lot of potential. Just as important are the new friendships formed in G.H.A.W.: 'We're like a big family.'" ◀ Sonrisa Palmer (Gwendolyne) and Chris Bain (Ceily) hug to seal a new friendship. This was the first play of the year put on by G.H.A.W.

Foreign friends gained

The International Club is a great place to meet the five Granite Hills exchange students and become friends with them. President Paula Carter says, "Clubs like this open doors to world-wide friendship and peace."

This year the I-Club has been active. In addition to the numerous meetings they've had this year, they have also had a Christmas party, a barbeque, a jacuzzi party, and a Sees candy sale. Planned for the second half of the year are a car wash, a carnation sale, a trip to Magic Mountain, and a beach party.

Club meetings are held every other week at different members' houses. At these meetings, they plan their activities and discuss upcoming events; even more importantly, the meetings are the perfect setting for new friendship to grow. The exchange students are also given the opportunity to make a presentation and answer questions about their own countries, thus helping to bridge the cultural gap.

Winning brings joy

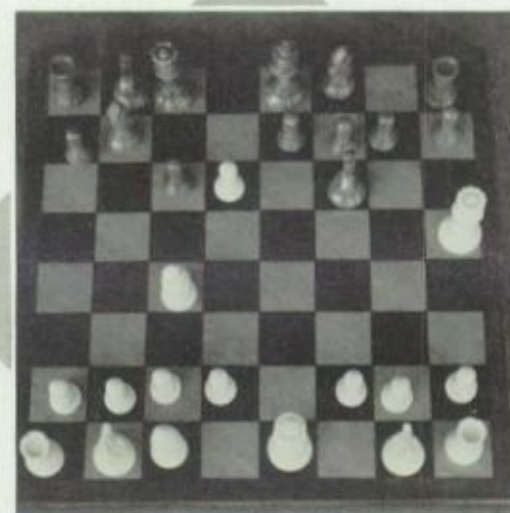

"We even have to come to school in August to go through Hell Week," complain the football players. But their season is nothing compared to that of the Speech Team. Not only does each team member compete in several of the eight competitive areas, but many also enter individual contests for money and scholarships. And the season? It lasts from September through June, with all matches either after school or on weekends. The league that our school competes in is huge (around forty schools from all over San Diego and Imperial Counties), so travel to events is not merely across the freeway or even across the city. Often they have to travel half-way across the state.

Similarly tied to a long season, the chess Club meets every noon in Mr. MacRostie, their advisor's room, for strictly individual contests with no prizes but the satisfaction of winning. Some even play against Sargon, the computer, who usually wins. Often, the club will hold tournaments between themselves in order to decide who will be named "Chess Master" of the school. The Chess Master then travels to other schools in hopes of becoming "Supreme Chess Master." This is an honor only a few can win.

► Speech Team Members: Advisor, Mr. Ward; Greg Campanella, Scott Zenor, Raffy Kaloustian, Ann Hammi, Carolyn Sprague, Marci Kevane, Marian Bloom, Alice Shepard.

Mr. White and Robert Joseph concentrate heavily on their chess game. Chess is known as "the sport of kings."

All of the members of the Chess Club fight vigorously towards becoming the "Chess-master." The Chess Club is an extremely competitive club.

Decathlon and Superstar Teams Shine

"I was so nervous waiting for the personal interviews to begin," Laura Barton replied, expressing all the participants' feelings that day. On Saturday, November 16, forty-nine county high schools participated in the national Academic Decathlon competition. Granite Hills High was one of the nine Grossmont High Schools.

Decathlon members spent five months and many hours preparing for this day-long competition. Each of the eight students were tested in the following areas: fine arts, language, math, science, social science, economics, essay writing, prepared speech, impromptu speech, interview, and a college-bowl type competition. The subject of the speeches, the essay, and the super quiz was immigration.

"It was hard to believe that the day had finally come. We worked so hard to prepare for today, and in my opinion it really paid off," Sonrisa Palmer said. All the members admitted that the waiting, anticipating, sweating, and even the testing was an experience they will never forget.

Out of 40 schools, our team finished in tenth place.

For the first time this year Granite Hills also participated in the KGTU Channel 10 Scholastic Superstars Competition. Vivian Chow, Brent Marquand, Daren Atkinson, Matt LaRochelle, and Tim Leonard formed the Granite Hills team. They reached the quarter finals by beating Valhalla and the semi-finals. In the semi-finals the team was defeated, but their earnings totaled $500 overall.

Radio Club Has the Beat

Most students are aware that the Radio club plays the popular music in the quad every school day before school and during lunch, but few know of its activities at other schools. Many junior high schoolers, however, know of the Granite Hills Radio Club, because this nine-member club organizes and entertains at junior high dances.

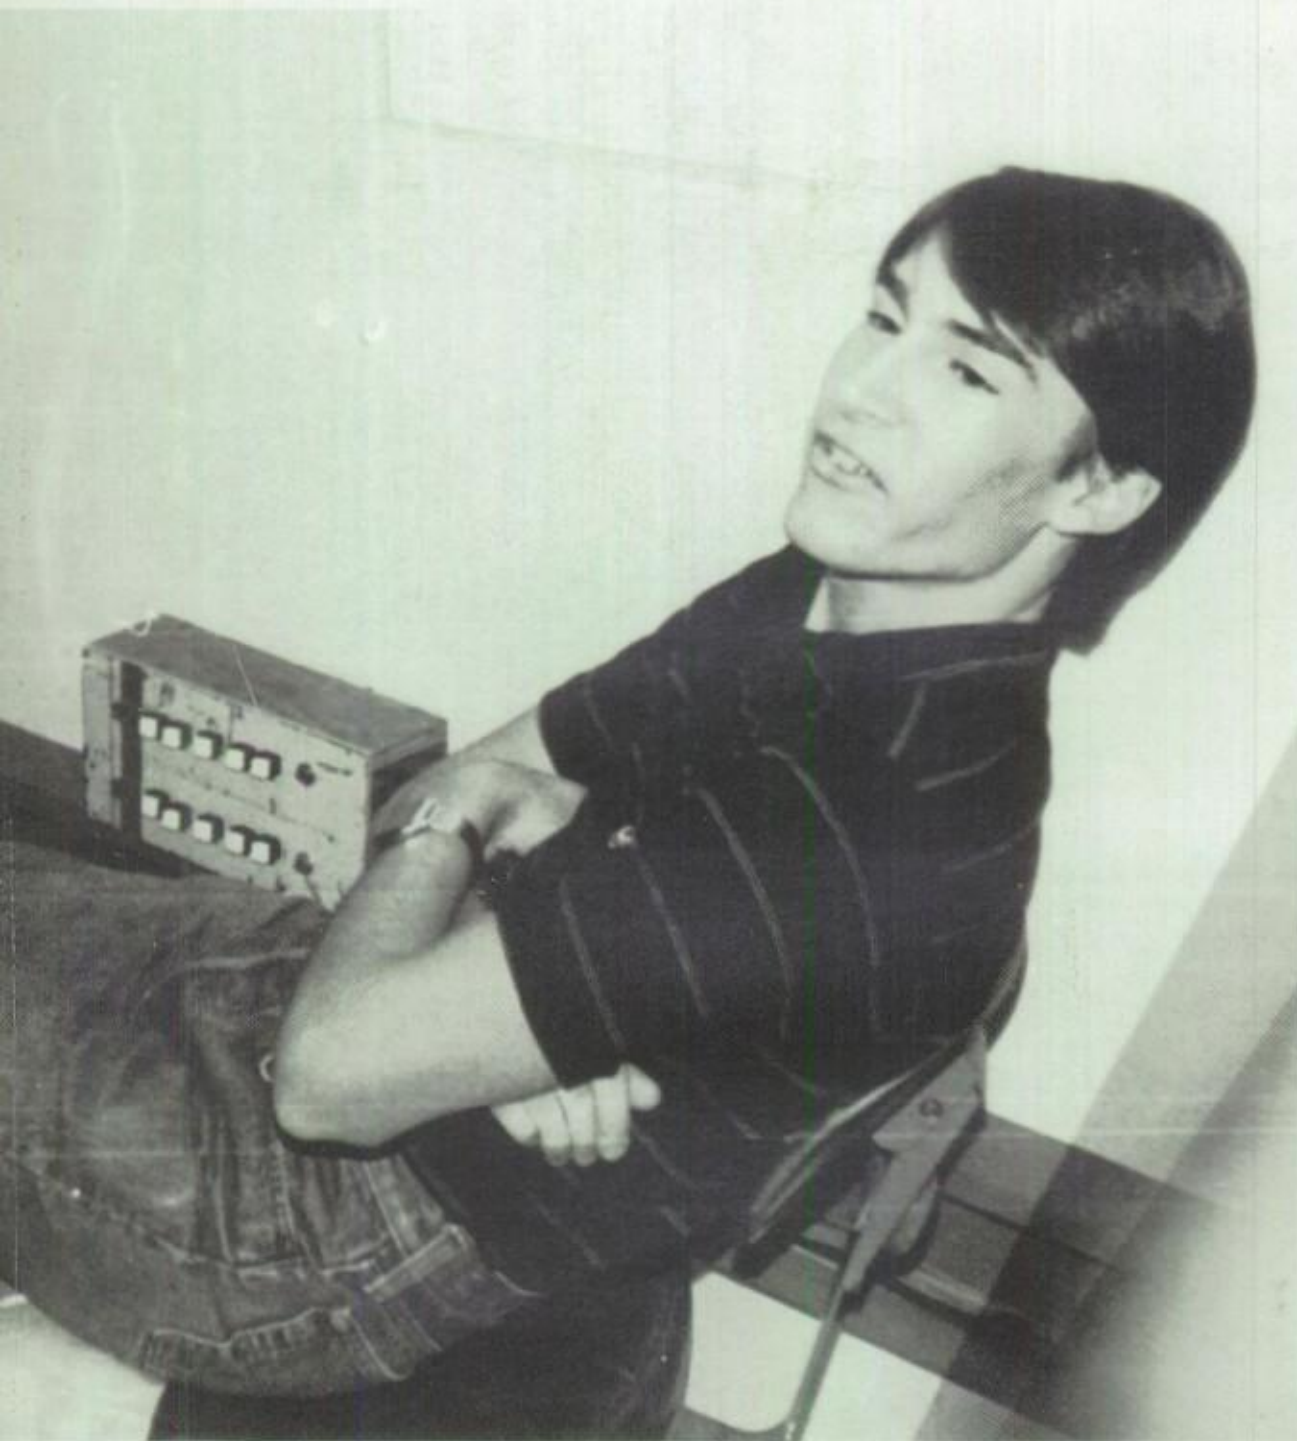

Chip Jones, president of the club, feels that "the dances are the best part of being in the Radio Club." The members of the club are learning valuable social and vocational skills while having fun.

▲ Mr. Green supervises Jack Smith's work on the turntable. Every day at noon, the Radio Club broadcasts to the quad from this room.

► Ken Bolton tests the dance equipment for an upcoming dance. The equipment consists of two turntables, a tape player, and a graphic equalizer.

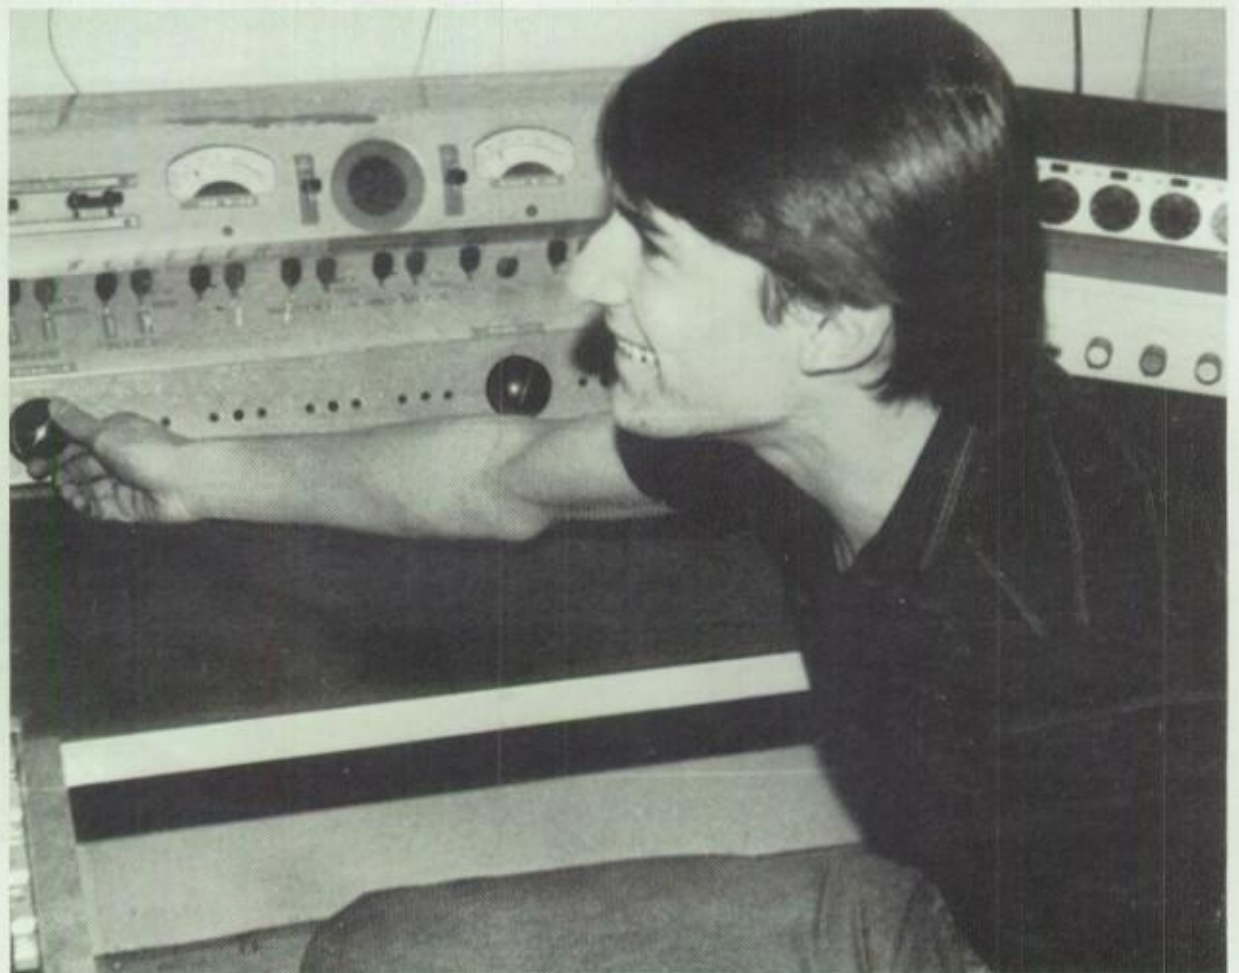

◀ Dennis Wahlgreen relaxes between songs. The room is so small that only one broadcaster could be in it at a time.

▼ Mr. Green, the club supervisor, stands with some of his older equipment he has gathered over the years. It used to be used when he had a functional radio station.

Club Feasts on Heritage

If one is interested in a club in which eating and socializing are the main activities, he should try joining the German Club. The German Club not only furthers education in this language, but also enables members to learn more about the German culture and traditions. Most of the German Club's activities consist of parties, where members are able to feast on a variety of German dishes. At the end of each year, the German Club gathers at a local, authentic German restaurant in order to receive a real taste of the native culture. One member, Heidi Fanslau, stated that, "German Club parties are a lot of fun. We get to try different kinds of German food and there aren't many clubs on campus like this one." This year's officers are President, Chip Joes; Vice President, Jeff Denherder; Secretary, Wayne Hickey; and Treasurer, Joe Jones.

Roads Attract Attention

Most students have seen SADD members wearing their T-shirts on Friday to promote awareness of alcohol abuse. SADD does much more, however, behind the scenes. Holly Thomas, president, calls SADD a "caring organization." The club's main objective is to increase awareness of the dangers involved in driving drunk.

SADD members speak to junior high students as well and participates in Drug Prevention Week at local junior highs.

Another little known-endeavor of SADD's is their help at El Cajon's "Safe Rides" program. SADD raised money by washing cars last spring.

They also put on an Awareness Day right before the Senior Prom. The entire school participated in the assembly, which included drunk driver victims and Air Watch's Monica Zeck. Throughout the day, smaller groups met with individual speakers to discuss the tragedy of drunk driving and to air some solutions. Particularly noteworthy was Mr. Rice, who became a paraplegic when a friend who was drunk drove his truck off a mountain road.

There were no major accidents due to drunk driving on Prom Night, so SADD's 1985 Awareness Day goal was met.

Mrs. Rice, the organizer of the SADD chapter here was transferred to Santana, but Mr. Schimpf has taken over and plans for an active year for SADD in 1986.

Roads and highways are also the focus of the Cycling Club, new this year on our campus. According to president Jeff Pulsipher, the club was organized by him and some friends who have been cycling for a number of years and wanted to plan more rides for fun with other schools.

Their first semester included a trial ride to Cottonwood from El Cajon, and the club plans an average of two fairly long rides a month. Over Easter, they may ride from Yuma to El Cajon, and the club has a 70-mile road trip from Warner Springs to Aqua Caliente and perhaps onto Ocorillo slated for January.

Jeff stresses the "fun" angle of the rides. No one is racing or trying to outdo anyone else. Although most members are seasoned cyclers with tour bikes, and have trained for the long rides, he believes that anyone in fairly good shape would enjoy their leisurely rides through small towns and scenic back-areas of the southwest.

The fun includes regular stops at campgrounds for food and drinks as well as time to socialize.

So that everyone can enjoy themselves without worrying about mechanical problems or injuries, parents in vans ride along to assist in the usual problems of flat tires and to carry the food and drinks so the bikers don't need to carry packs.

Band's on the Move

"Good evening. I'd like to call your attention to the football field where the band and Colorguard are now going to perform their halftime show. Tonight's numbers include..." For most people, at football games, halftime means "time to go to the bathroom," or "time to go to the snack bar." But for the band and Colorguard, halftime is time for them to show the product of their hard work.

Before this year, the Marching Band was known as a "street" band. This meant that they only competed in parades. Mr. Magaña, the new director, changed that. He added several field competitions to their schedule this year. Field competitions are a greater challenge than street, but the students accepted the challenge. They dominated the San Dieguito Field Tournament by winning two Sweepstakes trophies.

This year's Colorguard was an inexperienced group, with only six girls returning from last year, but they didn't let their inexperience slow them down. They placed second at their first competition and later placed first in the Oceanside Parade. The flags also experienced a change this year: Their season was longer than in previous years. Their first performance was at "Howdy Day" and their last was at a basketball game in January. Fourth year member Kelly Shirer said, "This was the best year yet. We've done better this year than we every have!"

▲ Bea Vedavato, Sherry Ribas, and Cheryl Ray pose with Pluto at Disneyland. The band had free time after their parade to enjoy the park.

► Carla Cleeton, Bea Vedavato, Harold Cleeton, Vicki Barker, Diane Eberle, and Dan Arenda proudly display their two Sweepstakes trophies. The band won both of these trophies at the San Dieguito Field Tournament.

▲ Colorguard members relax after a performance. They practiced long and hard for each competition.

◀ The band and Colorguard stand in formation while performing a field show. This year the majority of their performances were field shows.

▼ Trumpeters Steve Haeseker, Ben Waller, Dennis McColl, and Harold Cleeton play a quartet during a field show. The four were known for their harmony.

▼ Clarinetists Tasha Ekman and Colleen Topping play along with the others during the concert. Both are freshmen and enjoy playing in band.

Band Plays Well

How often have you sat in your second period class and wondered where the song "Sleigh Ride" was coming from? Or gone to your third period class humming the melody of "I Can't Fight This Feeling" because somehow it got stuck in your head? The solution to both of these questions is simple — the students in Symphonic Band are practicing either for their Christmas Concert or their Pops Concert. Students in the quad and other rooms on the western end of the campus have music to study by.

This year, the band is under the direction of Mr. Magana. Students who are in band for a second, third, or even fourth year have noticed a difference in the class because of their new director. Trumpeter Harold Cleeton said, "He's added something to our band that was missing before — pride!"

Style Changes

Like a change in coaches for a team, a change in advisors for a club often signals new directions. Such is the case with the Clarion. After fifteen years of guiding the school newspaper through deadlines too numerous to count, Ms. Jodi Rosiman stepped down this year. Taking her place is fellow English teacher Mr. Pete Sebastian.

When he accepted the assignment last year, Mr. Sebastian envisioned using the Grossmont District's new printing equipment and, perhaps, computerized type setting from another source. The printing equipment does not meet the format needs of the Clarion, so they remain with a private printer. Mr. Sebastian retypes all of the copy on his home computer before he delivers it to the printer. A real computerized type printer, however, is not possible without more funds than are available.

These anticipated changes were not made, but there have been changes, nevertheless. Computerized graphics and more art lines dominate the style this year. New columns have been added, among them "ASB Speaks Out," a column on ASB affairs; "Around Campus" with campus tidbits; and guest articles by students not on the Clarion staff. A creative section, with artwork, poems, and short fiction is planned, as is a humor column. The student staff also saw a number of shake-ups before sitting down to write on a newspaper every week.

To give an idea of the type who put out this publication, let's meet a few. Wayne Hicky, who describes himself as a "kinda A student," is a staff writer who thought the newspaper would be an easy study hall. However, after six weeks he knew it was just a lot of hard work. Another member, Tina Morgan, says she took Clarion because it was the only third period class open; but she enjoys the class and is glad she joined.

Mat Maid Help Out

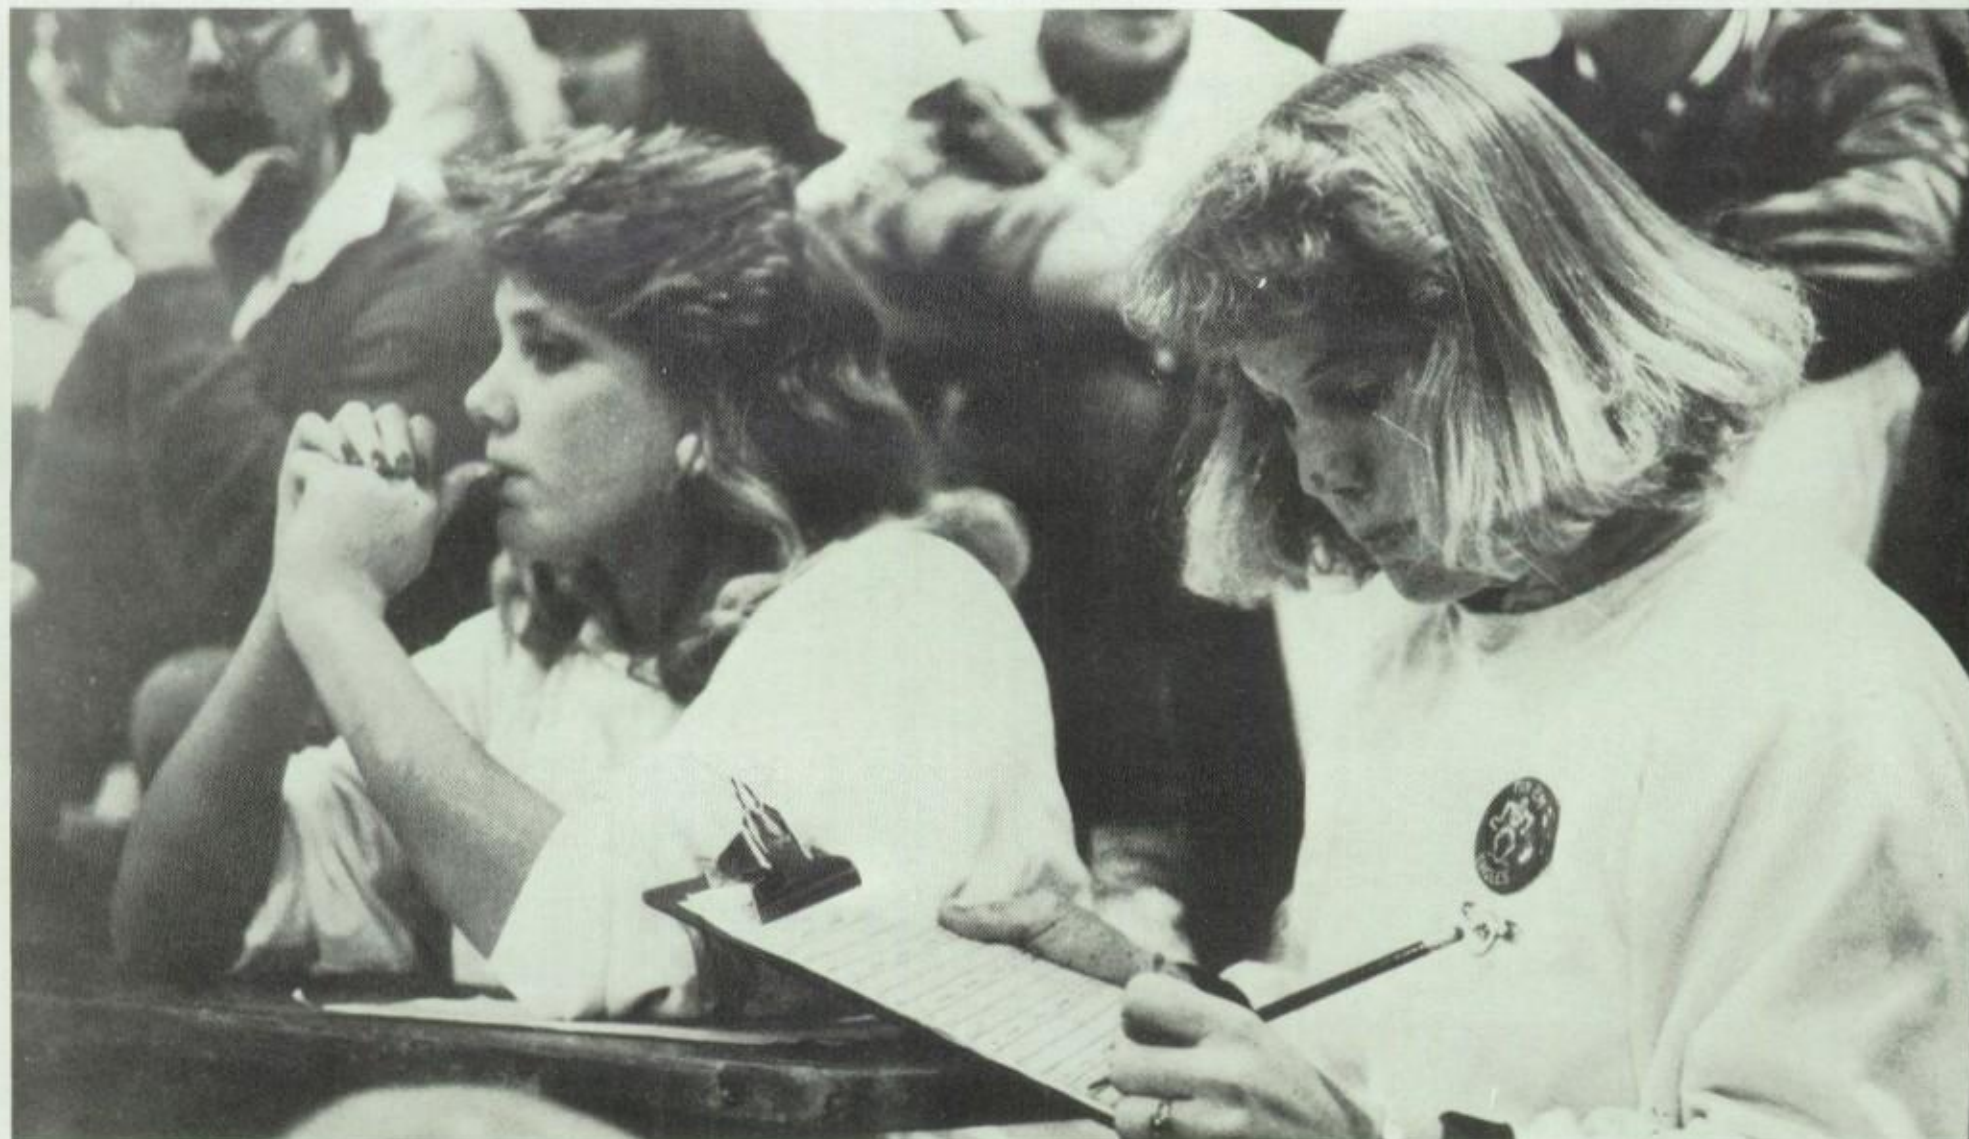

If the wrestling coach was buried in paperwork, would he be able to concentrate on helping the wrestlers improve? No, but thanks to the Mat Maids he is able to put all his time and effort into helping the team. The Mat Maids help the coach not only by doing his paperwork, but also by keeping the stats updated. "Stats," explains Mat Maid Jamie Huse, "is the progress each wrestler makes during the wrestling season."

The process of selection for the Mat Maids varied from last year. Because they are lacking an advisor, last year's "maids" were asked to help again this year. For various reasons, several of last year's maids were not able to return, thus providing an opportunity for new girls to help. The new girls who were selected were interviewed by the returning members and the coach.

Choir warms up

From behind the scenes, choir is a lot different from what most people perceive it to be. Like football; choir rehearsals demand time and effort, and the performances demand even more effort.

At rehearsals Mr. Murphy often counsels "open your mouth wide enough for me to drop a golfball down your throat and have it fall untouched into your stomach, splash." He claims this will help the sound.

Choir class is unique, because it is constantly interrupted to listen to a new selection or to pass out and or collect another piece of music.

▲ Sight reading, the Concert Choir prepares for an upcoming concert. This, the largest of the choirs, performs locally and enjoys Christmas caroling together.

◀ Accompanist and director of the choirs, Mr. Murphy leads the choir classes. Mr. Murphy is a long-time director of all of the choirs.

◀ Concert choir practices Mozart's Requiem. This piece was performed with the Grossmont College choir in January.

Choir tours

In choir, consisting of girls' glee, mens' chorus, concert choir, and honor choir, there is one common goal shared by all: reaching perfection. At Granite Hills, a singer striving for perfection is chosen for Honor choir, a grouping of the choirs' best voices. Honor choir represents the school on tour, which usually occurs two times per year, to places such as Palm Springs, Catalina and Chino.

A.S.B. flies high

School spirit has always been the special task of ASB, but this year's team seems to be going whole hog. As is true of most groups with new advisors, new ideas and activities spotlight ASB in 1986.

The most obvious spirit booster to join ASB is Mr. Wakefield, the new advisor. A former Granite Hills student, he knows well the traditions of spirit activities in the past. As part of his new job, Mr. Wakefield showed up on campus last spring shortly after ASB elections to organize the staff. Summer work days and workshops kept his vacation full and reinforced his view that his new job is "mind boggling" and demands "lots of responsibility." Earlier on however, he discovered that his officers were "hard working, great, and hold school first" on their list of priorities. His only regret about his staff is that there are too many students for ASB to work as efficiently as he'd like.

One of the first surprises from the new ASB was a "Rush Week" in which each club and organization on campus was asked to advertise itself for one day on the intercom and in the quad. New clubs such as Water Ski Club, Chess Club and Bike Club, unknown in recent years, surfaced.

The spirit of ASB is stated by its members. Brad Halte, an assistant, says he enjoys "logistical" work such as concession stands, setting up signs before Homecoming, and things like that.

Sonrisa Palmer, Senior class vice president, enjoys the ASB's ability to work together as a group whenever deadlines loom. In her words, she loves the "unity" of ASB.

▲ Although the room looks cheery, the ASB members are somber as they receive assignments for Homecoming jobs. Daily class periods started with thirty minute meeting, followed by committee projects.

The student who keeps the whole organization moving is Sheri Guzman, ASB president. Although she finds all of the work a "headache," she enjoys setting goals and trying to meet them. Her main goals this year are to "raise spirit, work more closely with faculty, students and community" and enjoy her role as a leader in her senior year. She expects to continue the good job done by ASB in the past, but to add a special emphasis on spirit while continuing traditional activities.

Band works hard

All students live for their summer vacation. Unfortunately, school always starts again, ending the days of relaxing at the beach. For the students in marching band and color guard, summer ends early. Every morning for two weeks before school started, these students practiced in the junior parking lot. Diane Eberle, Drum Major, said, "This practice helps us get a head start on the season. If we learn the basics early, then later we can concentrate on the music." When school started, these dedicated students practiced daily from 2:45 to 4:00.

But the sore feet, tired bodies, numerous blisters, and endless hours of practice paid off for this hard-working group. At their first competition of the season, the band and Drum Major both placed third, while the majorette and Tall Flags both placed second. Later in the season the band traveled to Orange where they placed second in a field tournament.

Not only does this group participate in competition parades, they also take part in our local parades — Alpine and Mother Goose. This year they had the opportunity to perform in the Disneyland Parade. Cassandra Maracin, a sophomore, summed up her excitement by exclaiming, "It's been my life-long dream to perform at Disneyland, and now it's come true!"

Pageant adopts a slinky

It's deadline day again and this time sixty-four pages are due, thirty-two of which are half-ready, sixteen aren't even started, and the rest, after inspection by the editors, are lying on the floor in shreds.

Co-Editors-in-Chief, Heidi Jensen and Kim Coffey, are biting their nails and tearing out their hair.

Ms. Coffin, the advisor, is slamming drawers in the office, searching for long-promised copy and photos. Photo Editor, Al Guerra, is waiting with his usual smile for the chaos to clear so he can find out what pictures need to be printed. The rest of the staff is making frantic calls home to alert moms that they will not be home for dinner — or perhaps beyond.

The only hope for getting through this nightmare is Seleena, the newest member of the staff. Seleena, the slinky, was presented to the editors by Rob Collier early in the year. Outsiders don't understand, but Seleena is a life saver, or perhaps a deadline saver.

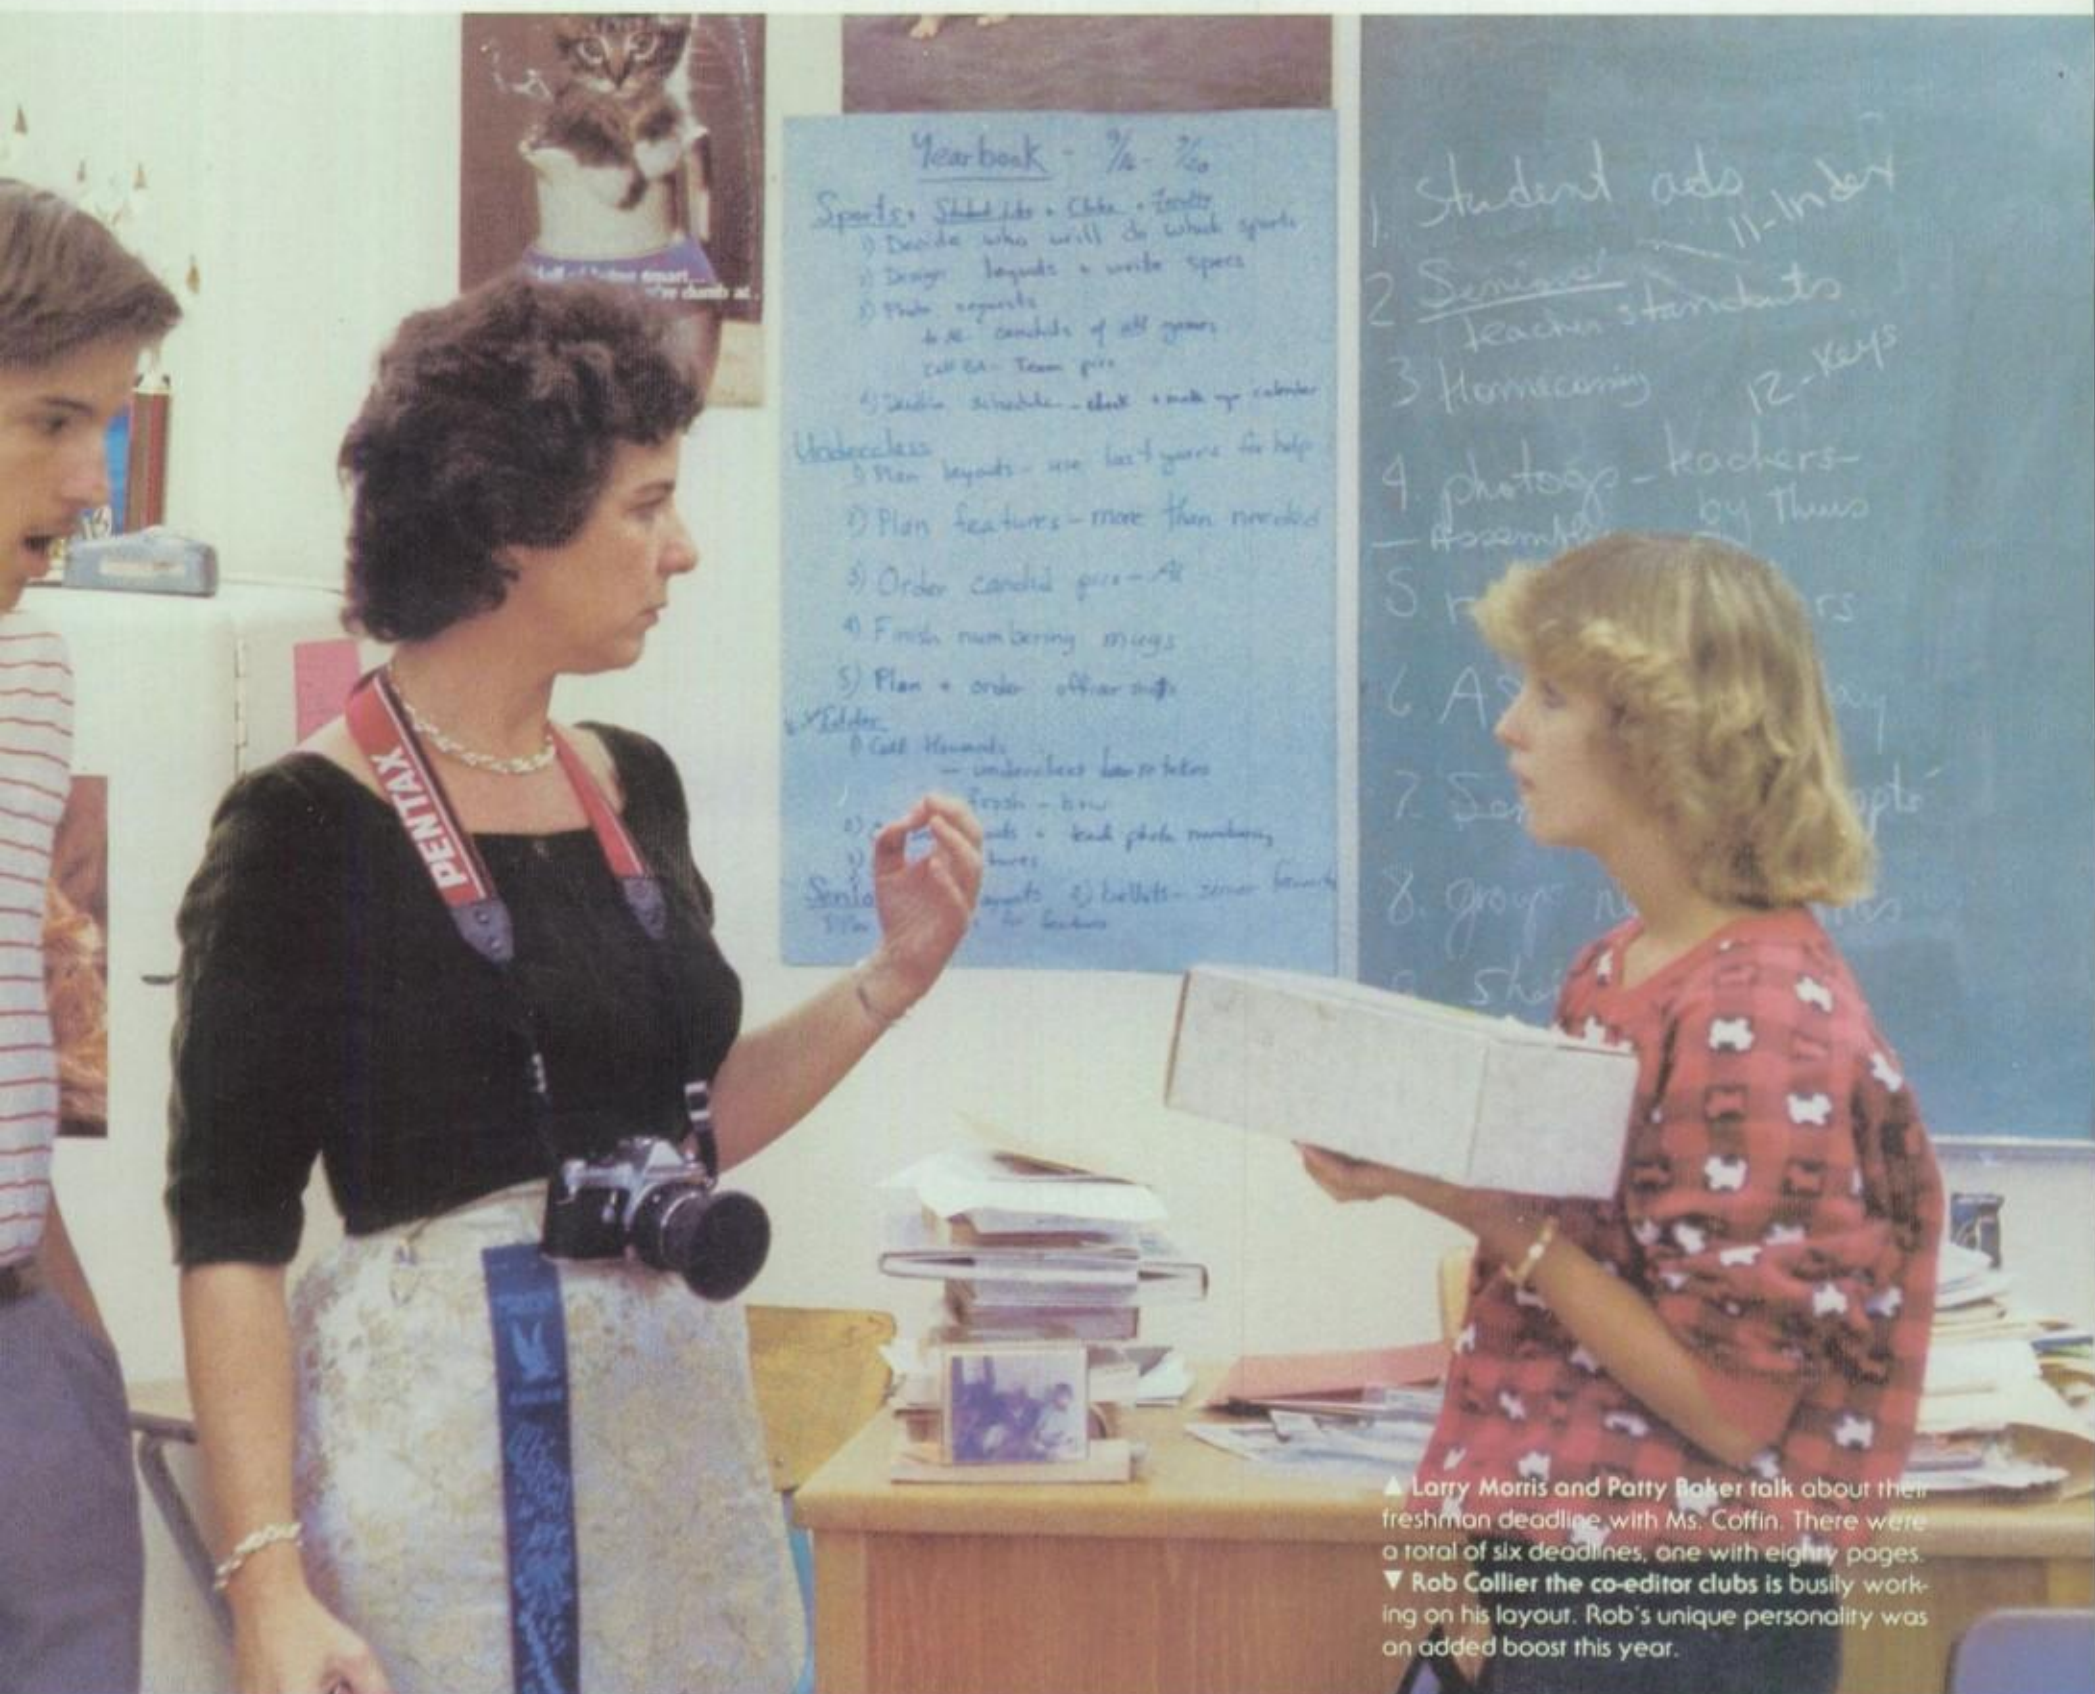

When the pressure becomes unbearable, Heidi and Kim take a break to play with Seleena until their nerves are less frazzled. As they regain their composure, staffers finish their calls, and Ms. Coffin comes out of the office with negatives wrapped around her neck in triumph and the deadline progresses.

► One of the annual staff's photographers, Michael Thweatt, busily mixes chemicals for developing pictures.

Cheerleading is more than glamour

A widely-held belief among students is that cheerleaders do little more than show up for games and lead a few cheers. Nothing could be farther from the truth. As Ms. Torres, advisor, puts it, "Cheer is a tremendous commitment; cheerleaders devote countless hours to practicing as well as to cheering at the games."

In addition to the time spent for cheer, a vast amount of money is needed for uniforms. Each uniform costs approximately $250.00. This cost does not include sweats, cheer camp, competitions, or any other cheer-related activity. In order to fund these many costs, cheerleaders hold car washes, candy sales, and operate teaching clinics for junior high cheerleaders. Obviously, cheer requires responsibility and determination, traits worthy of respect.

▲ Ginger Smith is a bit nervous about being on top of the pyramid. Cheer camp is a source of new formations.

◀ The cheerleaders finish "The Wave." This cheer was a popular favorite here and across the country this season.

◀ JV cheerleaders line up to start a cheer. The squad usually starts in a standing position.

▼ At the end of this cheer, the girls end up on their knees. Many of the cheers are a combination of cheers and dance routines.

▼ Shoulder sit and shoulder stand takes concentration from all of the girls. This type of pyramid was much easier last year with four male cheerleaders to form the base.

▲ Collette Craig, Marcaine Sowards, and Kim Provence joke with Ernie, Ron Collie. Having a male mascot has not inhibited close friendships with the cheerleaders.

Ron joins the girls

Being a cheerleader is similar to being part of a large family. Cheerleaders spend many hours with each other, either practicing or cheering at athletic events. Once every week they also meet during lunch with their advisor, Ms. Torres, to discuss problems, new cheers and stunts, and difficulties with cheers.

Ron Collie, this year's first male Ernie-the-Eagle in ten years or so, has been a refreshing addition to the squad. He attends all practices, sporting events and cheer meetings, including those that aren't mandatory for him. His objective viewpoint frequently solves problems and disagreements. Ron has been more than an enthusiastic part of the cheer squad.

"He's been an important part of the cheer family," according to advisor Torres, who compared his role to that of the four male cheerleaders last year.

Ernie admits that he likes being the only guy, "with all my girls."

As usual, the '86 squad attended cheerleading camp at S.D.S.U. during the summer. This year they walked off with two awards for excellence and a special commendation for spirit.

During the school year, when not practicing, cheering, or raising money, the cheerleaders compete with others from around Southern California.

◀ Performing a routine they learned at camp, the Varsity cheerleaders entertain the audience. Summer Camp prepares the squad for this year's games and competitions.

◀ Lisa Landes and Jolene Tweed practice cheering in front of the A.S.B. Office. They admit cheering is hard work, but both say it's worth it.

▼ Ernie-the-Eagle, Ron Collie, and Steve Swanson, treasurer of the Senior Class, give the word at the Homecoming Assembly.

▼ Mrs. Torres, Jolene Tweed, and Shannon McGrath help to set up for an assembly. On this job, they work hand-in-hand with A.S.B.

Students tutor students

7he California Scholarship Federation (C.S.F.) is an exciting club that benefits not only its members, but also the school at large. To become a member, a student must have what the Federation calls "ten points." These points must be earned in college prep or honors courses, with each "A" equalling three points and each "B" counting for one point. Students who participate in CSF for at least four semesters become Seal-Bearers. This certificate will appear on high school diplomas and other official documents.

Few people realize that CSF members perform the noble service of tutoring Granite Hills' students. The first hour of instruction is free of charge, with additional time for a small fee. Another honorable undertaking of CSF is their sponsorship of a needy child in Mexico.

There is more to CSF than work and responsibility, however. These students also have parties and go to Disneyland with the other CSF clubs from across California.

SPORTS

High tech invades schools

Computers have become a major part of many American sports: from play-planning to athlete-evaluation. Howard Cossell no longer has a monopoly on sports trivia as announcers take a byte out of life with instant call-up of trivia. Major league coaches use computer analysis of their players and opponents to plan plays and training. World-class amateurs at the '84 Olympics also used computer analysis to increase their performance.

Although most of this technology is confined today to professional teams, a few colleges and universities rely heavily on computers. Granite Hills, like most high schools, still relies on the mechanical equipment of old: stop watches, time clocks, and score boards. Here, the wisdom of coaches and skill of players still divides winners from losers.

New stadium lights are a welcome addition this year, purchased for the stadium by Christian High, El Cajon Valley High School, and the Granite Hills Booster Club, with El Cajon Valley paying its share of the price, around $4,000, over a five year period. ASB took the time one hot summer morning to repaint all the bleachers and the press box, adding a big "GH." Now students at Granite Hills can not only be proud of their teams, but also of their new stadium.

Changes have also been taking place in sports this year. High school girls have decided that they want to be allowed to play the traditional male contact sports like football and wrestling. Caron Davis, from Helix High School, wanted to play on her school's football team, so she took her case to the school board and won. Although she decided not to play, all girls in the Grossmont District can try out for football from now on.

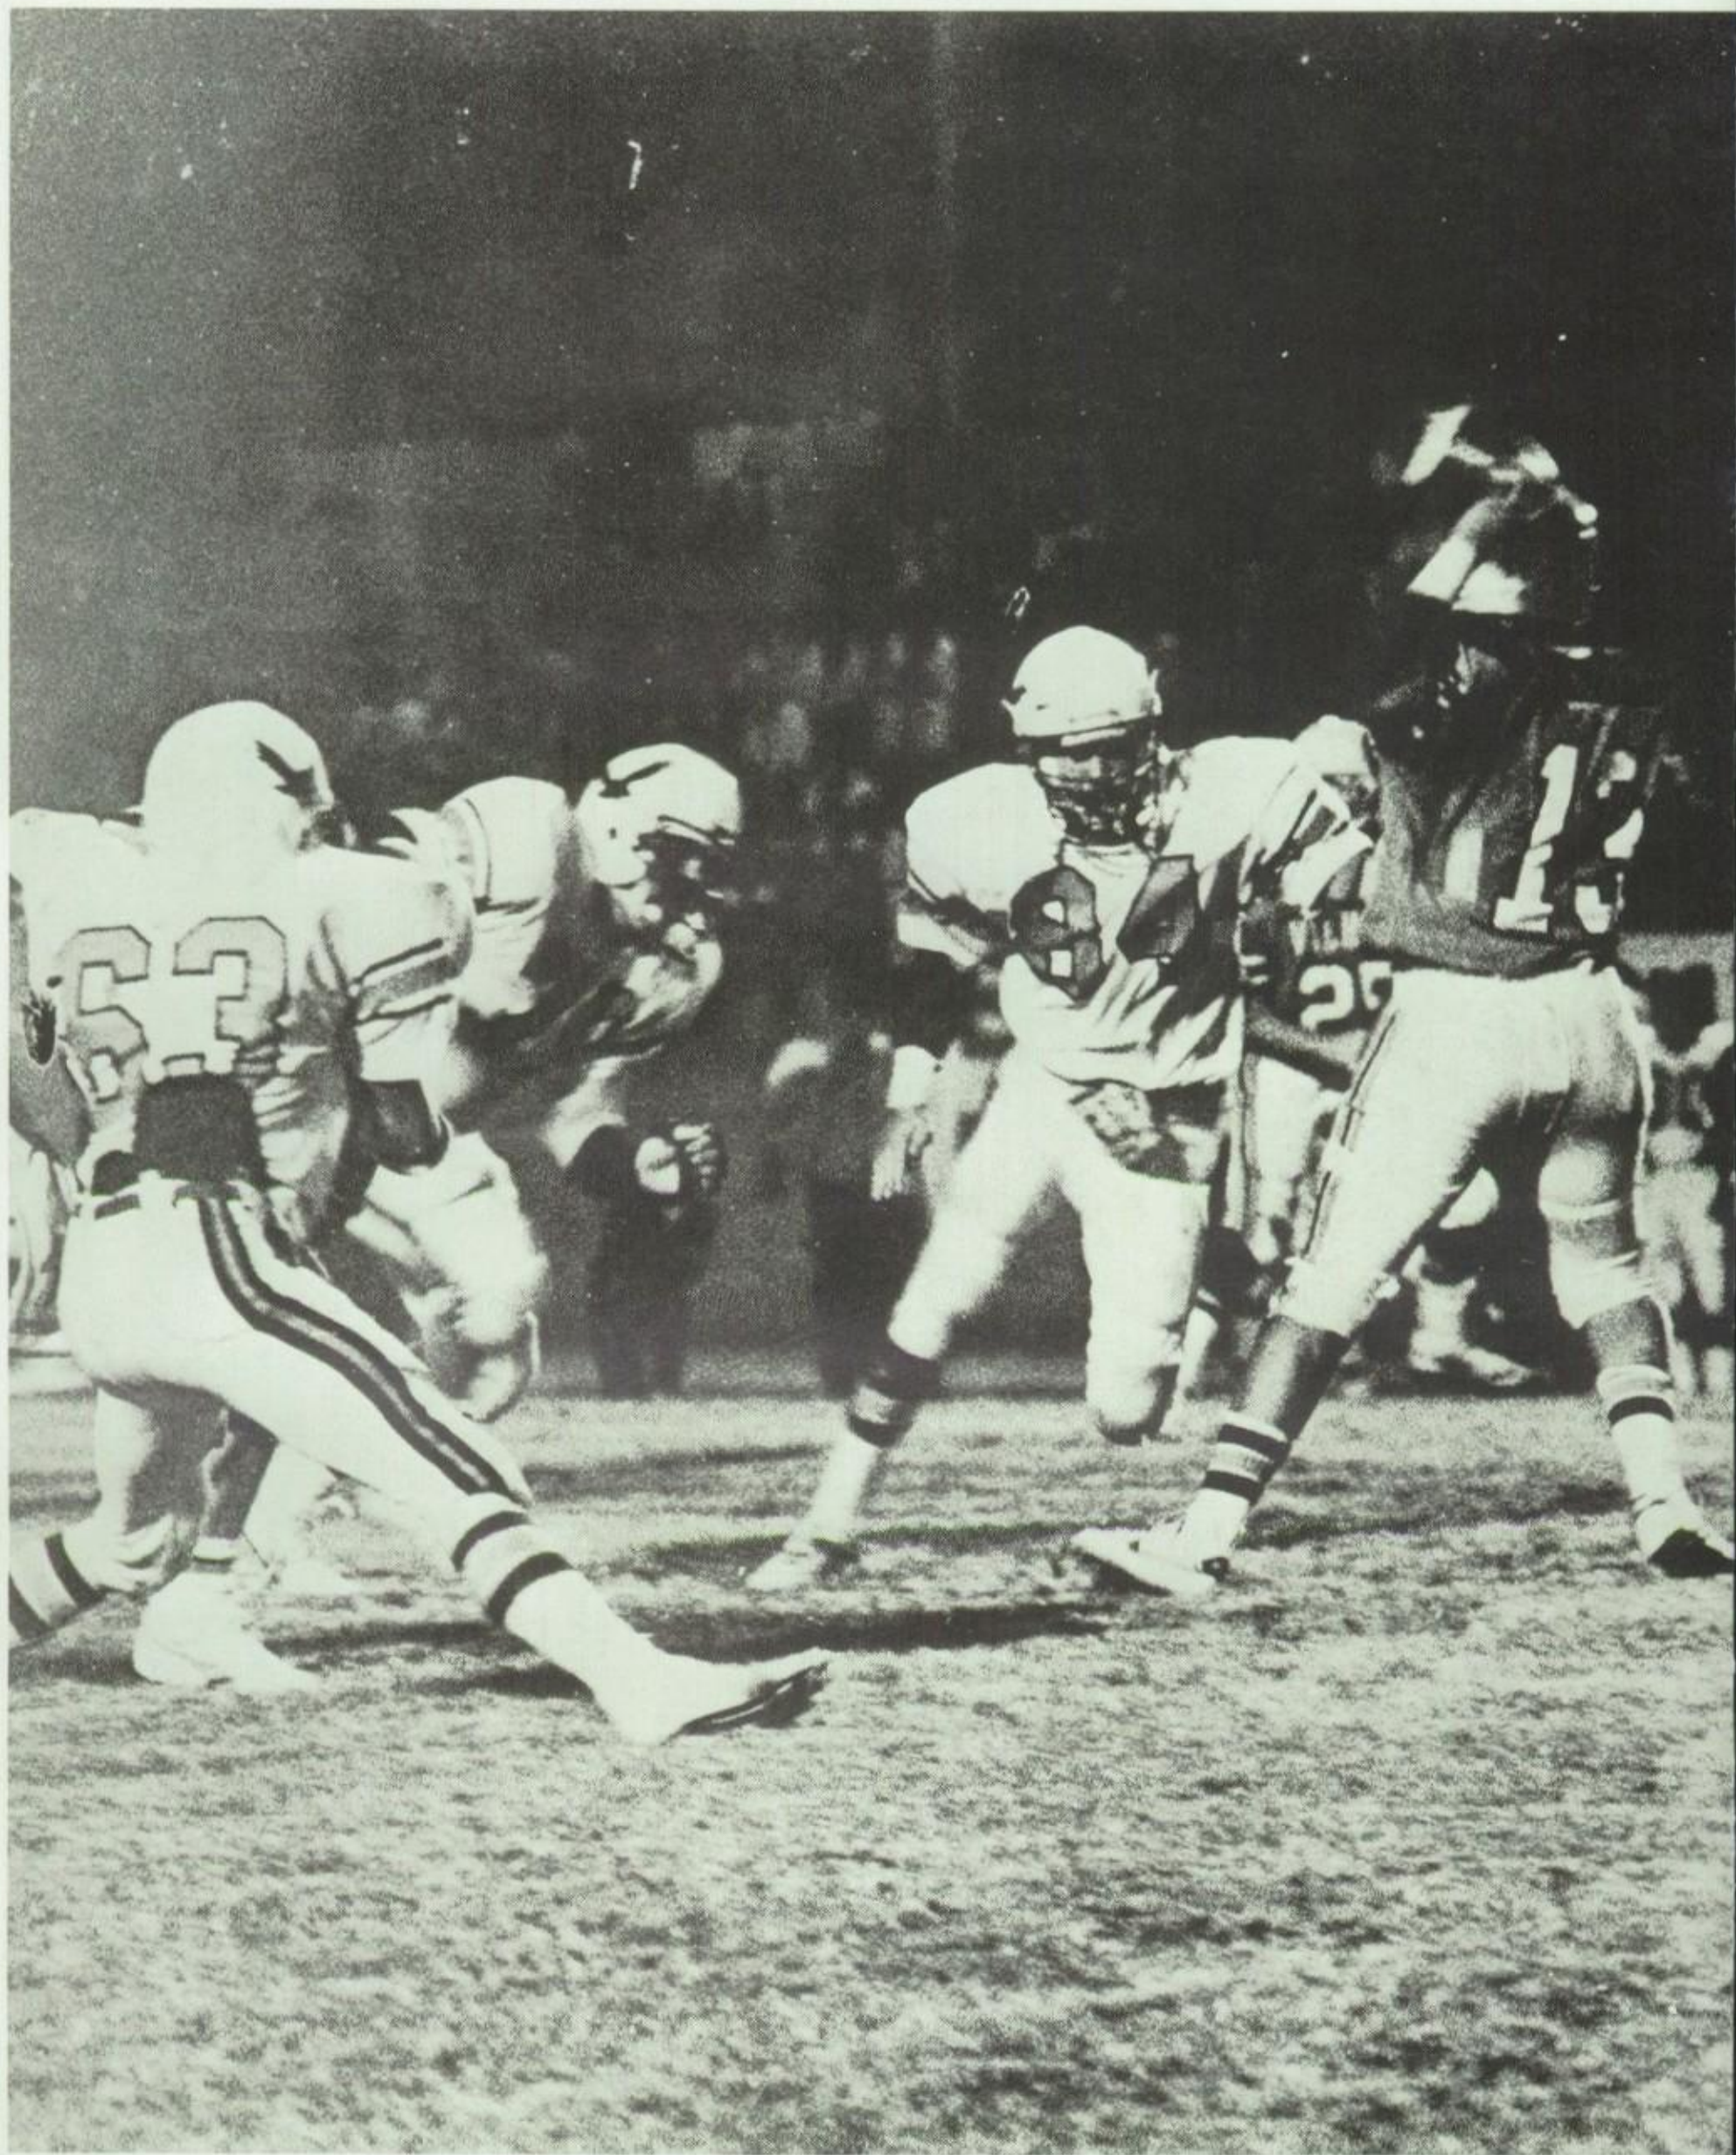

Students not only participate on teams at school; many play on outside teams.

Eagles Bound for C.I.F.

Eagles defense led by #84, Mike Garrow, rushes Valhalla's quarterback, Chad Wolfe, Granite Hills beat Valhalla 13-10.

Eagles' Joey Pagen, chases down Helix quarterback, Jeff Homersmidt. The Eagles won a hard fought battle, 31-26.

Grasping the ball, Granite Hills' Tom Vardell races up field. Tom rushed for over 1,000 yards this season.

Football has been a unifying force in the lives of twenty members of the current squad since El Cajon Pop Warner league in elementary school.

This early start may have been a key factor in the spectacular 11-0 season this year which only ended in the CIF finals with a loss to the number one ranked football team in California, Vista.

Remembering this young but experienced team, we recall outstanding running backs Robert Padillo and Tom Vardell, who each rushed over 1000 yards this season. Padillo was first in league with Vardell, second.

Rick Stauffer provided excellent blocking for Donnie Carroll, and Todd Parker, wide receiver, scored nine touchdowns.

Defense deserves credit, too, including Joe McLaughlin, P. J. Mikolajewski, and Jim McMahon. Hard hitting defensive players include Joey Paga, Mike Garrow, Scott Weber, Mike Hansen, Jason Munoz, Keith Smith, and Tim Briggs.

As Joe McLaughlin reminisced about all the years he and his teammates have faced each other on the gridiron, he recalled, "We've been playing

J.V. Enjoys Perfect Season

Ready to sack Valhalla's quarterback, S. Kirpatrick, Ronnie Breen adds to his defensive record. Ronnie, Pete Stacey and Tom Lacey were our leading tacklers.

Brian Giles plows through the Monte Vista defense to score his seventh touchdown of the season. He had a total of nine touchdowns this year which led the team.

Reaching for the ball, wide receiver, Danny Santos, makes another one of his diving catches. Danny scored eight touchdowns this season.

The J.V. Football team, through hard work and practice, concluded their season with a perfect record of 9-0. Eighteen freshmen dominated this team. One outstanding freshman, Brian Giles, led in the scoring action with a total of 9 touchdowns as a runningback. Quarterback, Matt Mikolajewski, also a freshman, led the offense up and down the field, relying on his wide receivers, Danny Santos, Brian Runge, and Shawn O'Coyne to score and keep the team ahead. Of course the offensive line was superb. Eddie Ayala, Jeff Zimmer, James Nordenger, Paul Nordinger, Chris Lobaugh, and Mike Salerni held various defenses off Mikolajewski. Defensive captains Aaron Crecy, and Steve Friar kept their defensive field jumping. Other impressive defensive players were Chris Harding, Tom Lacey, Troy Lynn, Tim McMahon, and Ronnie Breen. Toward the end of the season, Eddie Ayala said that he was disappointed that the season was over: "I'm sorry to see the season end; we won so many games because we worked together, and we always showed encouragement to our fellow players."

Diligence Paid Off

The Junior Varsity tennis team worked hard all season. The girls practiced five days a week, two hours a day. Head Coach Patty Knight had the girls running, serving, and hitting the balls. She and assistant Coach Ernie Sanchez worked the girls hard during the week to prepare them for their matches. These hard practices helped the girls out when the time came for games. "Our J.V. team did extremely well this year! We won every match except when we played Valhalla. They are our toughest competitors," stated Kristy Schimpf.

Overall the girls came in third place with 12 wins and 1 loss. Leading the squad in singles was Freshman Kristy Schimpf. Leading in doubles were Erin Baily and Shelly St. Germaine.

Cooperation led to success for the girls' Varsity tennis team during the 1985 season. Coach Patty Knight and Assistant Coach Ernie Sanchez worked individually with each player to improve the girls' skills. Assistant Coach Ernie Sanchez said that, "The Varsity team did better than we expected. Our toughest match was against Valhalla and the score was an amazing 11-7. Monte Vista was a very strong team this year, beating us 13-5. The team cooperated very well with each other, which made things easier." This year's varsity team ended up in 4th place with 10 wins and 3 losses.

The number one singles players was Christina Larrazabol, ranked second in the league. The number one doubles players were Susan Bohem and Kris Oka.

In Grossmont League Play-offs doubles players Susan Bohem and Christina Larrazabol won. Then they went on the CIF but lost to Kim Krug and Joey Doole of San Pasqual.

Eagles Serve Wins

The girls' J.V. Volleyball team improved this year. Serving and spiking proved to be more effective during the second half of the season. Jill Curry and Shelly Sampson were the consistent and tough servers who stood out among the rest. During the Mr. Miguel game, Shelly Sampson served eleven points, which ultimately gave a win. "When we had the ball and were serving well, we knew we could beat any team in the District," stated Junior Julie Howe. Spiking could also stack up points for the Eagles when they most needed them. "The sparks flew when Monica Fendrick spiked the ball," said Holly Moffett.

The girls improved because of strenuous drilling by Coach Charlie Neel. The players on the team responded by doing well in the games. "Our spiking and passing was good, but our ultimate weapon against other teams was our serves," stated Coach Charlie Neel. The J.V. Volleyball team ended up in second place with a record of 12-4.

◀ Waiting for the serve. Monica Fendrick concentrates heavily on the ball. Monica had two kills and excellent passing against El Cajon.

◀ Serving the ball. Angie Donte scored many points for the Eagle offense. Granite Hills beat Santana 2 to 0.

▲ Positioning herself for a difficult save. Kellie Butcher concentrates on the ball. GH dominated the games with score of 2 to 0.

◀ Saving a freeball. Jill Curry passes the ball over the net. With effort like this, the Eagles soared to a victory over El Cajon.

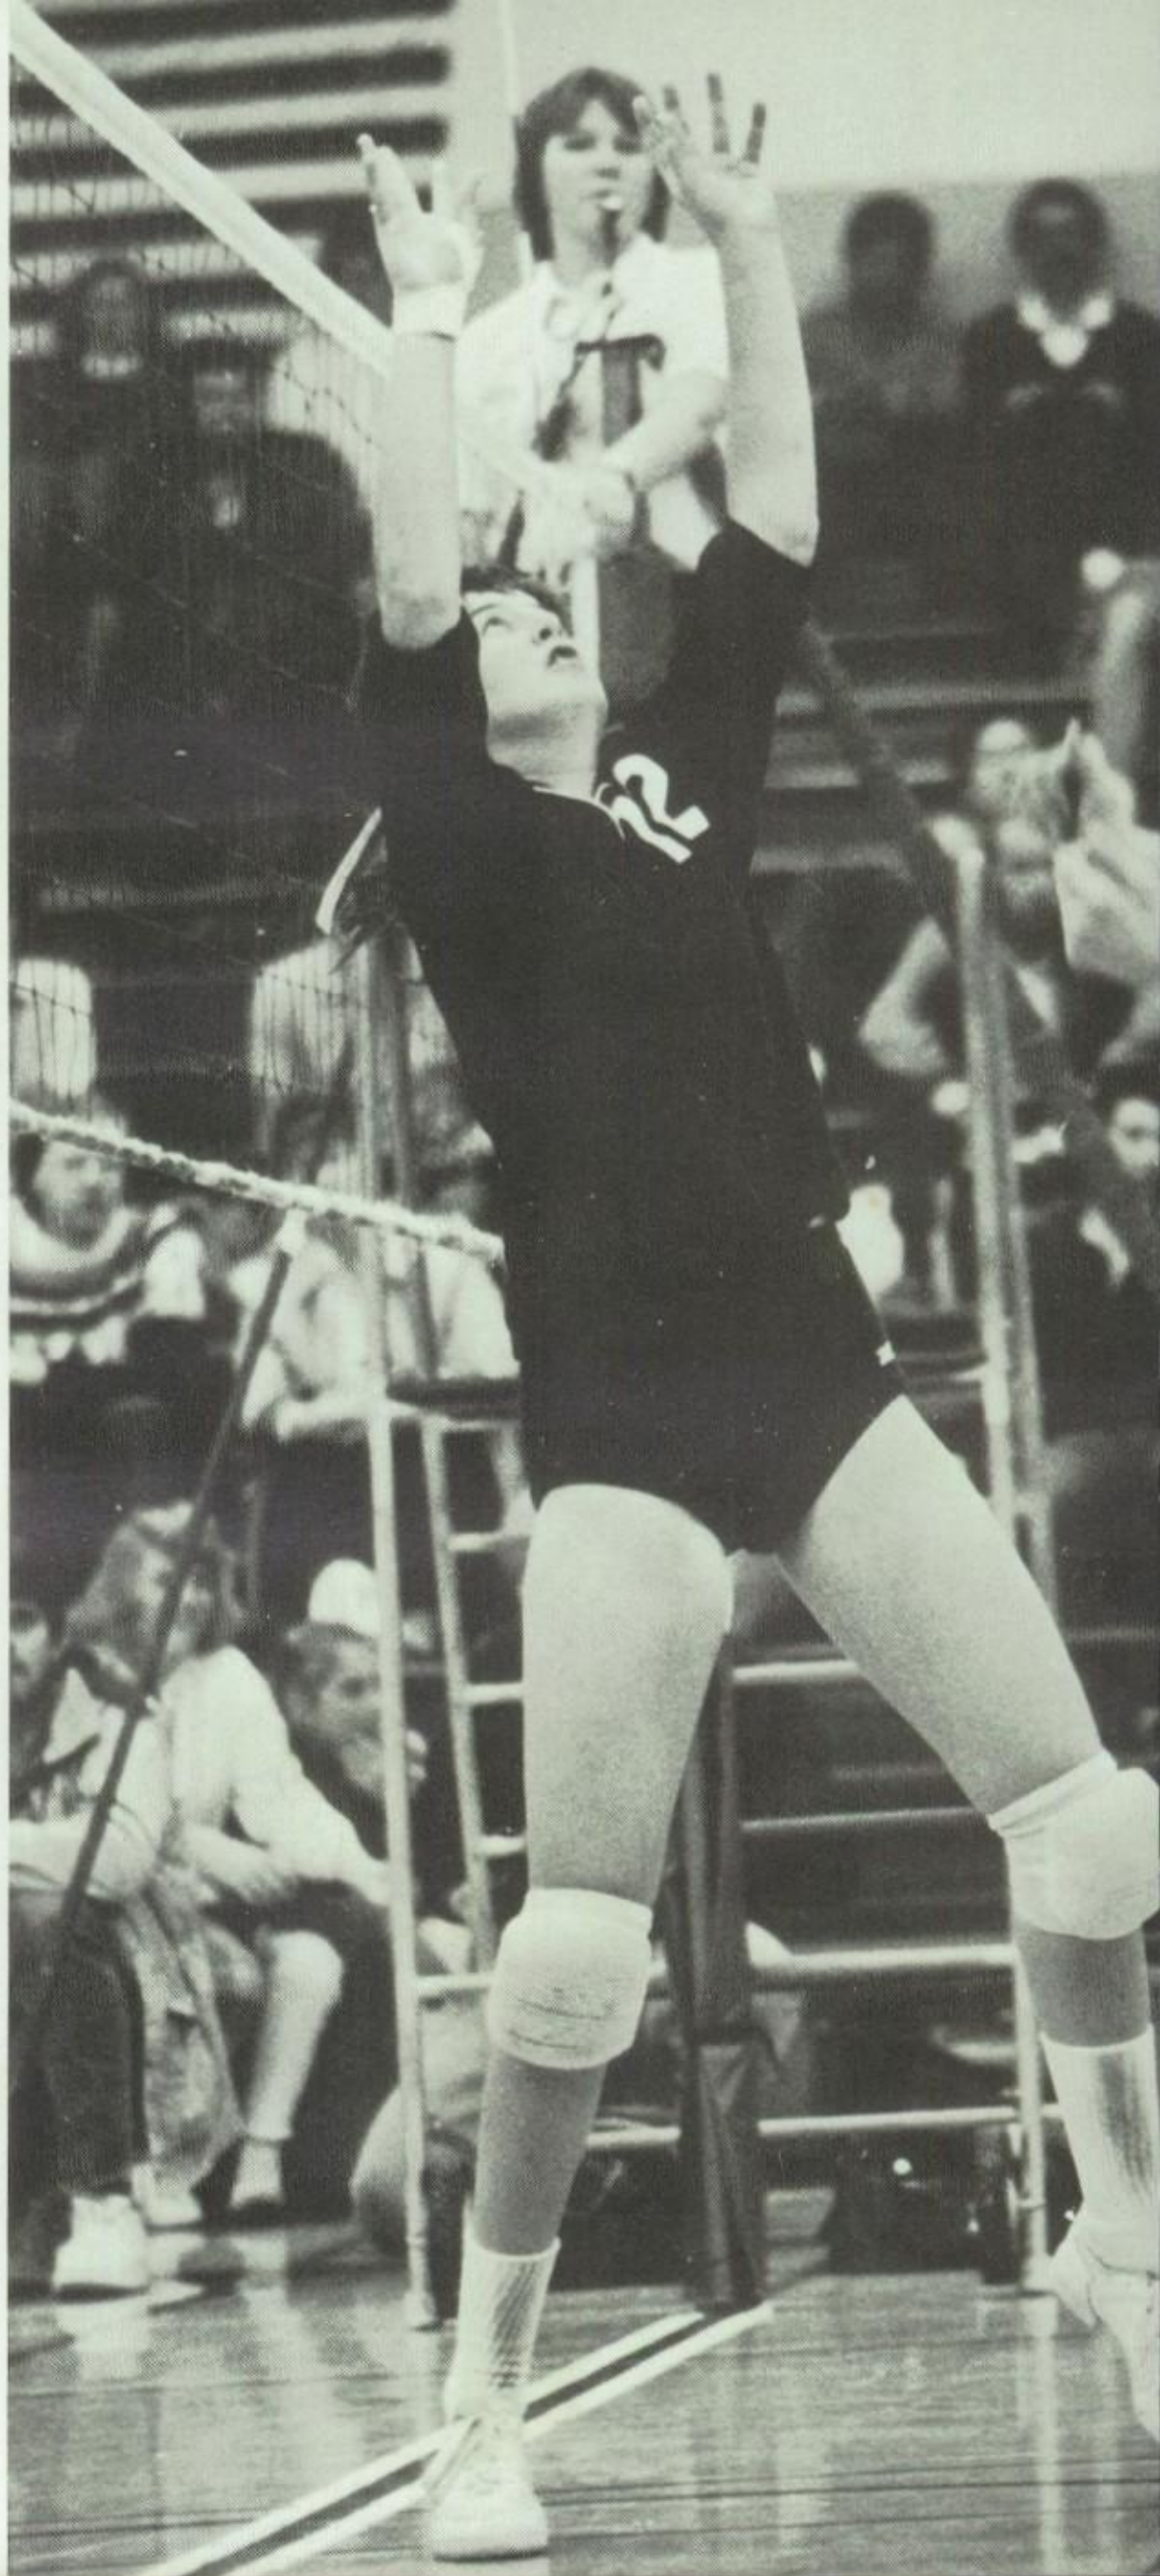

▲ Both concentrating on the ball, Shari Guseman and Lori Hagen execute a perfect pass. With the help of great passing, GH beat Helix 3 to 1.

▲ With great determination, Julie Hannah smashes the ball into the Monarchs' court. The Eagles killed the Monarchs 3 to 0.

▲ Successfully blocking a ball by Wendy Dennis, Melissa Stokes and Karen Burley were the awesome duo. Gh beat their arch enemy, Grossmont, 3 to 2.

► Skillfully setting the ball, Melissa Stokes sets Sheri Guseman a "one!" "Ones" were vital to the Eagle offense.

Team Unity Brings C.I.F.

The girls' Varsity Volleyball team continued to have a winning season. This year the squad consisted of many talented and experienced players. The team diversified, running plays such as "ones," "x's," and "c's." "Ones" were the most common of all the plays and were primarily quick short sets that were barely above the net to a player already in the air. Karen Burley and Sheri Guseman were the middle blockers who excelled on these plays. Senior Julie Hannah and Sophomore Kristin Allen also contributed to the offense by power hitting, while Lori Hagen's specialty was defense.

"We couldn't have made it as far as we did without the help of Melissa Stokes, who did an outstanding job setting the ball and calling the plays," stated Sheri Guseman.

The returning coach, Renate Busch, enhanced the skills of the Eagles with drills and mental practices. She was also helped by assistant coach, Brad Crocker.

Working closely together, the team shared special friendships and lasting memories. They finished second in the Grossmont League District with a record of 13-3 and, more importantly, were runners-up in the CIF Finals. This dramatic event has not occurred in the last ten years for any school in the Grossmont District. As Melissa Stokes summed up, "Through concentration and determination, we went to CIF and even though we didn't win, I am still proud of the 1985 Volleyball team."

Runners Reduce Times

Although Cross-Country is a team sport, much of the competition centers on a runner's attempt to improve his or her own times. According to John Rice, front runner for the boys' team, every member of the team succeeded in improving as the season progressed.

John Rice was the most successful in reaching league status with an invitation to the CIF and regional meets. At the regionals, he finished a competitive twenty fifth in a field of one hundred. His personal best for the year was a 15:44 on the standard three-mile course at Santee Lakes.

For the girls' team, Jenny Mayfield finished on top with a personal best of 12:52 on the girls' standard two-mile course at Santee Lakes.

Coach Arietta also stood alone, having to take on both teams near the start of the season when the boys' coach resigned. Jenny Mayfield felt that "He spent most of his time with the guys," while John Rice was equally sure the girls saw him more. But both agreed that Arietta's upbeat style and personal attention helped every person to race against himself and to improve. His advice to them before each race reflects this style, "do your best. Push yourself. Have a nice race."

Individual differences also surfaced between the teams. The girls adopted long black polypropylene workout pants which they enjoyed for their warmth and flexibility. Jenny only laughed when asked if the guys had a similar outfit.

Before each race, too, individual traits stood out. Sean Stirling, a top runner for the guys, would stand alone to psych himself for the race. Most of the others on his team lounged around and watched other races.

Jenny Mayfield listens to Billy Idol music which, "pumps me up and gets me ready." Other girls rest and talk quietly together before their stretches and warm ups.

Together and as individuals, the Cross-Country runners practiced, won and lost, with the boys finishing fourth in their league and the girls fifth in theirs.

◀ The Boys' Varsity team bolts from the starting line. The race proved to be a rugged three miles.

▲ After ascending a steep incline, Jeff Delaney closes in on the finish line. Such hills impaired the runners' rhythm.

▲ Stephanie Golden, Jenny Mayfield, Christy Calvert, and Alisa Olsen await the start of the race. Although the girls' and boys' teams work out together, they race separately.

Teamwork Pays Off

Teamwork paid off this year for the JV team, which finished first in the league. The more experienced Varsity squad worked out with their younger counterparts on skills such as passing and stealing the ball and shooting. "Teamwork was the one thing that made these teams successful."

Freshmen and sophomores dominated the JV squad. Jake Gaeir, the fastest swimmer on the team, made 16 goals to be the leading freshman scorer. Jay Marquand, freshman, along with Randy Callahan, kept the number of goals scored against the JV to 109, the lowest in the league. Charlie Genz, sophomore, led the team in scoring with 81.

The Varsity finished the season with a winning record of 9 and 7. The JV finished 14 and 2. In tournament action, the Varsity came in fifth at the Coronado Invitational and the JV placed third at the Mt. Miquel Invitational.

CIF proves skill

Athletes across California dream about the exciting prospect of going to CIF. C.I.F., California Interscholastic Federation, is the ultimate goal for high school sports teams. The top teams in each district compete for the CIF championship. 1985 saw not only one but two Granite Hills teams qualifying for CIF: Varsity Football and Varsity Volleyball.

Varsity Football has a perfect record of 10-0, placing them number one in the Grossmont District. With the help of team effort, it qualified them to go on to play Chula Vista. The Eagles dominated Chula Vista, beating them 10-7. The victory raised their hopes before the Vista game, but the disappointed Eagles lost 43-9. Despite the loss, they set records in the Grossmont League, and thus accomplished their goal. "The CIF games weren't much different than regular season games except the people were bigger and more physical," stated Keith Smith.

In Volleyball, the girls played Sweetwater, beating them 3-1. The Eagles also beat Mt. Carmel 3-2. "Mt. Carmel was the highlight of our season. It was the most spectacular and awe-inspiring game I have ever witnessed," stated the players because of the overwhelming stress in the game, plus the fact that the girls have continuously lost for four years in the semi-finals. The Eagles were not able to beat Poway, losing 3-0. The Season did not end at the finals; however, the Eagles continued playing in the state play-offs.

CIF was not only an honorable achievement for athletes, but also a personal victory for each individual player. Pride of accomplishment belongs justly to all of the players on Varsity Football and Volleyball.

◀ Catching the football, Todd Parker completes a pass. Todd made all-CIF on the first team.

▲ Overwhelmed with joy, the Eagles uncontrollably burst into tears. GH came back miraculously and beat Mt. Carmel 3-2.

◀ Jumping off the bench, Coach Renate Busch cheers her Eagles on. GH won a decisive victory over El Cajon, which helped to place the Eagles in CIF.

▲ Moving toward the ball, Kristen Allen positions herself for a perfect pass. GH dominated Sweetwater 3-1.

Wrestlers lose weight

Models are not the only ones who worry about their weight. For wrestlers, maintaining exactly the right weight makes the difference between competing and sitting on the bench.

Wrestlers compete in weight categories: 98, 105, 112, 119, 126, 132, . . . on up to heavy weights, who weight between 191 and 245 pounds. In order to compete at 98 pounds a wrestler must weigh 98 pounds or less. Because many wrestlers of the similar weight are on the team, they compete against one another for a chance to wrestle. If he does not qualify as the team's best wrestler in his weight category, he does not compete.

Sometimes much of the entire team diets in order to overcome a school with a dominating team.

Major tournaments also are a reason for the whole team to turn to frozen jello and sips of gatorade.

Other methods of losing weight include wearing three pairs of sweats for practices, running, and cutting all but essential liquids.

Only after weigh-ins, only 1/2 hour before JV meets, can a wrestler finally start eating again, but still not enough to upset his stomach before the meet.

◀ Breaking his man flat, Eric Hobbs enforces a painful move. Eric competes primarily on JV, but Varsity as well.

▼ Prying on the arms, Ian Funk attempts to turn his opponent. Ian is a more experienced wrestler on the squad.

▼ Coaching his wrestler on the mat, Guy Gist yells an encouraging comment. Coach Gist is an immense help for the team.

State beckons Briggs

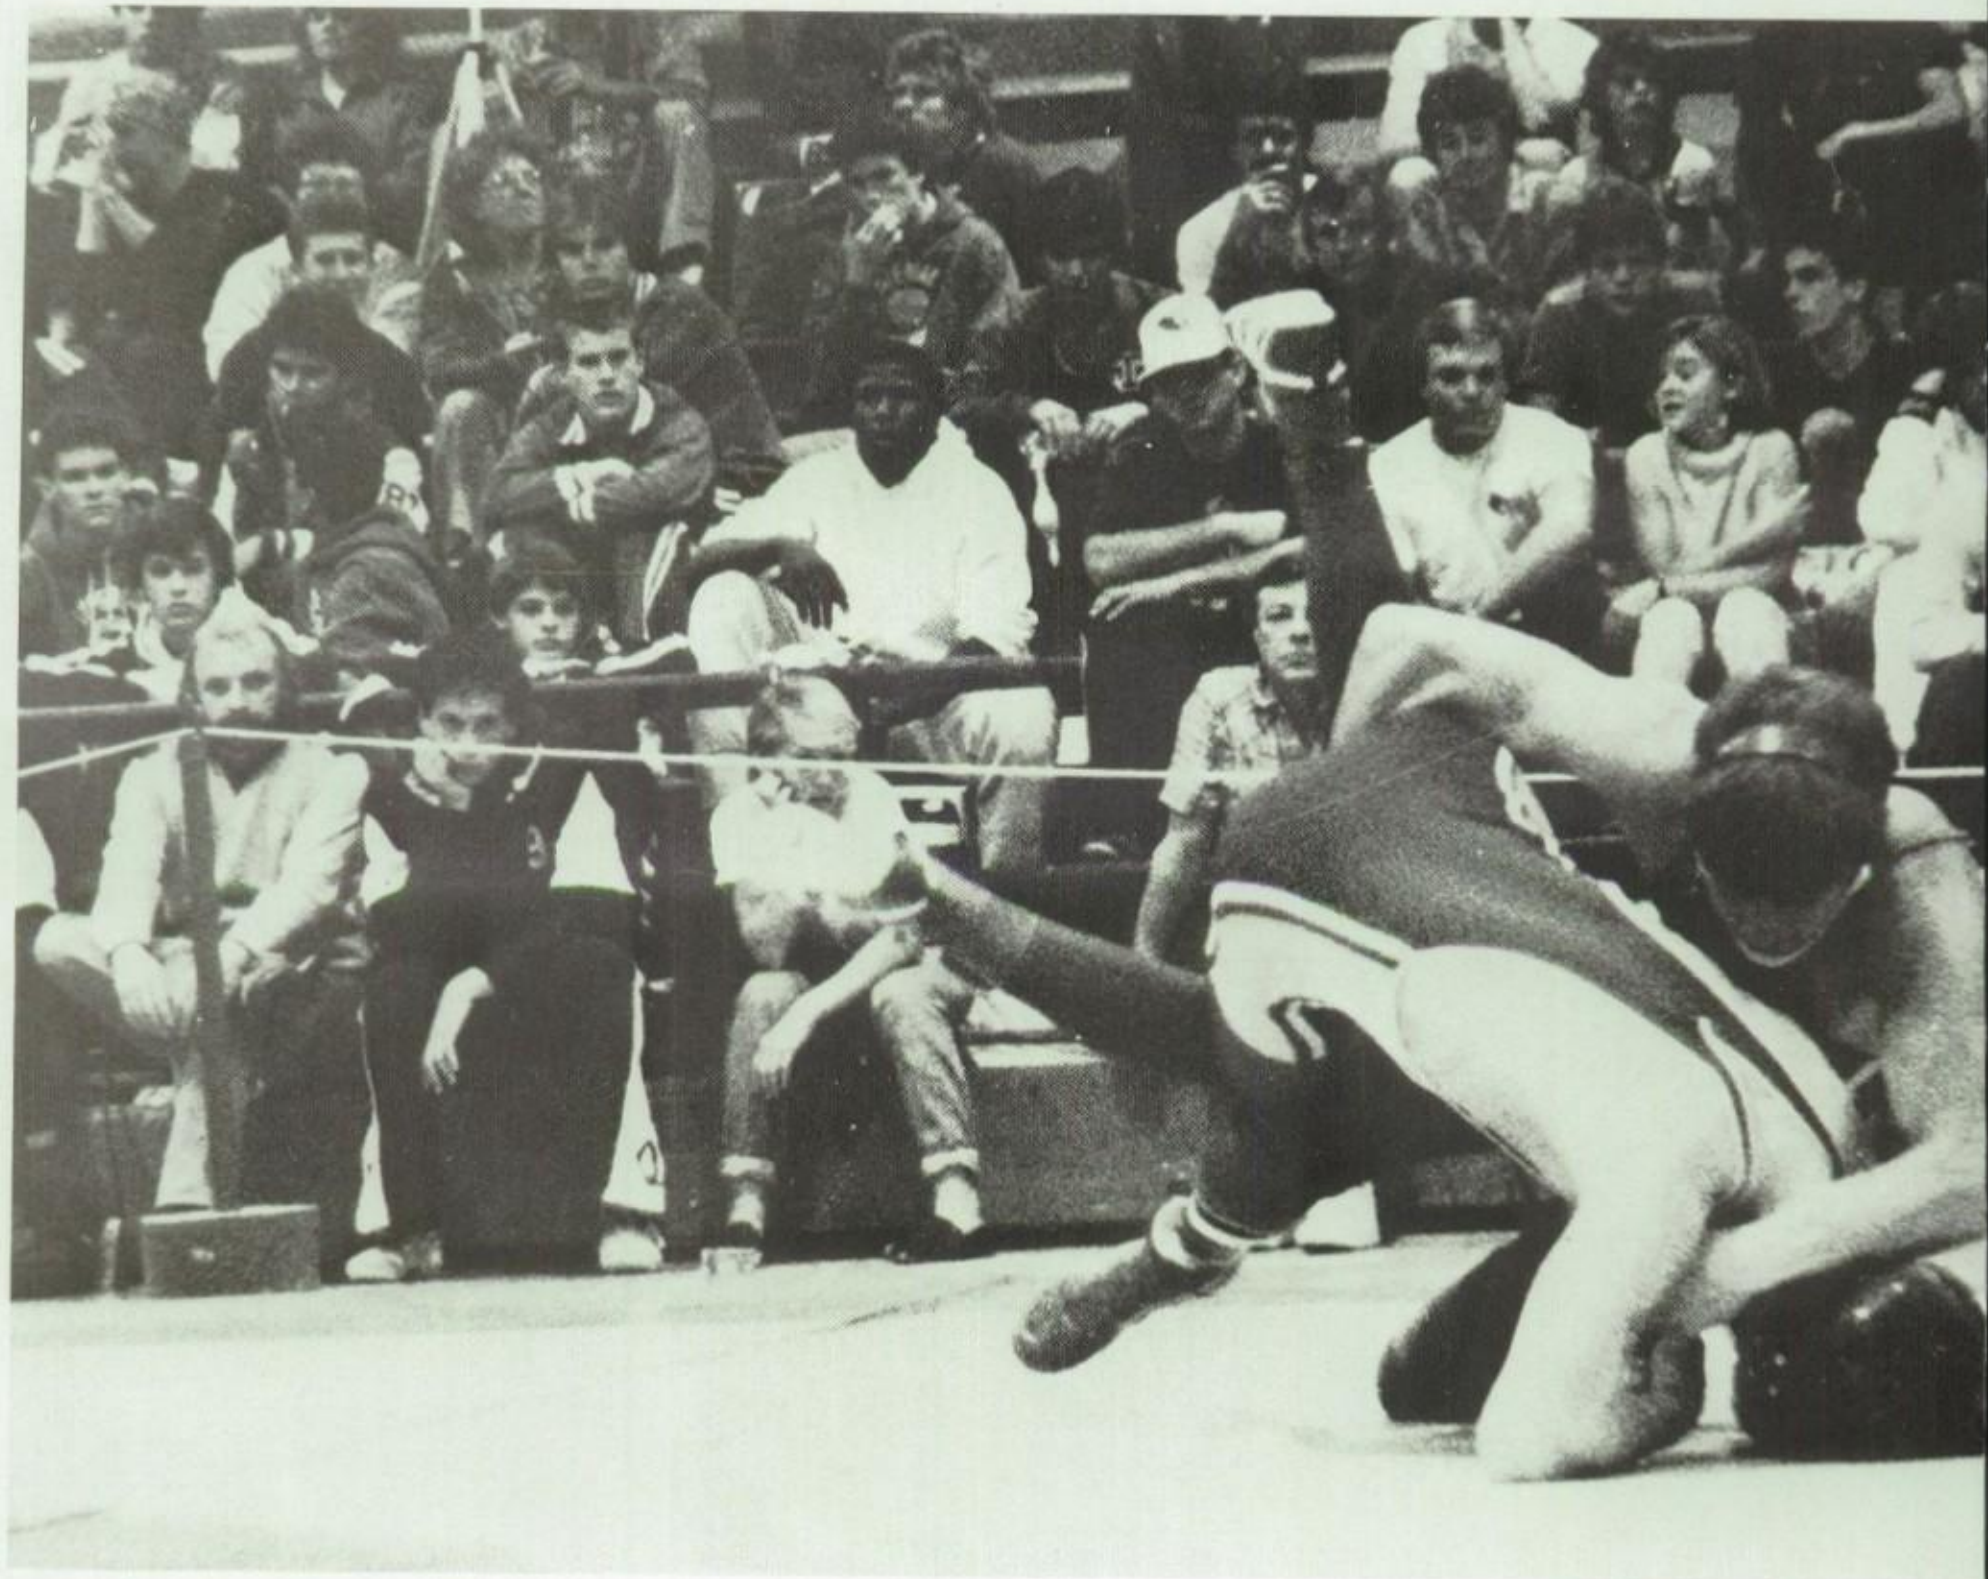

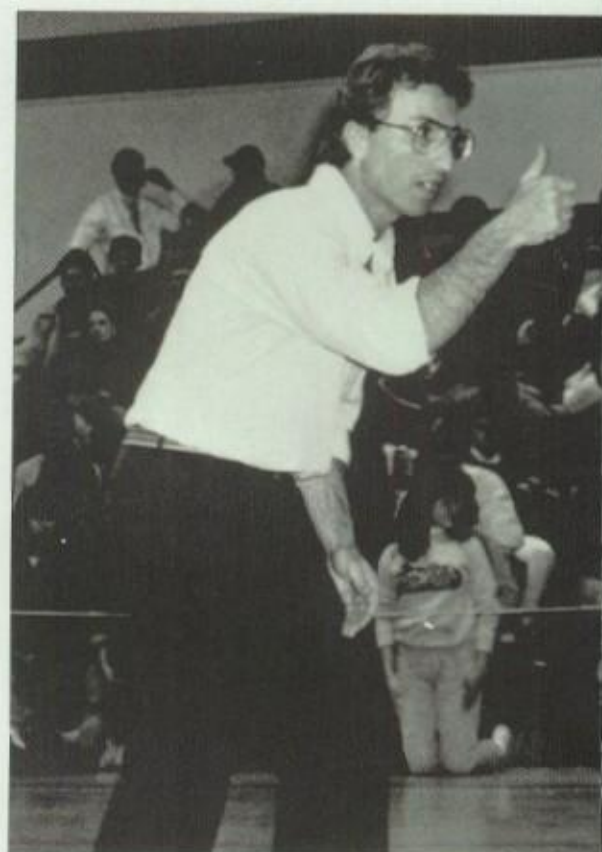

Senior Tim Briggs hopes to make 1986 the year to achieve his goals, which are to, "win CIF, Masters, and State," Tim says with a breath of confidence. "In preparing to reach those goals, I have played football, lifted weights, and lost 15 pounds." He says losing is the hard part. "I've worked a lot harder this year than any other year 'cause I want to win State."

In the past as a youth wrestler Tim achieved many goals. He has been a national champ, zone champ, regional champ and a state champ. Last year as a junior he competed on the California National Team. Dave Myers, another Eagle wrestler, joined him. They both went to Iowa to wrestle in the National Championships. Last year Tim also won CIF, Masters and placed fourth in State.

Granite Hills wrestling coaches Pete Grisafi and Guy Gist believe that Tim has the potential to win State this year. "If Tim wants to win State, he'll win State. I have a lot of confidence in him," says head coach Pete Grisafi.

This year the Eagle Varsity wrestling team is in contention for the Grossmont League title. Granite Hills wrestling coaches agree that, "the team has a good shot at the league title," but they also view the Eagle team as a "better tournament team than a duel meet team."

▲ Digging his chin in, Aaron Gaeir puts a painful move on his opponent. Aaron is expected to make the state tournament for a second time.

◀ Picking up and taking down his opponent, Ed Voss gets another win for the Eagles. GH lost to Monte Visto by a discouraging 2 points.

Lettermen lead offense

◀ Tonya Slojowski and Melanie Sommers celebrate a goal scored by Melanie. The Eagles won that game against Mt. Miguel 8-0.

▼ Martie Creech struggles to get up after she is knocked down by a Brave. Martie was best known for her hustle on the team this season.

► Michelle Ironside shoots past the goalie at Mt. Miguel. Michelle had an excellent scoring season.

The girls' soccer team added another successful season to their record. This year the Eagles were led by returning lettermen Althea Salas, Laura Herron and Kirsten Fenn. Althea Salas, a senior, completed her third season of soccer at Granite Hills this year and continues to excel. Althea is a great asset to this team; "She really has speed on the offense," explained Aimee Robert, also a returning letterman. Laura Herron, and Kirsten Fenn were noted several times for their excellent soccer talent by many local newspapers. Another outstanding player was goalie Angel Tyler. She had several shutouts throughout the season. This same team, with the exception of senior Althea Salas, Stephanie Golden, and Cassie Farrar, will return next year just as strong, and with many key players. Brenna Bravo will play her fourth season at Granite Hills next year.

The 1985-86 soccer season proved to be executed with much talent, improvement and stability as coach Salinas replied, "I was very pleased with my girls this season. They are the best! Next year will be one to look forward to."

Boys conquer adversity

The boys' soccer team, plagued by a flood of injuries, warned of a bad season. In spite of appearances, however, the young team prospered. Coach Rich Valenzuela agreed that the team "had to overcome adversity" in order to succeed. The team did just that, finishing the season in third place with a record of eight wins, four losses, and four ties.

To gain confidence, the group of athletes found numerous ways to maintain high spirits. One of their many antics was when, at the beginning of each game, Scott Whitmore would kneel on the grass while the rest of the players put their hands on top of his head, and yelled, "Eagles!" or, "Win it!"

At the end of the season, awards were given to the players whose efforts helped the team most. Ted Decoteau was awarded most valuable defensive player while Eric Peterson ran away with most valuable offensive player, most valuable player overall, and co-most valuable player in the entire Grossmont League. His achievements in soccer will long be remembered by Granite Hills.

Eric was not the only Peterson to receive honors. Mrs. Peterson, his mother, received the Most Inspirational Player award for going to every game, rain or shine, and ringing her cowbell with every good play.

New club seeks support

The 1984 Olympics spurred a great deal of interest in a variety of sports, one being volleyball. In the past, volleyball has been a popular beach sport for both sexes; in school, however, it has generally been deemed a girls' sport. Even now, the team is not a full-fledged sport. The Grossmont District decided to initiate boys' volleyball as a "club," and will only classify it as a sport if it proves to be successful. This club is encouraged by ASB but is not funded by it. This means all the boys have to pay for their uniforms and pitch in some money for the referees.

Because the Gymnastics team practices after school, boys' volleyball must practice at night. Games, as well, must be scheduled at times when the gym is free. Coach Renate Busch, who served as the coach of the Girls' Varsity Team, will return to her position and coach the new boys' team. Renate Busch feels, "very confident the season will be a success because volleyball is an exciting sport and the majority of the people are enthused about the new club."

If one more district develops a league, the teams will have the opportunity to compete for CIF honors. The team hopes for support from spectators to become a Grossmont District Sport.

► Ted Decoteau sets his teammate during a scrimmage. Scrimmages give the players a better foresight for games.

Girls see new faces

The junior varsity girls' basketball team saw a lot of new faces this year, as well as the return of three players. This year the Eagles seemed to surprise many teams with their newfound aggressiveness and ball handling. Leslie Wilson was one of the new faces who greatly impressed everyone, even Coach Cookie Sullivan: "Leslie is a great defensive player. She constantly steals the ball away from the opposition." Lisa Sanchez was the all-around team leader. Being a returning letterman, she put her old knowledge to work and built it up throughout the season. She was the point guard on the team and averaged about fourteen points a game. The remaining two returning player were forwards, Kathy L'Italian, and Jenniffer Jacobs. They both scored about four points a game. The starters were Lisa Sanchez, Leslie Wilson, Trish Wooley, Shelley Sampson and Janice Badalato. The Eagles ended their season with a record of eleven wins and five losses. "Next year," says Cookie Sullivan, "our new strong talent will improve and we will blow them all away!"

- ▼ Trish Wooley prepares to do a lay-up. Trish was a freshman starter this year.
- Lisa Sanchez performs a jump shot. In this game against Valhalla, she scored the winning basket.
- Kelly Butcher guards off a Valhalla opponent. Kelly, a newcomer to the ball club, was a very strong defensive player.
- Point Guard, Lisa Sanchez dribbles down the line, preparing to make a shot. Lisa was this year's Most Valuable player.

Girls aim high

The Girls' Varsity Basketball team did better than predicted at the beginning of the 1985-86 season. The Daily Californian estimated they would place ninth out of nine teams, due to the inexperience of some of the players and the loss of others. However, the team managed to keep themselves in seventh place with a record of 3-12.

A good offense featured Julie Clancy, Kim Murray, and Julie Creech. Julie Clancy was the top scorer of the season, averaging about 15 points per game. The team's defense also improved greatly over the season.

► Despite her Vaquero opponents, Kim Murray goes up for the shot. The Eagles' team defeated El Capitan both times they played.

► Breaking away from the group, April Butcher runs to the hoop. April, a senior, was the captain of the team this season.

► With a look of aggression, Julie Clancy wrenches the ball free. Julie was the top Eagle scorer of the season.

Top row: C. Showcroft, J. Clancy, K. Murray, A. Burcher, J. Creech, M. Fendrick, R. Walker. Front row: B. Howard, Manager; J. Holbert, Coach.

► Jumping high in the air, Chris Liedike, hits the tip-off. Chris and his teammate Mike Locke are called Twin Towers by all of their teammates.

► Reaching to have possession of the ball, Justin Rees fights for his team. The coach reaches them to be aggressive players.

Coach impresses players

This year the Junior Varsity Basketball team had a new coach. Coach Ted Cusick came from Canada, where he coached a Varsity team for twelve years. By March 31st he had to make a decision whether to stay here or go back to Canada to coach there. "I am impressed with the kids and their attitudes. This is a good school and the parents help out a lot at the games," commented the Coach.

Coach Cusick put in a lot of time and helped each person individually. "He was prepared for us and he had us practicing two hour a night. He was dedicated to us and I think he is a positive coach," stated Mike Locke. "All of the teammates got along with him and are glad he can stay and coach next year," commented James Endicott.

◀ While in the air, Vernie Wutzke shoots for another two. Vernie wasn't able to complete the rest of the season due to a broken arm.

▶ Jumping for a loose ball, Joe McLaughlin and Ken Weyand reach high. Joe was an outstanding guard and forward for Granite Hills.

▼ Defending the man, Jon Tenney and Ken Weyand double team an El Capitan player. In spite of their efforts we lost the game.

Team rebuilds

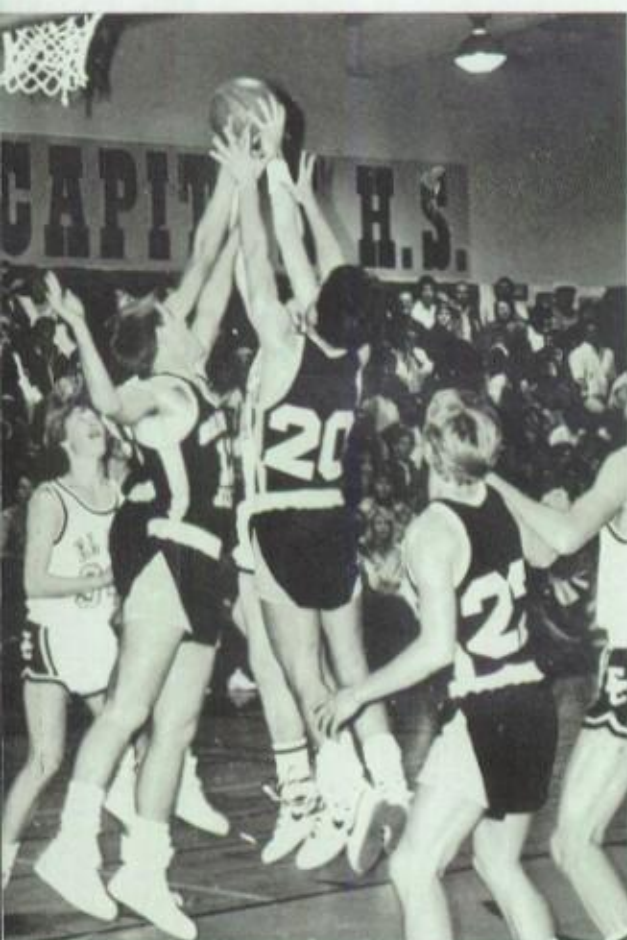

Although Granite Hills had a tough year in Varsity basketball, it was a year for rebuilding. The team never really had any permanent positions. Coach Mark Curran did a lot of position switching.

During practices, Coach Curran evaluated the players and decided which position they would play in the upcoming game. One positive aspect of this procedure was the fact that each player had the opportunity to play in each game.

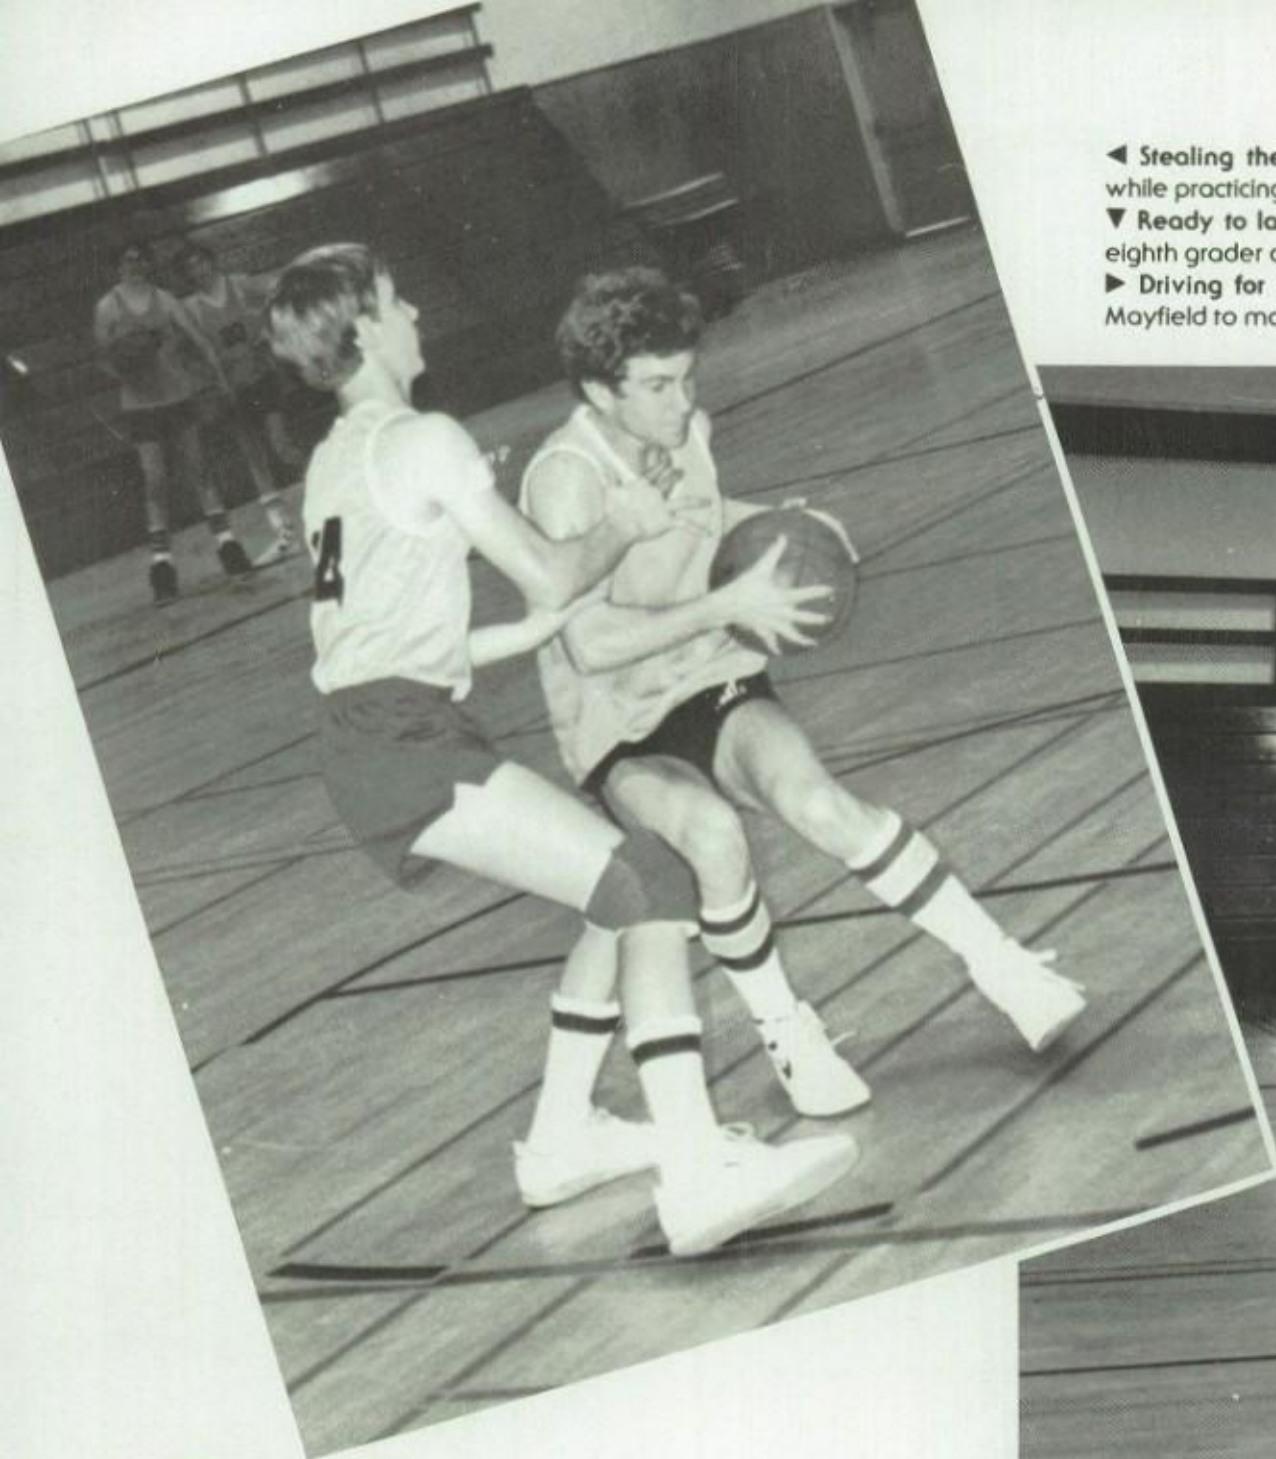

Eagle junior Jon Tenney was a consistent starter because of outstanding performances in games and in practices. Jon led the league in freethrow percentage with 82% from the line. Playing strong defense, Joe McLaughlin and Jeff Adcock had many great performances. Although Vernie Wutzke broke his arm, he was still among the league leaders in scoring.

Even though the Eagle team did not perform as well as they had hoped, they were supported by a cheering section mainly comprised of the team's "Hoop Maids," the boys' parents and a few students.

The Hoop Maids did a lot for the team, such as keeping stats, painting signs, and baking cookies. Most of all, they cheered for their Eagle team. The Hoop Maids were there at every game.

◀ Stealing the ball away, Matt Mikolajewski takes it from Tim Underwood while practicing. Both Matt and Tim played regularly as starters.

▼ Ready to lay it up, Scott Goergens prepares to make the shot. Scott is an eighth grader at Montgomery.

► Driving for the basket, Tom Underwood maneuvers himself around Kiev Mayfield to make the lay-up. The team practices lay-ups before each game.

Freshman prepare

The purpose of the Freshman Basketball team at Granite Hills is to prepare young players for the more competitive Junior Varsity and Varsity teams. The team has a very demanding schedule which includes late night practices and traveling to schools outside the Grossmont District. The attitude of most players is, as Eddie Ayala states, "Participating on the Freshman team will help the players move on to J.V. level." This improves the skills and aggressiveness of the players. This year's coach, Lan Underwood, guided the Freshman Eagles to a 7 win, 7 loss record.

Pain brings gain

When students hear about Track, they usually picture runners. Though running is an important facet of Track, it is certainly not the sole activity of every member. Less popularized aspects of the sport are the field events. For athletes who do not particularly enjoy running, field events offer the long jump, the high jump, discus, and shot-put. Coach Wargo feels that events are equally important because, "You could not win a track meet without them; they score a substantial amount of points."

Hard work and determination were major motivations for the team this year, especially in the early summer heat. Unlike sports such as football, which have a great deal of spectator support, Track requires a great deal of self-motivation. Kim Fossett believes, "It takes a lot of self-discipline to push yourself those extra steps, but in the end you come out the winner." A popular saying on the field is, "During those times when your muscles ache and you're tired of making that same dumb mistake, just remember the way to fortune and fame is to say to yourself 'No Pain, No Gain'."

► Traci Wicklund and Cindy Kroesch take off straight from the starting blocks. The Girls' and Boys' Track teams often practiced together.

▲ Jane Scholten jumps the long jump as Melanie McMillen watches. Field events are frequently overlooked, however, they need skill just as everything else does.

▼ Ken Goss practices throwing the disk. Many hours of practice are needed to perfect this sport.
► Throwing the shot is easy for Dan Barnes. Dan also played football this year for the Eagles.

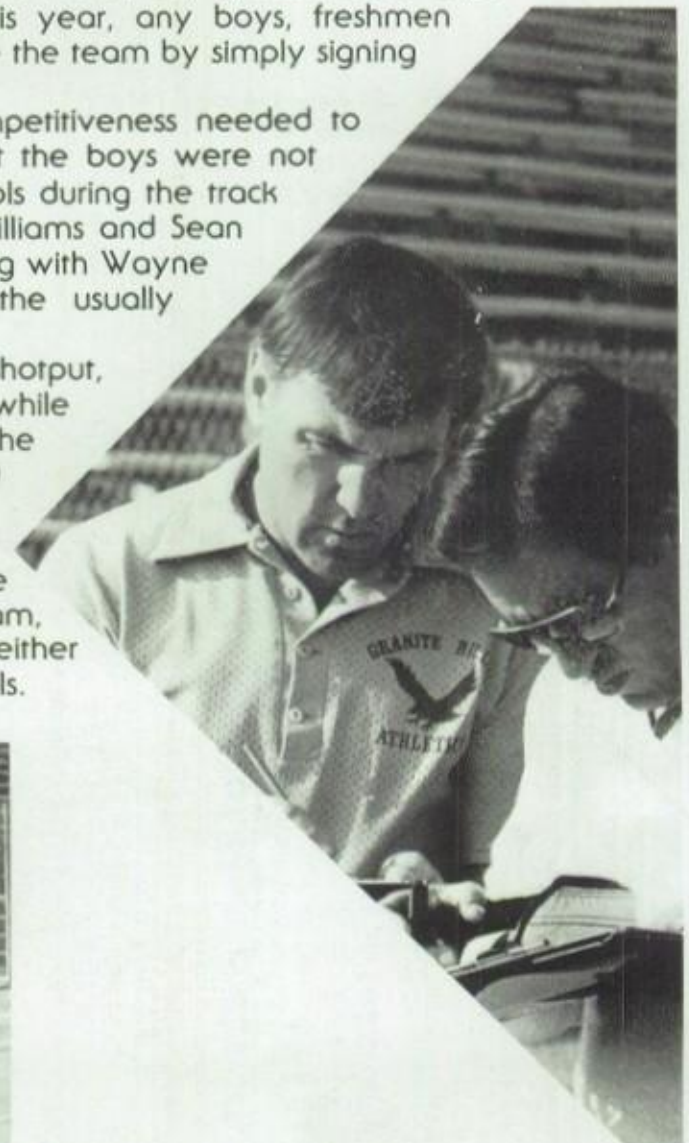

Boys are on the right track

For the past few years, there have not been any tryouts for the boys' track and field team. Likewise, this year, any boys, freshmen through seniors, automatically made the team by simply signing up.

Just because there was no competitiveness needed to join the team does not mean that the boys were not competitive against the other schools during the track meets. In the track events, Tom Williams and Sean Sterling did well for the Eagles, along with Wayne Hickey who performed well in the usually under-publicized field events.

The field events include the shotput, discus, high jump, and long jump, while some of the track events include the 100, 220, 440, mile, 2 mile, 440 relay and mile relay to name a few.

Track and field is unique in that the athletes not only participate as a team, but they also strive individually to either better their times or increase their skills.

◀ Rick Stauffer increases his jumping skills. Rick did well as a hurdler for this year's team.

► Coaches Wargo and Arrieta confer on the sidelines. Many times coaches consult each other for advice.

◀ Jim McMahon barely beats Jeff Delaney to the tape. Eagle runners were especially competitive this year.

Golf team drives to win

The golf team's motto is "Working to win!" What the average person doesn't realize is that golf is a physically strenuous sport. The average golfer uses muscles that are untouched in many other sports. Extreme pressure is placed on the back muscles during the swing. Back and forearm muscles must be firmly developed in order to obtain the speed and power needed to hit a good shot. Golfers must often stay out of games due to twisted wrists, back pains, and ankle sprains. Despite the straining effects, the students find the game well worth it, especially after a birdie is scored or another ball sunk. Becky Parker states "it's a natural high to score a low score."

▲ At the top of her follow through, Summer Lee practices for the golfing season. Summer also plays in tournaments away from school, where she has won numerous awards.

► Putting at Singing Hills, Andy Heiskla steadies himself. Singing Hills is the home course for our school.

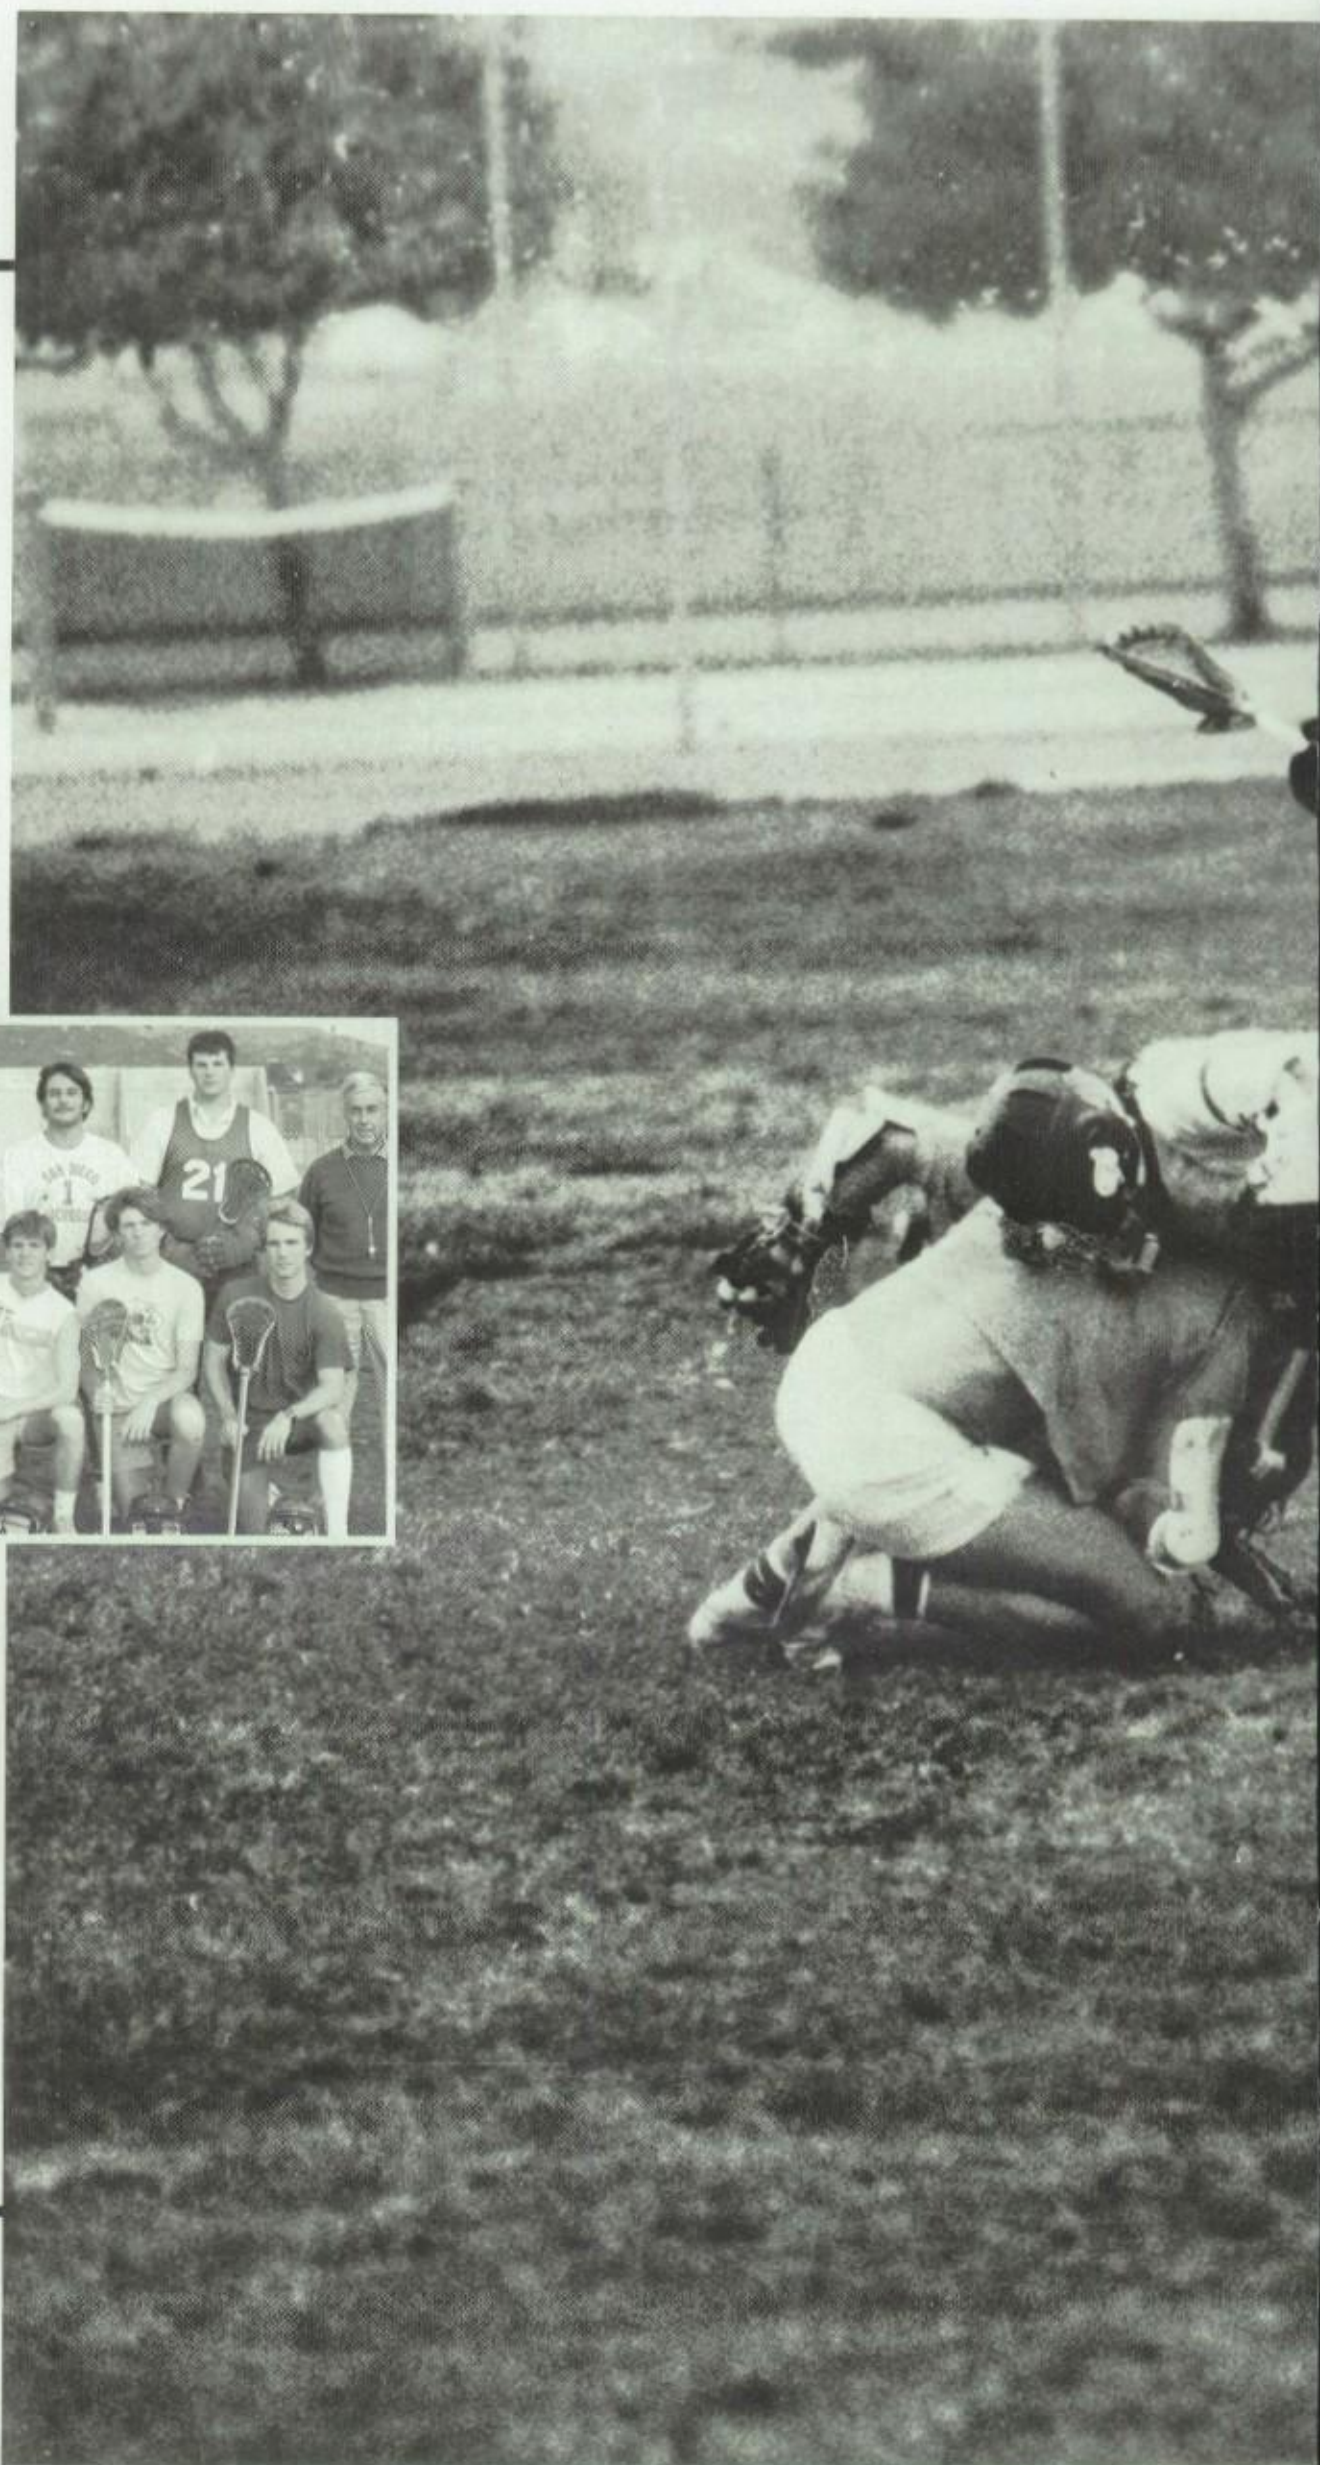

▲ Rex Stacey checks the wind before his swing. Golfers realize that wind is an important factor to their game.

► David Strong and Kenny Cauthon fight for the ball. The game starts with a face-off between two opposing players.

► James McGregor tries to elude the pursuit of Garrett Ashburn. It is legal to use a stick to jar the ball from another player's possession.

Lacrosse sticks out

Lacrosse is a relatively new sport to grace the Granite Hills campus. The sport originated in 1492 by North Eastern Indians and has now been played by Granite Hills students for three years. Lacrosse is not yet a Granite Hills sport. The reason that Lacrosse is not an official school sport is a lack of funding. Sports such as football, which have more spectator support, receive the majority of the funds.

The rules and regulations of the game are made by a board of directors for the eight competing high school teams. The object of the game is to move a solid rubber ball down the field, using a stick with a netted end, into the opposition's goal. During the game, players wear chest pads, helmets and gloves to protect their bodies from the constant physical contact.

Three star players at Granite Hills were Ken Cauthan, James McGregor and Dave Strong. Coach McGregor calls them all "superb athletes." Though the team is fairly new, it has a chance to send a few players to Australia to play foreign teams. Lacrosse, a fairly unknown sport in the past, is now growing in popularity.

I'll tumble for ya

Although the Granite Hills gymnastics team makes this sport appear simple and uncomplicated, it is in fact one of the most physically demanding and complex activities that students participate in here on campus. Ellen Henderson, a four year Varsity veteran, reflects, "Gymnastics is long hours of hard work, sore muscles, and blistered hands. But we get a certain satisfaction in our accomplishments." Another returning Varsity gymnast is junior Shannon McGrath, who was awarded Best Varsity Optional All Around Gymnast in 1985.

The four areas in which the gymnasts may complete are bars, vault, floor, and beam. Within these areas, both the J.V. and Varsity Compulsory teams perform set routines which are used by all of the gymnasts. These routines are upgraded every four years, this year being the time of change. On the other hand, the Varsity Optional team, composed of the most advanced gymnasts, create and perform their own routines.

◀ Shannon McGrath demonstrates a handstand on the beam. She was a bonus to the team because of her "all-around" abilities.

◀ Ellen Henderson soars over the uneven parallel bars. She has been an asset to the team for four years.

▲ Ellen Henderson and Kim Furrow are two of the seniors on the Varsity Team. Both place well at their competitions.

▲ Dona Schaffer poses gracefully on the beam. She is an outstanding Junior Varsity gymnast.

◀ Following through. Laurie Becker hits deep into center during practice. She has played in Bobby Sox League for six years as well as for our team.

▲ Outfield practice finds Tracey Minear reacting for a fly ball. Traci plays pitcher this year.

▲ Angie Donte takes her turn during pitching practice. Eight years of Bobbie Sox and Girls' Softball Association before high school helped her to increase her skills.

Varied practices raised hopes

Because batting is a key skill for a successful softball team, the JV squad spends much of practice time on batting practice. One regular drill has the girls working in pairs with one tossing the ball to the other at close range (sort of like over-the-line). The batter hits the ball into the fence. This drill is designed to improve a batter's timing.

In an effort to make batting realistic, the team practices with the pitchers, not a batting machine, throwing from the mound.

Lisa Laavelli, one of the major hitters on the team, finds that the "batting practices really help."

Power hitters on the team include Laura Becker and Marty Creech, who can be counted on for extra bases when they come to bat.

This additional practice for hitting also helps pitchers Angie Donte, Holly Moffer and Carla Klingsheurn, who are rotated during practices. According to Donte, this practice schedule will allow our girls to "stand up against all the other teams."

Hurling the ball, pitcher Jennifer Beauloye strikes out another batter. Jennifer is one of the best pitchers in the Grossmont league.

Sliding into home plate, Kirsten Fenn scores another run of the Eagles. Kirsten, who is only a sophomore, starts at center field.

Warming up for a scrimmage against Christian, Julie Clancy concentrates on her swing. Julie is one of the team's leading hitters.

Natural athlete leads girls

One of the major contributing factors to the Varsity Softball team's success was the fact that seven of last year's Varsity players returned. This gave the Granite Hills team an overwhelming advantage over other Grossmont League teams.

Senior Jennifer Beauloye, who was named #2 pitcher during the 1985 season, returned to pitch another season. According to Julie Clancy, "Jennifer is the real star of the team. Her pitching is incredible." Even in her early senior year, she was predicted to be among the league's top hurlers by the Dailey Californian. The team's top returning hitters were Dona Loshonkohl, Heather Gilbertson, and Julie Clancy. Coach Neel put a great deal of faith in Julie, crediting her as a "gifted, natural athlete, and a quick shortstop."

Joey Schulmeister leads off another inning with a hit. His expert play at second base contributed to a strong defense.

◀ Troy Lynn readies to fire, another strike. Troy really helped in the team effort by playing many positions.

◀ Brian Runge nails a runner at third base. Brian's bat and glove at the hot corner made him a valuable asset to the team.

Experience adds depth

The 1986 J.V. Baseball team was a close-knit group. Although the team lost several key players to the Varsity squad, many promising freshmen, including outfielder Brian Giles and pitcher/catcher Pete Stacy, came to support the club. Led by experienced sophomores, like catcher Shane Boyd, shortstop Mike Checchi, and second baseman Joey Schumeister, the team worked hard together but also had a good time. One reason for their team unity was that most of the players had played together since Little League. Marc Steinbuch summed up the team atmosphere: "We have a good time at practice which takes a lot of pressure off us and keeps us loose."

Adding to the spirit of the team was first year coach Gene Watkins. Under Coach Watkins' leadership, the team showed their unified spirit by displaying a varied attack in outslugging Mt. Carmel.

That is not to say the team is all play and no work. The players worked hard with practice every day when not playing games. Their game schedule was heavy, consisting of the Mission Bay Junior Varsity and Lions Tournaments and the tough Grossmont League for another sixteen games.

Everyone is a star

Coach Gordy Thompson, in his 23rd year as our Varsity baseball coach, does not believe in a "star" system for his team. According to Thompson, "What I have tried to do is blend together a team that will continue the Granite Hills' winning tradition."

Nevertheless, Thompson has a solid squad. Kurt Southworth, playing right field, headed the outfielders and was an exceptional hitter. Donnie Carroll and George Bishop, both with good throwing arms, played outfield and pitched also. The really strong infield included Wayne Carpenter, one of the new additions to the team, playing first base. Jeff Schwartz and Todd Parker at second base and shortstop kept the infield under control. Jeff, who had good ball handling, and Todd, who was the fastest on the team, set up most of the combinations. Eric Peterson and Shawn O'Coyne played third. Jason Degroote and Kirk Gerner split the duties behind the plate with the pitchers led by Aaron Petrich, including Mike Raskind, Dan Nerat, Scott Weber and Garrett Ashburn also pitched.

◀ Stretching for the ball, Wayne Carpenter tries to grab another out for GH. Wayne was just one of many additions to the varsity squad this year.

Team anticipates bright future

Although the Varsity team lost four all-league players to graduation last year, this year's team promised to be a good one. Consisting of mostly Juniors, the Varsity team will return again next year after a complete season together. Sophomore Preston Waters, highly ranked in San Diego and a second year letterman, was the top player on the roster. Senior Brian Morris, a past second team all-league selection, bolstered the team with his powers in both singles and doubles play. Juniors Sam Halabo, Jeff Merritt, Jon Stone and Jon Tenney all had previous Varsity experience and improved considerably in the off-season. Yoon Cho, Chris Johnson and Reid Marquand all contributed to the team's success and provided the team with the most depth that the program has known in recent years.

This year's Junior Varsity team was a young one, with Freshmen making up the majority of the squad. Singles players Heath Beason and Clint DeNure led the Eagles with their skillful backhands doubles players Bob Gillespie and Jason Smith rounded off the roster.

▲ Volleying smoothly, Jon Tenney demonstrates his skill at the net. Tenney competes in doubles as well as singles.

▲ "It was in!" yells Chris Johnson as he points to the side line. In addition to playing singles, Chris often teams up with Sam Halabo for doubles play.

Specialists train

Steve Tucker, the Coach of the Girls' Swin team, was quite instrumental in the team's success. Although the girls only had two weeks to get in shape before the opening of swim season, they practiced diligently. "Our Coach put in a lot of time to help us individually on what we needed to work on. He kept our individual times for each meet which helped us to see if we improved or not," commented Bonnie Smith. The first two weeks of practice, Coach Tucker worked with the girls on sprints, starts, and turns. To know what stroke the girls were specialized in, the Coach continuously timed them. "Since we don't have divers this year, we have to be strong on the other events. We have strong swimmers in our distant and sprint events," stated Coach Tucker.

Many times a Coach will regard a team as a single entity, and treat it as such. Coach Tucker was the exception to this unfortunate rule, however. By concentrating on each athlete's individual progress, he was able to guide the girls through the season.

◀ As he jumps off the board, Jeff Harrol shows his diving skill. Jeff also swims the 100 breaststrokes for the Eagle squad.

▼ It's a bird! It's a plane! No, it's Speedoman! David Hackett was not only one of the team's best swimmers, but also the team's most spirited and inspirational leader as well.

▼ Freshman Joe Campbell flashes his winning smile. Joe was in the water polo team as well as the swim team this year.

▶ Andy Harold gives it his all in a 100 backstroke race. Andy has been involved in both boys' swim and water polo since his freshman year.

Friendship builds team

This year's Boys' Varsity swim team was basically a young team, with only three seniors returning to the squad. The team was still trying to rebuild from a low point two years ago when only ten people tried out. This year the team had over thirty members, most of whom were experienced. Many were second-year lettermen. The over-all experience of the team added to their strength and helped them achieve a good record this season. Because many of the swimmers also played water polo together, there was a strong sense of camaraderie and friendship among the swimmers.

The Junior Varsity team also did well this season. They worked especially hard in order to increase the chances of the Varsity team placing next year. Both Varsity and Junior Varsity divers also did their best for the Eagles. The boy's swim teams not only achieved success together this year, but they also had a great time, as they are not only teammates, but friends as well.

UNDERCLASS

Students acquire new responsibilities

Many pressures, some at home and some at school, are at work to make students more responsible. In schools, "Excellence in Academics" is attempting to increase academic requirements. In fact, the California State College System has recently raised entrance requirements for the class of '88 to include four years of English, three of Math, two of a foreign language, a year of laboratory science, a year of fine arts and six semesters of academic electives.

Throughout this effort by adults to place more emphasis on academics, students are feeling the pinch. As Junior Rochelle Rice laments, "Sometimes I just wish I could have fun and not worry about everything."

Freshman Clint De Nure worries that he will have to drop some extra curricular activities if requirements are raised because "I presently spend approximately thirty minutes per class every night on homework." He even predicts "an increase in the number of drop outs" if more academic classes are added to the graduation requirements.

On the other hand, the fast-paced high school life does have its advantages. The Real World, as parents and teachers call it, looms in the near future, with all of its privileges and responsibilities. The heavier the load, some argue, the more students will be prepared to face that other world after they graduate.

Sophomore Lara Poulson sums up this position with the philosophical attitude that "I know it will pay off in the end."

Officers Learn

Fast

Being a freshman officer means learning the ropes while trying to earn a reasonable amount of money towards senior activities like the prom. In their first semester in office, this year's freshman officers learned rapidly about the trials of fund raising.

Their first money-maker was not. They lost money on the wrapping paper sale at Christmas.

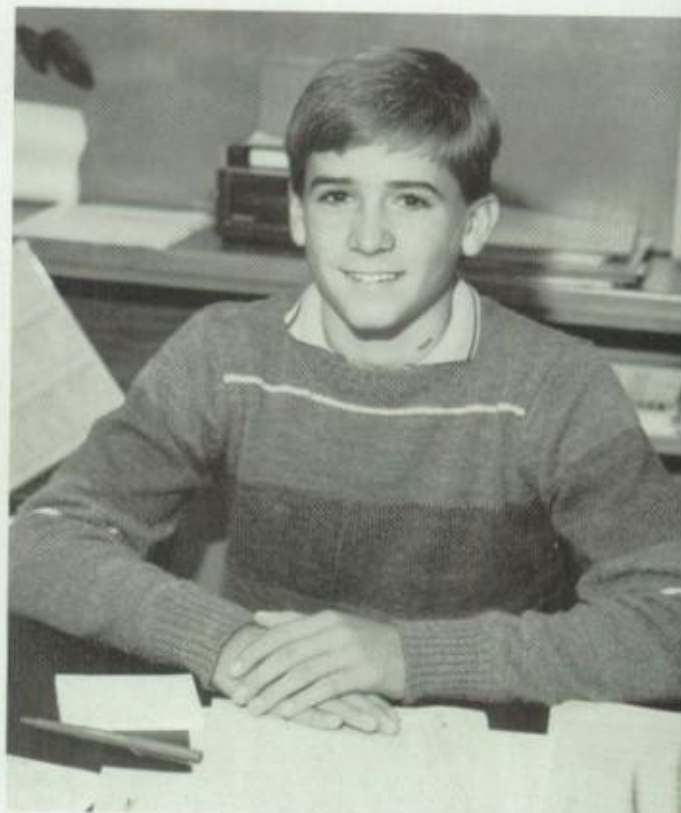

Car washes held off and on at Second and Madison across from Taco Bell were more successful and fun for the participants. But as second semester loomed, the class of '89 found their pockets nearly empty, with $136 their total assets.

To overcome this problem, the officers, Robby Christian, president; Brian Russell, vice president; Clint DeNure, treasurer; and Heather Garrow, secretary, met with the senators every other week. Their advisor, Mr. Decker, added his business expertise.

According to Brian Russell, most of these meetings were devoted to fund raising ideas. A favorite, the candy sale, was vetoed, and in the process, Brian and his fellow officers learned that "you can't have fund raisers at the same time as another class, you have to give ASB two week's notice, and you can't have a project for more than one week at a time." Later, the candy sale was resurrected, with the class making over $600.

With a clear understanding of the pitfalls of making money, the officers look forward to the second semester and "a Valentine's Day rose sale — another big thing we're doing," according to Russell.

Play Ball!

Boys Love to Win

While most students are beside the tree opening presents or out with friends over Christmas vacation, Steve Scheidle and Mike Beardsley were in another country. As members of the Puma National Soccer Team, they were playing soccer in Brazil.

To gain a place on this exciting team, Steve and Mike tried out against 300 contenders, with only sixteen making the team from the west coast. Before this year, both honored their skills by playing for AYSO soccer teams in El Cajon. This year both are members of the high school soccer team, when they are in town.

Frosh Find Their Way

Howdy Freshmen

Granite Hills can seem terrifying to an incoming freshman. Many new students compare Granite's spacious campus to that of their junior high's, and they are awe-struck. "I'll never find my own way around," is the discouraging moan of newcomers. To help ease their anxieties, the ASB organized a "Howdy Day," for the freshmen.

Howdy Day serves as an orientation for the new students. On a summer day, students gather in the gym for a lecture which provided valuable information. At this time freshmen can find their classrooms, meet faculty members, and ask questions. While the first day of high school can still be traumatic, Howdy Day seems to ease some fears.

Class of '89

Soars

Huddled together in a quivering mass, the class of '89 waited expectantly for their turn to be initiated into the main stream of Granite Hills life. As is traditional, the incoming freshmen and new staff members had to pass through a tunnel of football players while they flapped their wings to show their transformation from "turkeys" to "Eagles." While some refused to flap their wings, thus remaining turkeys, most flapped and displayed true Eagle spirit.

Freshman Christi Calvert remembers that she was afraid she'd be embarrassed but feels it is better than getting dumped into trash cans and stuff other schools' upper classmen would do.

Michelle Meier enjoyed the exercise but really looks forward to "watching next year's freshmen" go through the ritual.

Dreams Come True

Most people merely dream their dreams, but George Heflin goes a step further: he lives his. He and other members of the Pacific Southwest Railway Museum restore old locomotives and operate the old trains every Saturday.

The museum is also involved in other projects such as relaying tracks, with plans to reopen the old San Diego and Arizona Railway right-of-way for vintage trains.

George serves as a brakeman, switch operator, and porter on the trains. He feels that although, "it's a lot of hard work, it's rewarding when a train runs again after a long period of dormancy."

Class of 89 Goes to the Dogs

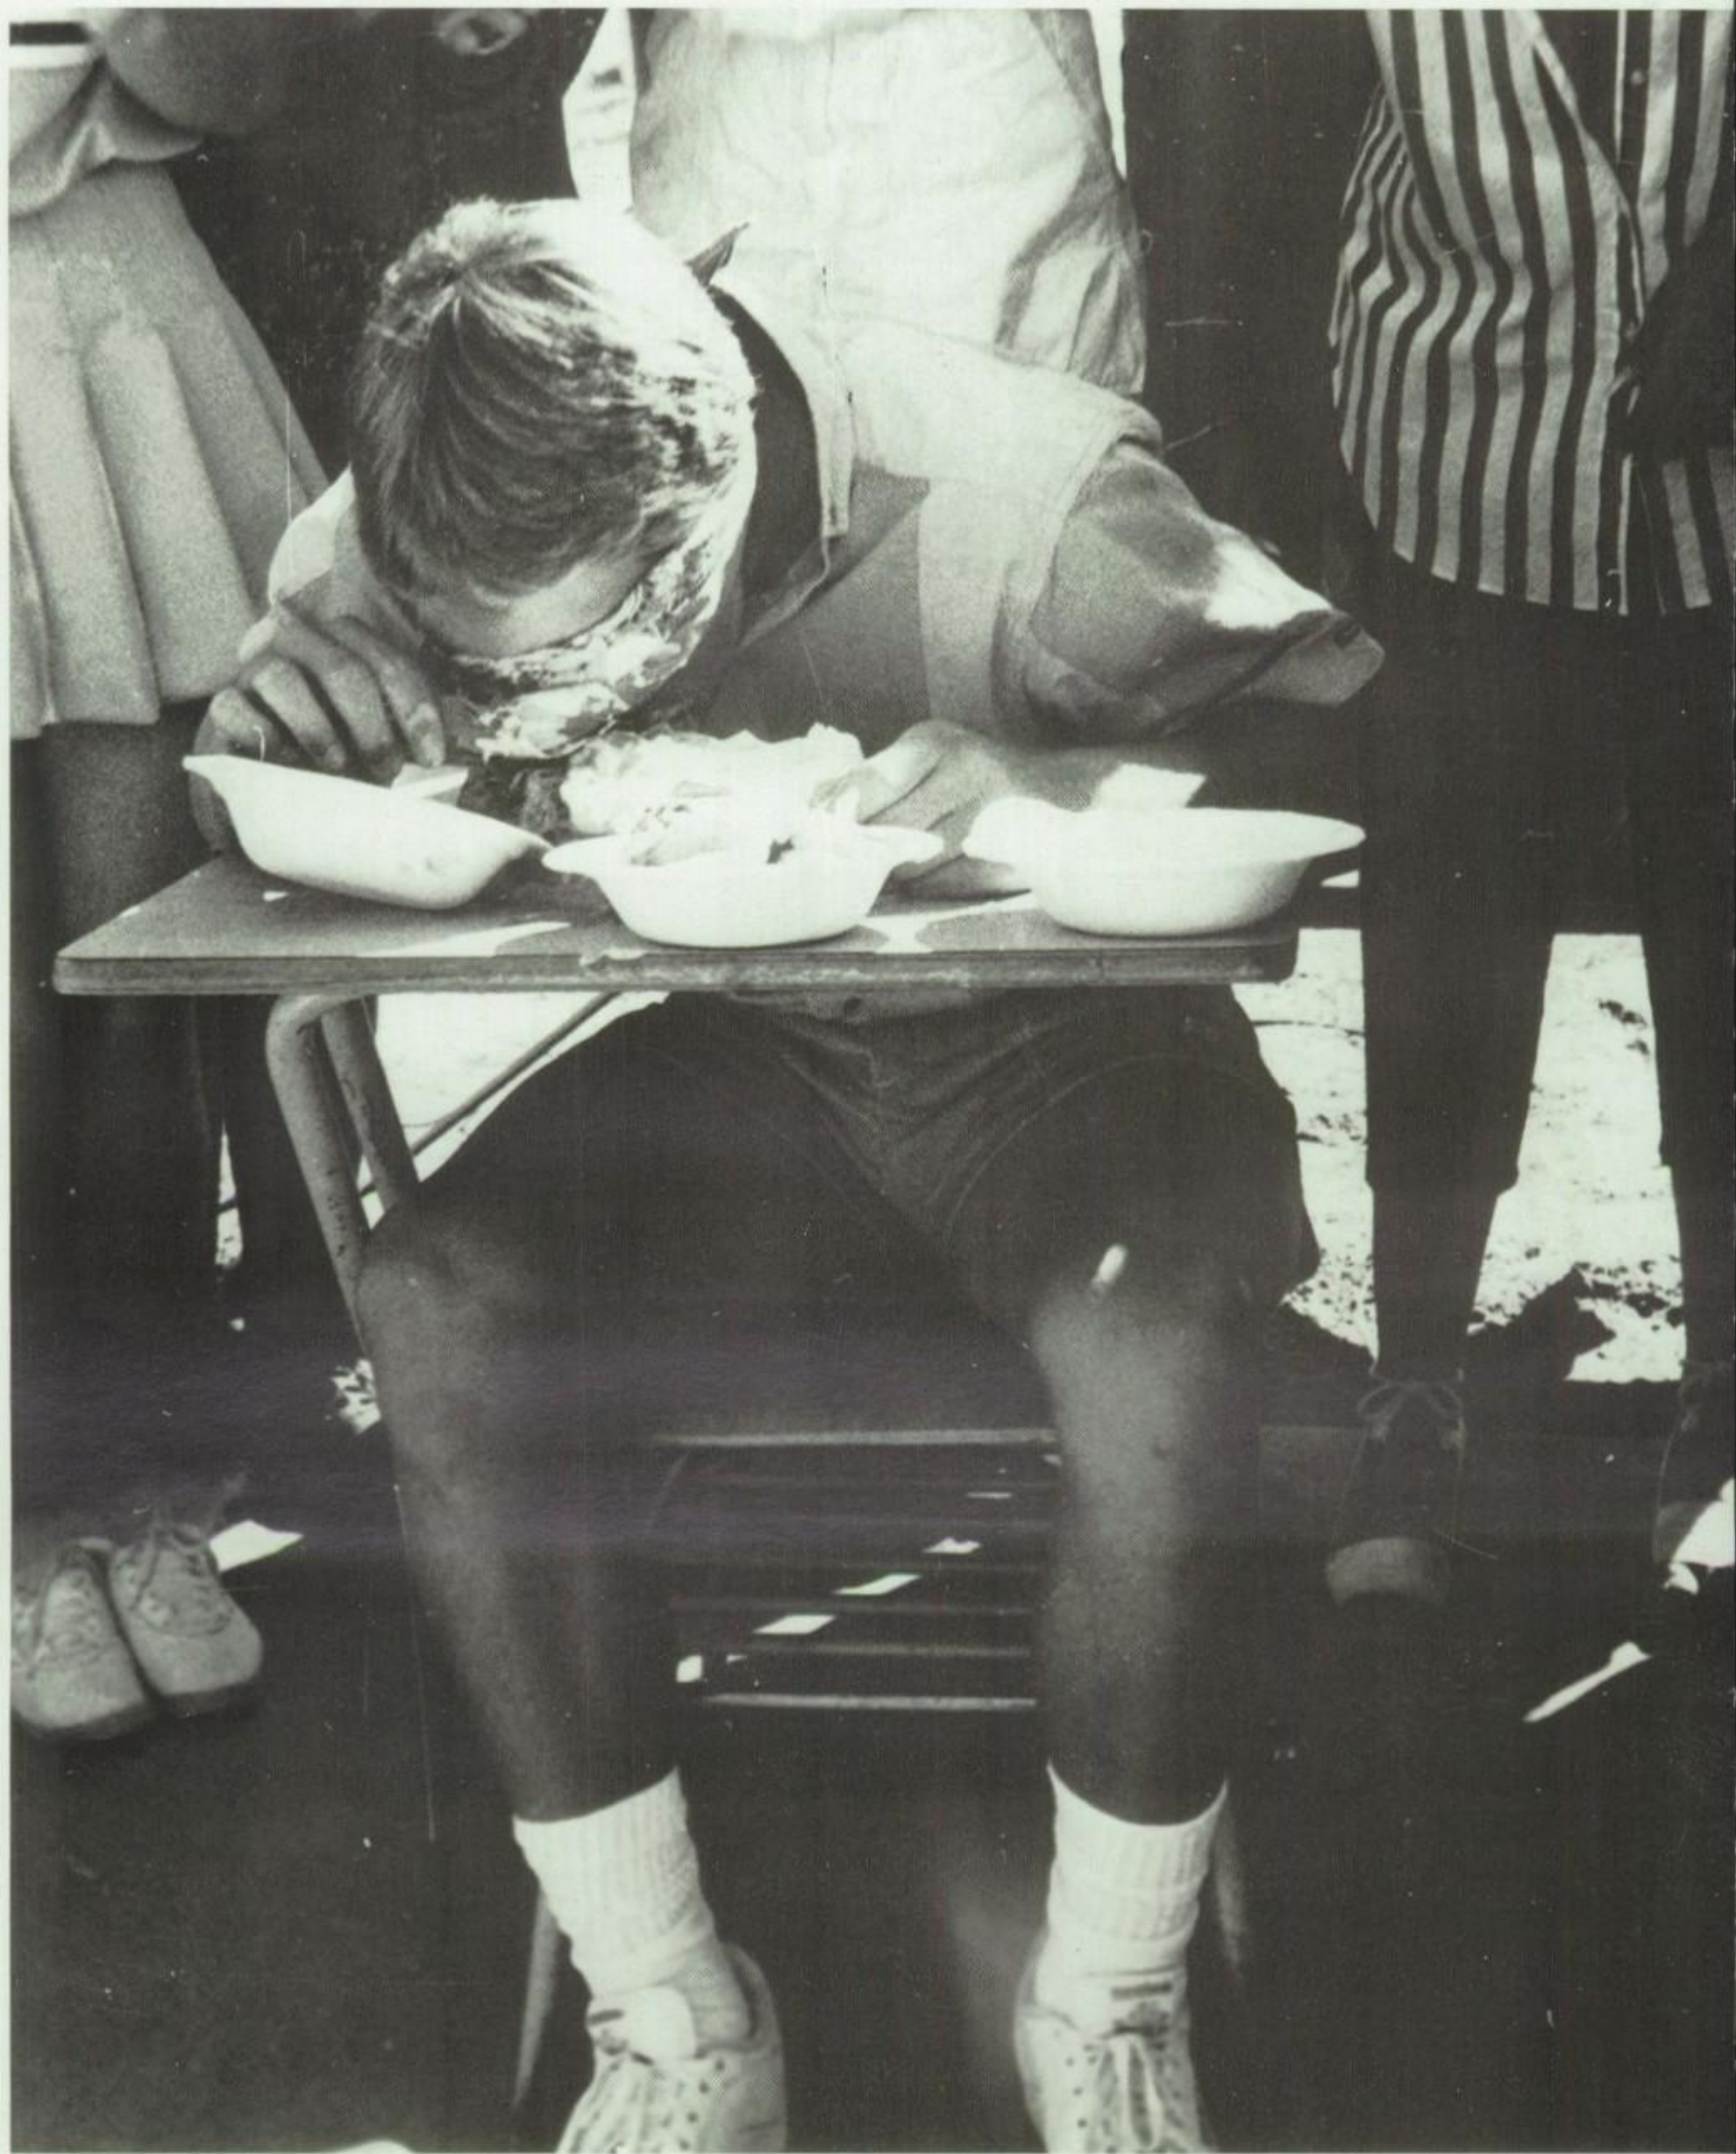

Students' Prison Is Dog's Heaven

During the 1985-86 school year, Granite Hills welcomed 530 new arrivals. 529 were the standard, two-legged models, while one was one of the original four-legged variety. One seemingly normal day, class was going as usual when a dog (eventually known as Bear) bounded into the room and leaped up on a table. The incident was later referred to as Bears' first appearance. Efforts to send him away were futile, and it seemed that Bear was determined to stay. Unlike many students, Bear was not picky about the cafeteria food and welcomed all hand-outs. Much to the dismay of his new friends, the custodians were sent for him, informing that his graduation day had come. Many mourn the loss of Bear, but his memories will last forever.

Diane Hall

Life as a Freshman

Freshmen, the newcomers on our 9-12th grade campus, usually find a friendly crowd of upperclassmen ready to welcome them with more than just the traditional "Turkeys become Eagles" initiation. In the halls, in classes, in the quad, in clubs and on teams, they are greeted for their enthusiasm and willingness to contribute to high school.

Clubs and organizations particularly anxious to welcome freshmen in an effort to add "new blood" and to build for future years. According to yearbook advisor Ms. Coffin, "We recruit freshmen every year and have been lucky to find some of our best photographers in the ninth grade."

As the sports section notes, these youngsters are also a great asset on the teams.

Believing he is one of four contestants, one from each class, Brian Gilles rushes to finish his plate of whipped cream. Each year upperclassmen fool the freshmen with a similar eating contest.

Carla Klingshern and Amy Louer flee from the scene of their initiation. This year's freshmen became Eagles on Friday the 13th.

Flashing their smiles, Kelly Mann and Helen Piffard show the before and after look braces. Many freshmen, with their baby teeth at last all discarded, undergo orthodontia.

Kristy Schimpf races for the locker room to change for her next class. All freshmen and sophomores are required to take P.E. classes, which are optional for upperclassmen.

Catalina

Calls

How far does the sophomore class expect to go? Twenty six miles across the sea, if this year's officers have their way.

This inovative bunch of officers have chosen Catalina Island as the spot for their senior prom because, according to Becky Briggs, President, they "want something unusual — something that hasn't been done before."

Right now, this goal is pushing them to come up with bigger and better fund raisers. Candy sales and car washes, the old standbys, have netted them several hundred dollars, but another innovation may bring in more — a Sadie Hawkins dance. Scott Barnes, senator, sees this as a "fun way to bring something new to Granite Hills," while piling up a deposit for the dream prom.

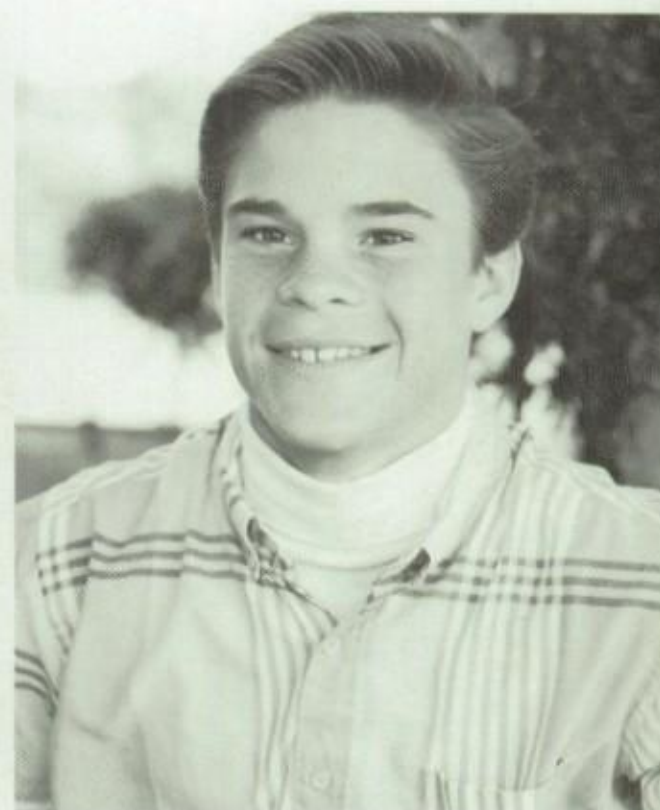

Scheduling conflicts have been frustrating their efforts to schedule both the dance and another candy sale (to supplement their earlier sucker sale), but all of the officers are optimistic.

Because most are heavily involved in school activities, they meet at noon instead of after school. Becky Briggs is a mat maid; Vice President Tim McMahon plays football; Secretary Kristen Allen plays volleyball. Senators are also heavily involved: Scott Barnes plays football and wrestles; Al Guerra is a photographer for the yearbook and the newspaper; Aaron Crecy plays football and wrestles; and Kelly Butcher is a cheerleader as well as a member of the volleyball and basketball teams.

Whether on the playing fields or in their dreams for a super prom, the class of '88 officers plan on covering lots of ground.

Jimmy Races On Odyssey

The car may be small, but the prizes are not. Jimmy O'Connor, current Barona class-one Odyssey champion, has a three-foot trophy to commemorate this title.

After only three years in Odyssey racing, Jimmy is good enough to beat adults. Although he owns a class-two Odyssey, which is a faster class, Jimmy prefers class one because "There's no real competition in Class Two."

Trophies are the only tangible rewards for this expensive sport, so Jimmy is lucky to have the financial backing of JT Industries to pay the $20 fees for each race and to replace tires and cams several times a year.

Cheryl Charms Kids

Clowning Around

A smile on a young child's face is all the pay Cheerful needs. Cheerful, Cheryl Rosse, has been clowning around professionally for the past three years. What was once a childhood dream is now a reality as Cheerful delights numerous parade watchers. She also attracts many smiles in hospitals, in shopping malls, and at private parties.

Being a clown is not all play. Cheerful spends many hours applying makeup and putting on costumes before each performance. The most difficult aspect of clowning, according to Cheerful, is creating a face and a name. Her face, for example, is a combination of a nose she saw on another clown, eyes from another clown, plus some imagination of her own. Although this may appear to be simple, the difficulty lies in the rule that no two clowns may be alike.

Although Cheerful makes professional clown wages of around $35 an hour, she devotes most of her clowning to charity because she enjoys the reward of seeing the effect her magic has on children, the elderly, or anyone in need of a smile. Cheerful says, "When others smile because of me, I overflow with happiness." Cheerful obtained all her training through Tu Tu's clown class, which she recalls "was a great class."

Adios Junk Food Torture

There you sit, perspiring in the orthodontist's chair. In moments he will transform you into a braceface! Braces? You ask him when they'll be removed. He gives you a less-than-encouraging "We'll see."

Thus begins a new life. No more popcorn, taffy, or soda. Eating sandwiches becomes a disgusting experience. Once a month comes the dreaded visit to Dr. Terrible to have your braces tightened, an unspeakable horror. After what seems an eternity, however, the hardware is removed and real living resumes.

Sophomores Take the Wheel Crash Course

Drivers' education this year is inconvenient for many sophomores. Once offered during the school day, Drivers' Ed. is now a required after-school course. Mr. Bandish teaches the many-faceted class, which consists of approximately thirty-four hours of class time and six hours of behind-the-wheel training. Graduates earn a driver's permit, enabling them to drive with a licensed adult. The new driver must also have thirty hours of driving experience with a parent before applying for the actual DMV test.

Mr. Bandish makes the class interesting with his wonderful sense of humor.

► At the sound of the bell, everyone rushes from the quad. Because there is only one lunch period this year, the quad seems to be bursting at the seams as all 2200 students eat at one time.

▼ Looking like a ballet dancer, Lisa Sanchez plays basketball during P.E. class. Sophomores are the last class required to take P.E. at our school.

▼ Pretending to be big shots now that they are sophomores, Rick Corral and Gavin Dunn talk with a senior, Eric Peterson. More contact with upperclassmen is part of the fun of being a sophomore.

► Pretending to be shy is part of Ronny Breen's outlook as he waits for lunch to end. All who know him are aware that he is outgoing, like most of his classmates.

Life as a Sophomore

This year's sophomore class is beginning to feel the crunch caused by the California legislature-mandated increase in credits to graduate: from 200 to 220 credits. According to counselor Jan Ryder, this change has been made a "profound difference" in the life of sophomores: at least six classes for four semesters.

The class of '88 seems to be taking this change in stride, though. Most love escaping from freshman status and claim that they have more privileges at home than last year, like being able to go to parties after football games instead of spending weekends studying.

Tim McMahon enjoys the challenge but admits that, "you're expected to do more in lots of things like clubs and sports because you're not at the bottom anymore."

On the other hand, Kristen Allen remarked that, "it's a lot like last year," even though she and Erin Barlow are the only sophomores to make the varsity team in volleyball.

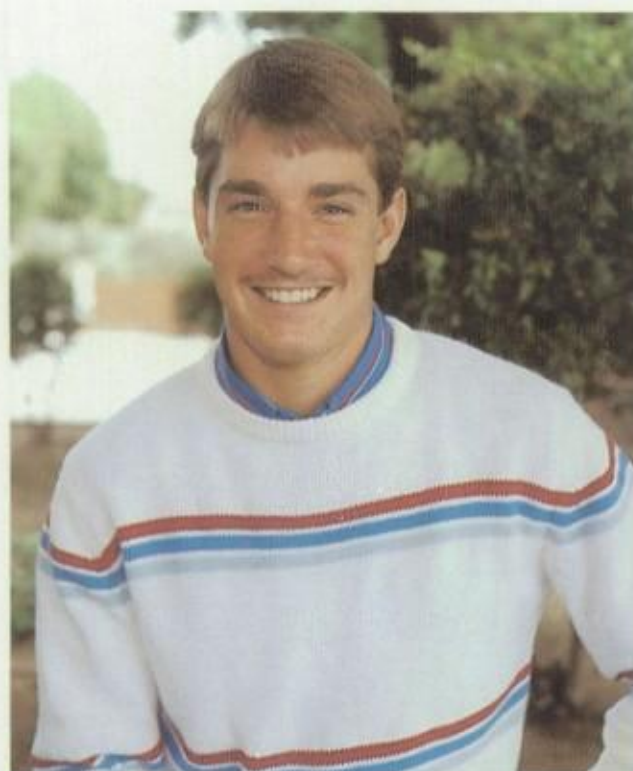

Other fall sports standouts in the class of '88 are Jason Munoz, on the varsity football team; Scott Barnes on the varsity wrestling squad, and Aaron Gaeir who plays varsity water polo.

Scott Curren may sum it up best when he remarks that it's hard to be a sophomore because, "we always have to wait to be able to drive," but it's fun to "act like bigshots to the freshmen."

Junior Officers

This year's Junior Class officers contributed many of their after school hours to multiple fundraisers, meetings and activities that go with the responsibility of leading a class.

This year's fundraisers were the MGM sale, which proved to be very successful, the Pepsi booths, which were better yet, and of course the traditional car wash. These fundraisers contributed greatly to the treasury of the junior class.

Job Is Fun Career Corps

Fall of 1985 marked the beginning of a new "High School Ambassador" program at Grossmont Center. "The Career Corps" as they are called, were chosen in June from applications received in the Spring. All East County resident, high school students aged sixteen and older were eligible. One Granite Hills student, Heidi Fanslau, was chosen for the 1985-86 Career Corps. Her application was selected on the basis of personality, academic achievement, community involvement, desire to learn about retailing and availability for participation.

In July the Career Corps began modeling classes at John Casablanca's Model Center, which includes training in skin care, make-up, wardrobe, hairstyling, ramp-modeling, and a video presentation. Upon graduating from their classes, Heidi Fanslau and her fellow Corps members participated in a fashion show, displaying the latest fads and fashions of many Grossmont Center stores.

As Granite Hills Ambassador to Grossmont Center, Heidi says she is anxiously "looking forward to the year to come."

Cliff Saves Day

Kids Panic

Joe Campus was overloaded with at least three and one half hours of homework every night. Maintaining good grades plus participating in extra-curricular activities, varsity football and A.S.B., made it difficult for him to perform at the level he expected of himself. Above all, he was just assigned, by his English teacher, to read fifty pages a night of a novel. In this compromising position, Joe turned to Cliff Notes as a last resort. Cliff Notes are small books that include everything from a synopsis of the plot, to character development, the theme of the novel, symbolism and foreshadowing. There are Cliff Notes for almost any book of literary merit from A Tale of Two Cities to The Scarlet Letter. Many students rely on Cliff Notes as a crutch that enables them to maintain good grades while participating in extra-curricular activities.

The Guys Strut New Beat

The first pep assembly featured six hairy-legged football players dressed up as cheerleaders. The squad, consisting of Capt. Duck, Dong, Blue, Peter, Leer, and O'Groin, (A.K.A. Donnie Carrol, Todd Bailey, Tom Vardell, P. J. Mikolajewski, Reid Marquand and Shawn O'Coyne) worked to perfect and synchronize their jumps, which varied in height from one to two inches off the ground! Although the players lacked femininity, they did not lack spirit, as they sang to —

"So clap your hands and stomp your feet!
Here come the Eagles with a different beat."

Signs Win Prize

Speak Out

Cathy McManus won $1000 in a speech contest. The Pageant obtained this exclusive interview.

Pageant: Cathy, I heard you won lots of money in a speech contest. Uh, well, uh . . . How's that possible? I mean, you're deaf, aren't you?

Cathy giggled and answered through her signing interpreter:

Cathy: It was a sign language speech contest for deaf students, sponsored by the Optimists.

Pageant: Okay. But how exactly were you graded? We're used to being graded on voice tone and stuff like that.

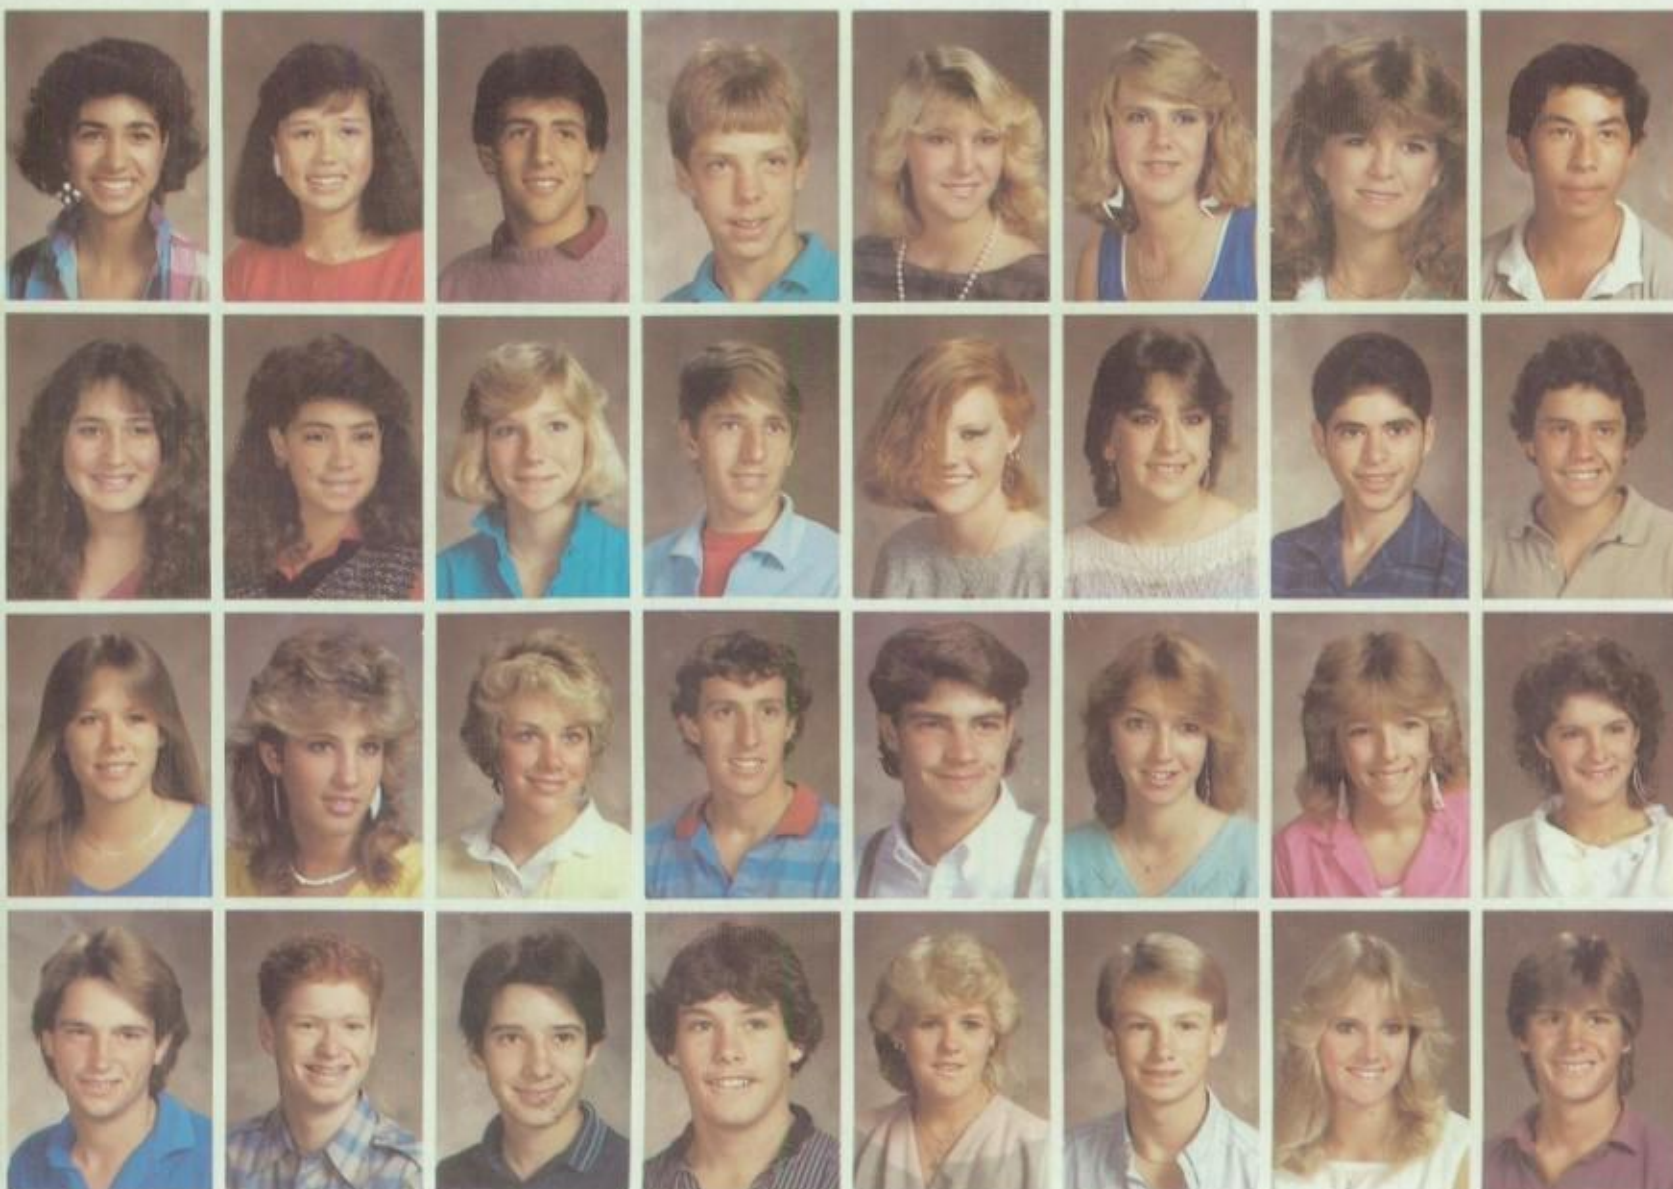

Cathy: (ever so patiently): They judged on my signing and my stage presence, as well as on my speech.

Pageant: Weren't you scared?

Cathy: Of course I was, especially at first. You see, the judges were hidden in the audience, so I didn't know who they were. Also, it was at UTC and my teacher, Vadga, and another student from Granite Hills as well as my parents were there.

Pageant: What was the topic?

Cathy: The Deaf Individual: Past, Present and Future.

Gumby Lives on Nostalgia

"Long live Gumby! May his reign never end!" Shout the adoring crowds outside the Palace.

So the scene returns to childhood memory — the image of Gumby and his red horse friend Pokey. You nostalgically remember those days when the most important thing to you was finger painting in kindergarten and your toughest homework was counting to ten and back. But now, years later, Gumby has made a comeback. Gumby and his buddy Pokey have become more popular than ever. Everywhere Gumbys adorn rearview-mirrors, t-shirts, and beach-towels! People ask for the reasons behind Gumby and Pokey's return to fame, but the real question is . . . what ever happened to their arch-rivals, the Blockheads?

► What a place to do homework. Tonya Koll and Sara Helm find a quiet sidewalk for a writing assignment.

▼ Problem solving and puzzlement absorb Jeff Davis, Troy Jernigan, Lisa Schaeffer, Donny Carroll, Jason Munoz and Molly Landells in Algebra One class. College prep students take Algebra One as a prerequisite to Geometry.

▲ Surrounding Janet Bird, Jason Nelson, Colfin Parker, Reuben Williams and Darrin Francis snack. The break after second period; a new feature this year, is a time for friends to eat and regroup.

▲ While working in the guidance Center, Chris Chester files schedules. Guidance Center aids earn 2.5 credits per semester.

Life as a

Junior

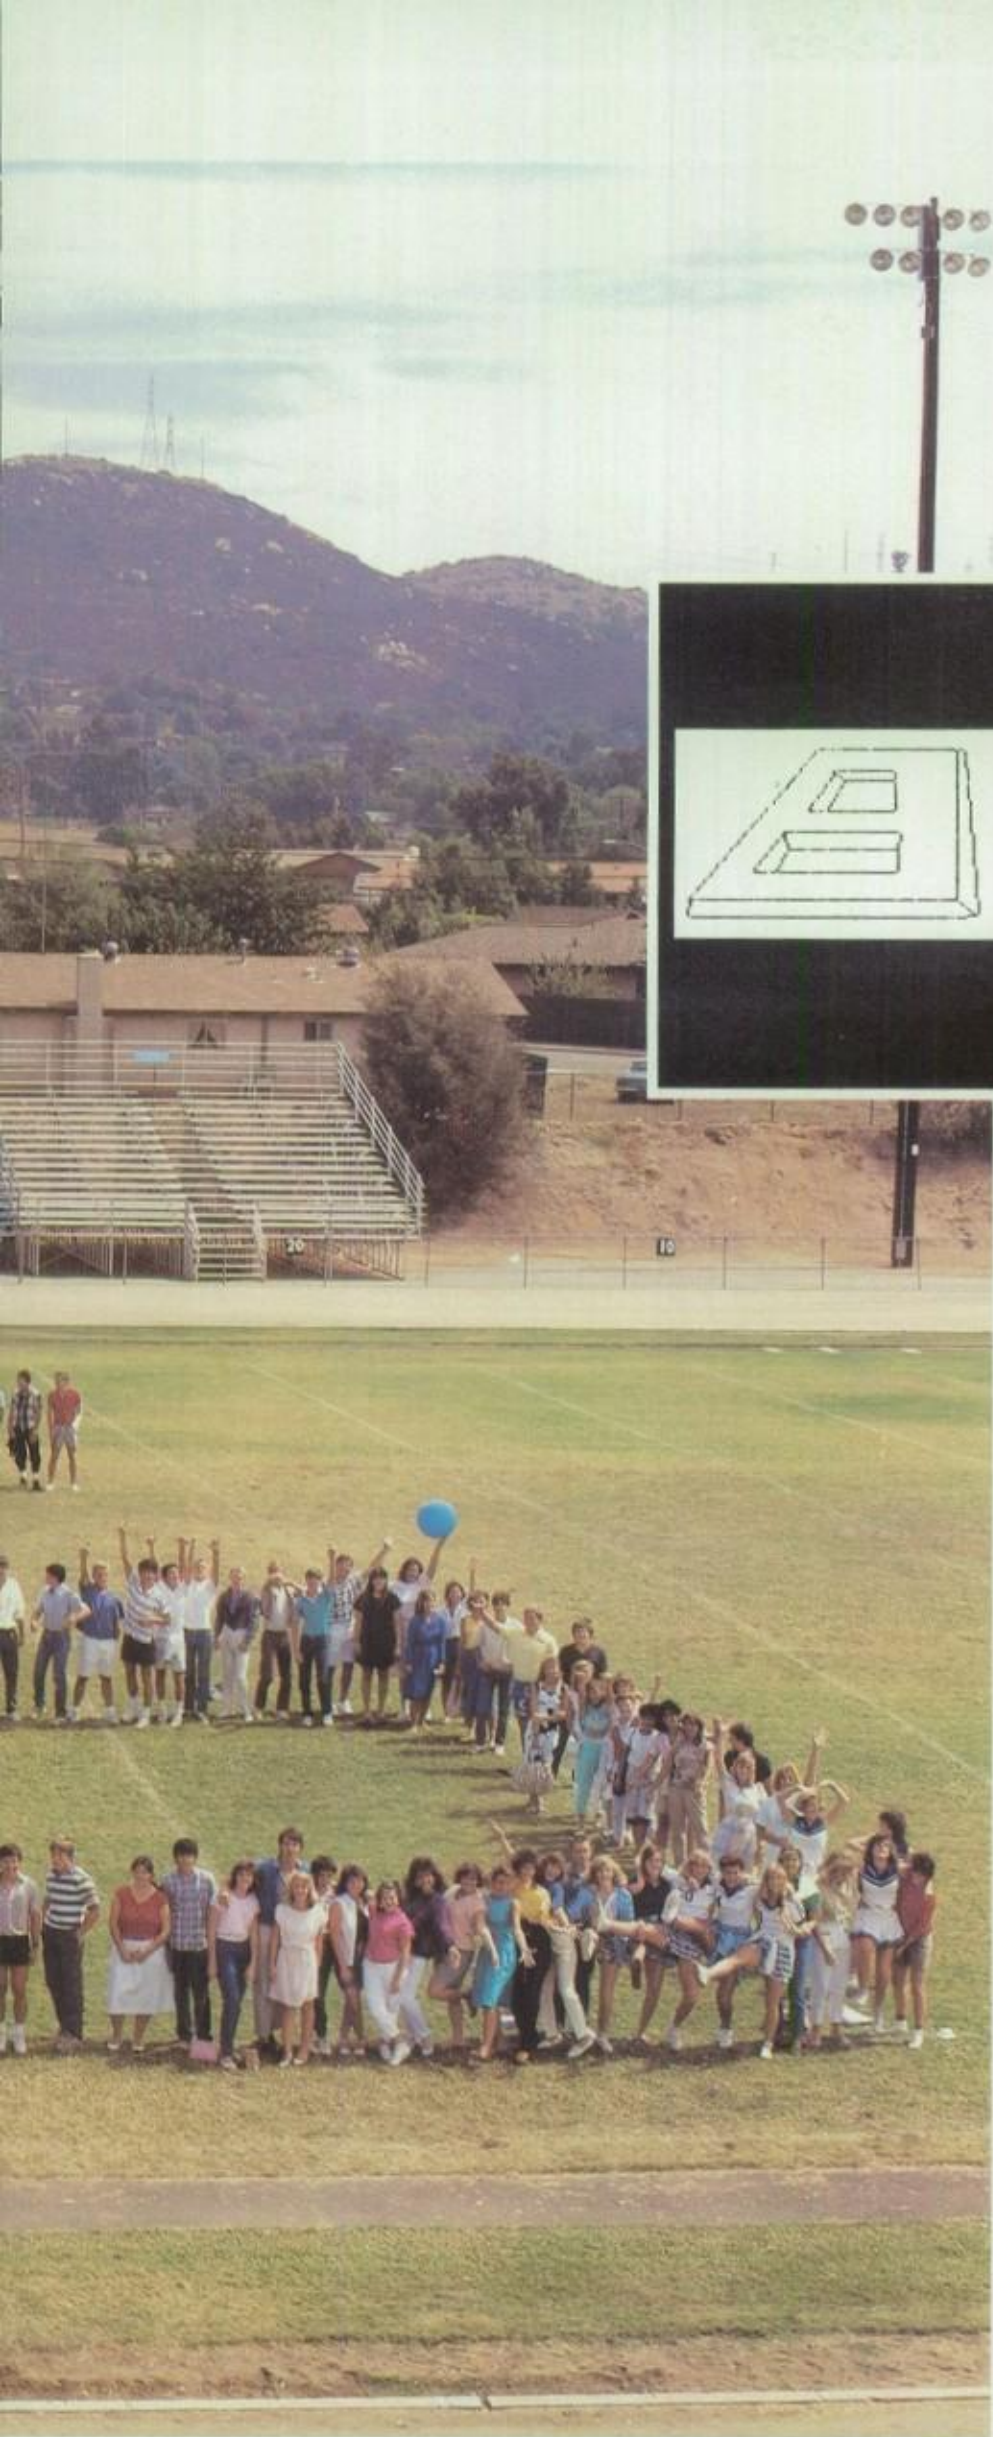

Eleventh grade was a year for extensive individual growth for Juniors. Many Juniors had been warned that this year would be difficult, and the premonitions were not without cause. The Junior year is filled with time-consuming classes, relationships, and many new responsibilities such as a job and a car.

Although Juniors experienced more freedom than in previous years, the combination of work, school, and play made stress a common complaint. Some had such busy lives that they could be seen in class sleeping with head on hands. "I've caught up on a lot of sleep while in class" agreed John Moore.

When the pace of Junior life seemed unbearable, they looked forward to June with its promise of a new life as Seniors.

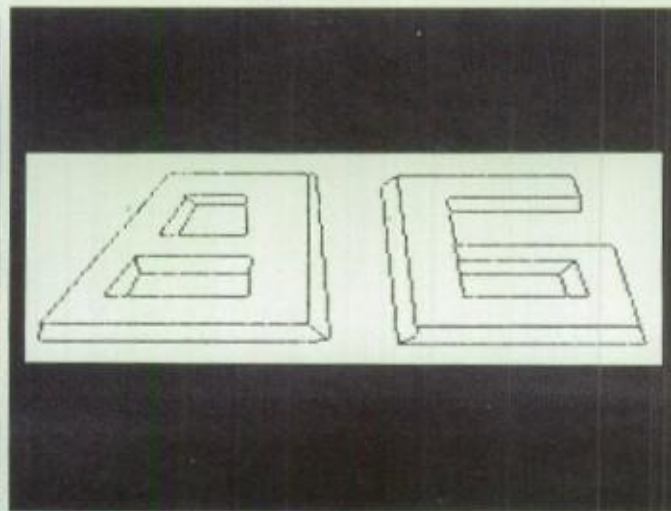

SENIORS

Graduates Take New Directions

"So what are you going to major in?"

"I have no idea. How about you?"

"Good question."

"Do you know what college you are going to?"

"No, are you serious? Me, decide something about my future? That'll be the day."

But for many Seniors, that day did in fact arrive this year. The Class of '86 has had a lot of good times, but has also been faced with major decisions concerning their futures. Seniors have examined themselves, forming a new image of who they are. Questions such as "What do I want out of life? My career?" demanded an answer, and facing these challenges has been quite a growing experience.

A popular field of study for graduates will be computer science and engineering. Computers have become an essential part of life, from the grocery store check-out machines to space exploration. Even many "non-computer" fields now utilize computers in some way. Another way in which computers have infiltrated into society is a technique for testing students' abilities in various fields. The results show that the sex of a person is less a determinant for aptitude than ever before. Women like Geraldine Ferraro are running for major political offices, and men are becoming nurses and secretaries. These facts, although promising, make for an even more difficult decision as to which path to take. For the past twelve years, Seniors have been taught, advised, warned, and encouraged. Now is the time for the Class of '86 to put that help to use and make independent decisions and take a bite out of life.

Seniors Make '86 the Year

Senior class officers and senators made their last year a memorable one by working hard to raise money and high spirits. Led by senior class President Ione Haisha, the team of Vice President Sonrisa Palmer, Secretary Steve Swanson, and Treasurer Karen Burley began the year by raising money for the Prom at the Parking Lot Auction. With a large turnout and much enthusiasm by all who participated, the class of '86 raised $6900, enough to pay for a terrific prom. But, before school even started, they were busy fundraising by having car washes and coke stands. These funds went towards Christmas dance and Senior breakfast.

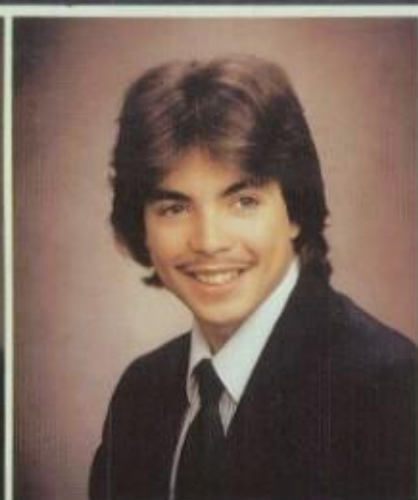

In October, senators April Butcher, Kara Cota, Heidi Doyle, and Elaine Harrison joined the team. Although they worked hard to make this an unforgettable senior year, the officers experienced responsibility and a lot of great times. Ione Haisha summed it all up by saying, "I am glad I was able to experience all the fun and laughter of my senior year as senior class president." They will surely remember their experiences for years to come.

Most likely to succeed

Laura Barton and David Hackett were voted this year's "Most Likely to Succeed" seniors. This year, Laura is the president of CSF and a member of both the Academic League and Academic Decathlon. Laura was on the swim team her sophomore and junior years and is going to attend UCSD in the fall. David, on the other hand, is a very active member of the water polo team and has played an excellent year as the team's goalie. David is a member of CSF and a National Merit Scholarship semi-finalist. David was an Honor Junior and attended a leadership seminar at Pepperdine last summer. David's future plans include trying to receive an NROTC scholarship and possibly going to USC.

Both David and Laura will have good educations as a foundation for their future success.

Best smile

If you have ever walked down the halls at school, you couldn't miss the smiles of Chrissy Andrews and Craig Vosekalns.

This year Chrissy is an active member of ASB and proved her abilities as Commissioner of Alumni at the homecoming ceremonies. She is in the Ski Club and enjoys running and cycling in her spare time. Although the combination of her job at Dales Footworks and her school activities occupy most of her time, Chrissy still makes room to enjoy being with her family and friends.

When he is not in school, Craig enjoys a variety of outside activities. Surfing at Ocean Beach is one of his favorite pastimes, and he spends a lot of time both working and being with his friends. One friend, Tom Kaiser, says, "He'll smile at anything, particularly a good-looking girl." So the next time you are face-to-face with either Chrissy or Craig, be sure to look for their winning smiles.

Prettiest eyes

Many of a person's features, whether they be hair or physique, can be altered. However, a person's eyes remain the same and they show the natural beauty of the person. Ellen Bergan and Tory Lessley's eyes earned them this year's prettiest eyes for the senior class.

The typical female spends plenty of time applying make-up and artificial beautifiers to her eyes, but Ellen does not find it necessary to use any of these. The ice-blue color of Ellen's eyes is and remains completely natural.

Tory's emerald-green eyes have been recognized outside of school. He entered the "Bedroom Eyes" contest at The Bedroom furniture store in El Cajon over the summer, where he placed in the top five finalists.

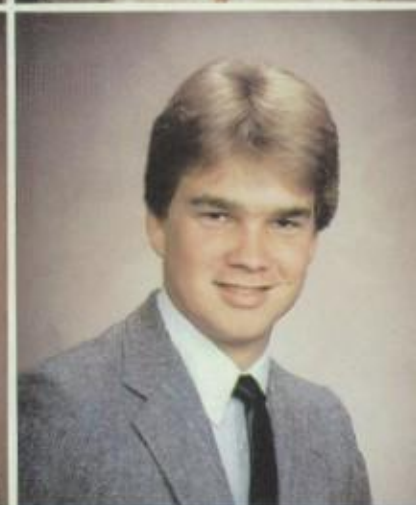

Eat your hearts out, Paul Newman and Elizabeth Taylor.

Most athletic

Every year Granite Hills is at the top of the league in many sports. Our athletic teams give us a good reputation in the county as perennial powerhouses. Two of the leaders on our school teams are Todd Parker and Melissa Stokes.

Ronald Dunlap
Michelle Durbin

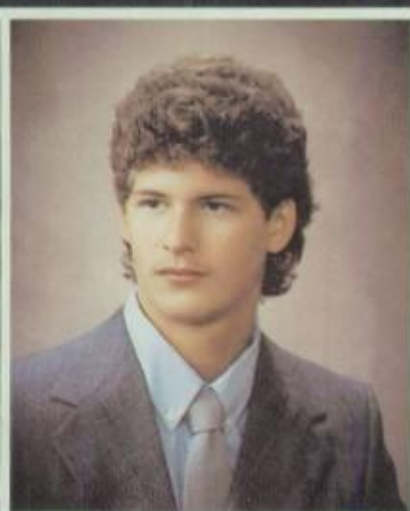

Todd Parker lettered in three sports, playing football, basketball, and baseball. Todd's speed, quickness, and jumping ability are his main assets. This year, Todd was the leading receiver on our football team. He excelled at basketball and baseball, playing varsity for both sports.

George Edwards
Kenneth Ellis

Melissa Stokes is also an all-around athlete, having participated in athletics all four years. Melissa has been active in volleyball, soccer, softball, and basketball. Not only is she good, having been M.V.P. or all-league stand-out for several of her teams, she is also the leader on her teams. She has been or is the captain of the volleyball, soccer, and San Diego Juniors Volleyball teams.

Todd Parker and Melissa Stokes really do deserve this recognition from their fellow students, and they are sure to continue to excel both on and off the field.

Best dressed

Look around our school and you see a diversity of trend-setting styles. Who are the trend-setters of the trendsetters? Steve Houston and Lone Haisa were voted Best Dressed.

Steve Houston dresses the way he does because he "likes to stand out" and he believes his clothing style reflects his own personality. His favorite store is Mervyn's and he gets many of his ideas from GQ magazine. Some of the brand names Steve chooses are Ferrar and Banzai. To support his expensive tastes, Steve has two jobs.

Lone Haisa also dresses in good and adventurous taste. Lone goes for brand names such as Esprit, Guess, and Carol Little. Her favorite stores are Nordstroms and Bullock's. She gets plenty of ideas for clothes from two of her sisters, both of whom work at Nordstroms. She gets the money to buy her clothes from an allowance. Asked how she feels about her clothing style, she felt she dressed somewhat conservative.

Conservative or not, Lone and Steve always look good, with not only their clothes but their personalities and cheerful outlook behind them.

Best personality

When considering best personality, Shari Pfuhl is in a class by herself. No one is more consistently cheerful, and her happiness seems to rub off on the people around her. When Shari laughs, everyone smiles. Shari likes to go skiing and has been on the tennis team and yearbook staff for two years.

Chris Johnson, on the other hand, is the type of person who will do anything for a laugh. Some of Chris' "better" exploits include playing golf in Woolworth's, almost burning down the Cleveland National Forest (both done with his faithful sidekick David Hackett), and being one of the Hari Krishnas for Halloween. His favorite hobbies include dancing, waxing his car, and going for drives with another one of his cohorts, Andy Herold.

Most spirit and service

For school spirit and service, you can't beat the talents of Sheri Guseman and Steve Swanson. Sheri, as we know, was not only Freshman and Sophomore class president, but also this year's ASB president. As for spirit, Sheri was the Commissioner of Spirit her junior year and is a member of the Pep Club.

The Senior Breakfast was great, thanks to Steve Swanson, a very active member of ASB. Steve is also Senior class Secretary and co-Secretary of CSF. As for other clubs, you can put the Water-Skiing Club, Chess Club, and the International Club on Steve's list. He has also been involved in Junior Achievement, of which he has been both President and Vice President of Finance.

Best all-around

Dan Barnes and Sandy Carlson were voted best All-Around for good reasons. They are involved in sports and ASB and have very good grades. To top that off, they're well-liked by everyone.

Dan Barnes, this year's Homecoming King, has played J.V. baseball and still plays on the basketball and football teams. This year Dan was the co-captain of our football team. Last year Dan was an all-league selection in football and he will certainly achieve higher this year. Dan was also involved in ASB and was chosen to represent our school at the prestigious state-wide Boys' State conference. Throughout his four years at Granite Hills, Dan took many honors classes while maintaining a very respectable G.P.A.

Sandy Carlson was the captain of our tennis team the last two years and was one of our best singles players. She further exemplified her leadership abilities as a sophomore class senator, Commissioner of Community Relations during her junior year, and Attorney General this year. While keeping her busy schedule and social life, she still finds time to excel academically.

Prettiest hair

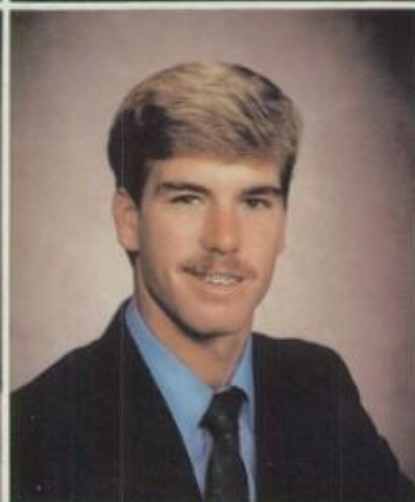

Hairstyles seem to be the main focus of every student on campus. Each person has his unique haircut and his opinion of what style is the best. This year, seniors chose lone Haisha, Tom Kaiser, and Todd Parker as the students with the Prettiest Hair on campus.

A combination of the dark brown color with the naturally curly wave creates a hair style for lone Haisha, which she has kept for the past three years. During the hotter months a braid suffices for lone, but students can most often see her with long, flowing, shoulder-length hair.

Tom Kaiser and Todd Parker both have short, blond hair. Spending time outdoors, either surfing for Tom or participating in sports for Todd, helps to keep the sun in their hair.

Best figure and physique

Physical activity and plenty of exercise are necessary to maintain a good shape. Seniors Jill Toom and Jim McMahon were voted to have this year's Best Figure and Physique and their many activities help to maintain their figures.

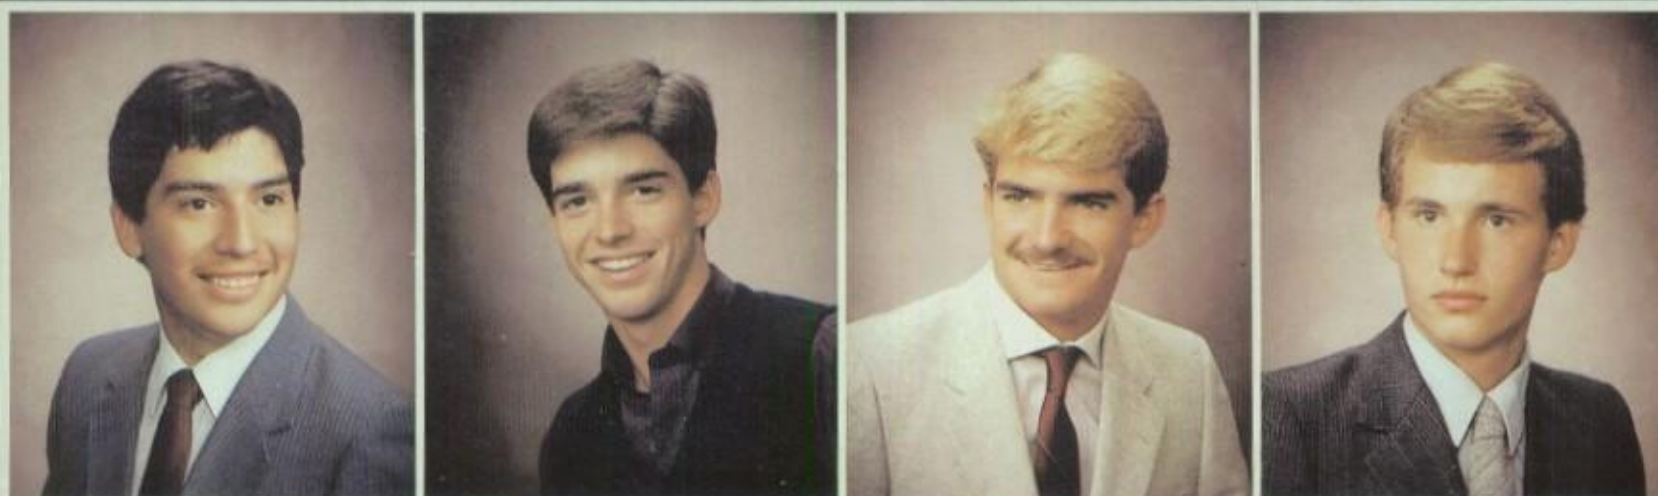

Jill was on the junior varsity cheer squad her freshman and sophomore years and played varsity doubles her junior year on the girls' tennis team. She is in the Ski Club at school and her favorite activities include running, water skiing, snow skiing and spending her weekends with friends at either the desert or the river.

Jim's list of activities include his involvement on the junior varsity football team, and this year he is co-captain with Dan Barnes of the varsity squad. He ran track his junior and senior years and his spare time is spent hunting, fishing and surfing at the beach.

Class clowns

It's not the teachers' fault our whole school is going crazy. Blame it on this year's Class Clowns, Derek Sexton and Sheri Guseman. Look at the picture (don't if you're Derek or Sheri's moms). Now how can anybody, even the teacher, concentrate with one of these in the class? They must have been born with natural megaphones in their mouths. They are the reasons teachers are afraid to turn the lights off during movies. Parents, now do you know why teachers are demanding pay raises?

These guys aren't actors. They just can't help themselves, so don't blame them. Asked why he was funny, Derek gave an apeish look and replied, "My looks." No one knows whether he was serious or not. Probably serious.

So students, when you see Sheri or Derek running around the hallways, stop them and express your appreciation. You know they're the ones who kept the whole class loose and school bearable.

Go ahead, teachers: smile. We all know you guys like them. Derek and Sheri know that, too.

Most attractive

Ione Haisha felt "a little embarrassed" when she won the title of one of this year's "Most Attractive" seniors. A lot of guys can describe Ione as having "a great smile and fantastic dark features." Other ingredients of Ione's unique attractiveness are her constant cheerfulness and her long dark hair. After school, Ione enjoys spending time with her friends, especially her sisters. Tonya Alvord's sharp features are a major reason why she is considered one of the most attractive people in this year's senior class. Tonya enjoys water skiing, horseback riding and spending time with Steve Fiske, her boyfriend. Tom Kaiser is "Most Attractive" because of his basic "California kid" type of look. Tonya feels that his "tan face and blond hair" make him very handsome, especially in this Southern California setting. Tom likes to surf, skateboard and go to the beach. For many reasons, Ione, Tonya, and Tom were voted this year's "Most Attractive" seniors.

Time for college

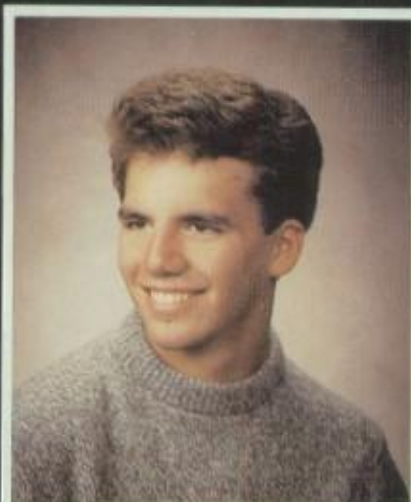

There comes a time in every ambitious, college-bound senior's life when he or she joins the mad scramble to get accepted to a college.

During the summer, this person received tons of mail from colleges telling him how great their college is and how great he is and how great it would be if he went to their college. He just looked at it and said, "Are they crazy? I'm only a senior! There's lots of time before I need to think about it." On Sept. 28, he is told the SAT deadline was Sept. 27, so he has to pay a late fee. On a dark fateful Saturday, he wakes up late and rushes to a small, crowded room to experience a blank mind and sweat for four hours. Now this sucker has to apply to the college. "Let's see, I'll apply to Harvard, Yale, and San Diego State." He has to go around to all the teachers who despise him to ask for letters of recommendation. On the day of the deadline, he chases down the mail truck to get his applications postmarked on time. Now comes the worst part: he has to wait for months to get an answer. On the day he gives up all hope, a letter arrives. "I'm going to State!"

An exchange of worlds

This summer April Butcher visited Sri Lanka as an exchange student with the AFS program. Traveling 10,000 miles, over half-way across the world, to a Third World exotic paradise was quite an experience for this senior. While there, April attended school, went to rugger (rugby) matches, saw hundreds of elephants and other wild animals and met friends she will keep for a lifetime. "Although I lived in a poor country for two months, it didn't seem like it. Because of the caste system, I was in the upper class. Chauffers took me everywhere and maids cleaned up behind me and that was great. Driving through tea country was beautiful and made me want to go back as soon as I can."

Come dancing!

She looks in the mirror, and everything is perfect. She's got her best party clothes on, six dollars and her driver's license in her pocket. It's going to be about a forty minute drive, but she knows it's worth it. She's going dancing.

Dancing has become a very popular activity among this year's seniors. Along with the heightened popularity of school dances, clubs like Distillery East and Stratus are seeing more business than ever. Cover charges range from about five to six dollars, and proof of age (dancers must be 17 or over) is required.

Going dancing is not only a great way to show off your latest moves but also an exciting way to meet new people.

▼ Stephanie Seller, Clarion Editor-in-Chief, discusses a new idea with Karen Gotham and Tina Morgan. For the first time, Mr. Sebastian was this year's Clarion advisor.

▲ A Senior makes a successful bid for her own parking space. Almost 150 seniors participated in this year's auction.

► Dan Barnes and Tim Briggs pay for their adjoining spaces. The Senior class made over $6,900 from the auction.

Space race is on

"I have a starting bid of eighty-five dollars, do I hear ninety?" the auctioneer shouted to the seniors attending this year's parking lot auction.

"Bid on it, you want that space, don't you?"

"Yes, but my mom is going to kill me if I pay too much."

"I have ninety-five, do I hear one hundred?"

"Hurry up. It is one of the best spots in the whole lot; if you don't bid you are going to lose it."

"I only have ninety dollars and I can't bid any higher."

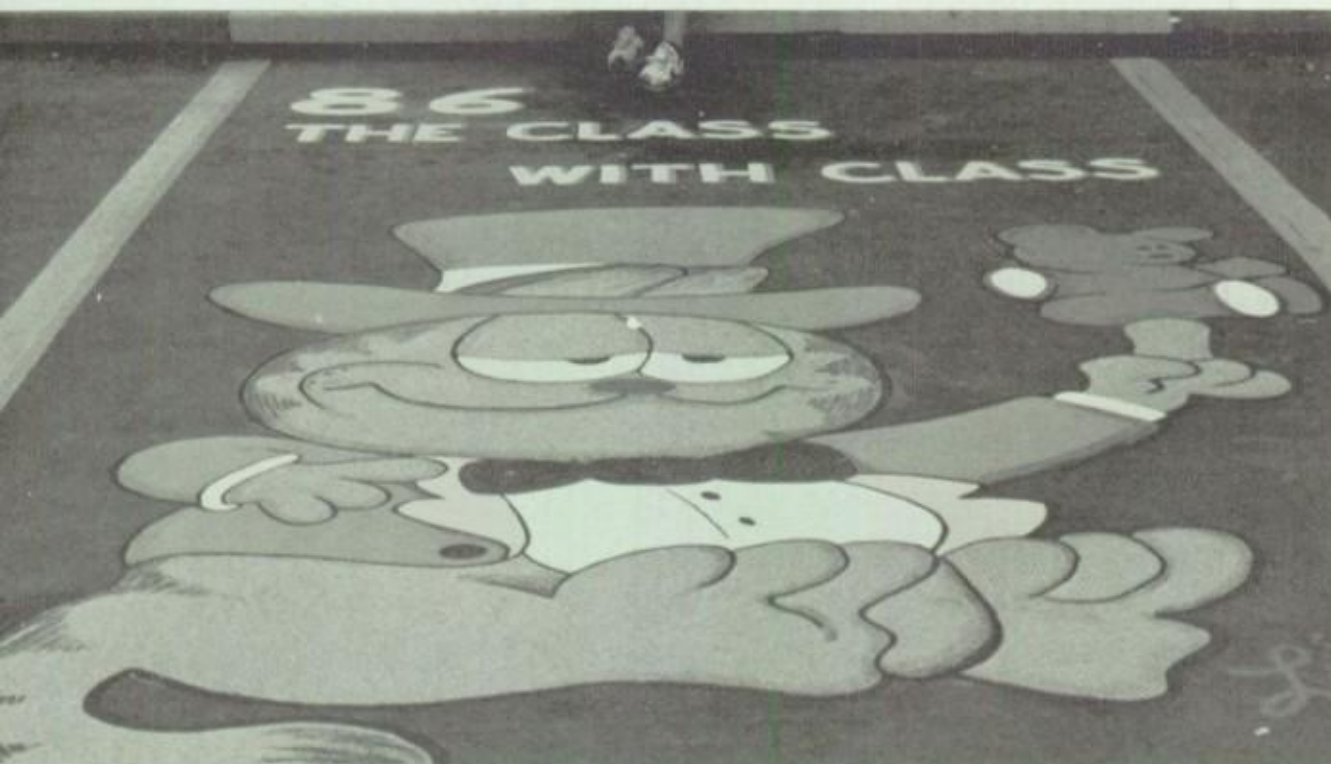

"I'll loan you the rest; just bid for it."

"I have one hundred. Going once, going twice, sold to the young lady in the blue for one hundred dollars."

"I can't believe I just brought that parking space for one hundred dollars."

The evening proved to be a great success for the senior class, raising $6,500, enough to pay for the prom. Part of the fun of buying a space is in the personalized painting, which is done on designated weekends following the auction. Seniors came with paint and brushes in hand ready to start the work on their very own parking spaces. A wide variety of designs, ranging from flowers to football players, were painted on many spaces. The parking lot auction is sure to remain one of the major fund raising activities for the senior class.

◀ Rachel Mason paints her toes instead of her parking space. Space owners were allowed to paint on designated weekends chosen by the Senior class officers.

▲ The crowd waits in anticipation to see who has bought the last space of the evening. Bidding ranged from $75.00 to $135.00.

◀ Senior David Hackett puts the finishing touches on his carefully chosen parking space. Every buyer has the opportunity to personalize his space.

▲ Lisa Gentile gets some help from her friend Jill Christenson while painting her space. A group effort gets the job done in less amount of time.

◀ Garfield formally addresses "86, the class with class" with Pooky in hand. Designs such as wrestlers and a license plate were among the various personalizations.

Old and new mix

New events are accompanying the traditional activities of the senior class this year. The traditional mock weddings for the family relation classes were witnessed by the entire school in the quad. Sherry Thompson and Brian Goldy followed by Tracy Means and David Aubart were pronounced man and wife, with a reception party finishing the morning ceremony.

The Senior breakfast proved successful again this year when over two hundred and forty seniors, dressed in costumes varying from the usual French maids to the unusual team of Buckwheat and Alfalfa, arrived at El Amigo restaurant for this traditional event. The group of seven Hari Krishnas, while bearing gifts of flowers and hymn books, displayed their unique talents and won the costume contest hands down.

Powder-puff football invaded Granite Hills for the first time this year and a new tradition may well have started. The "Flygirls," coached by Jim Perez, Dan Barnes, Mike Garrow, Ricky Strauffer, Donnie Carroll and P. J. Mikolajewski, surprised those who attended the Wednesday night game by scoring the first six points against the opposing Grossmont team. An enthusiastic squad of male cheerleaders accompanied by the crowd encouraged the new team. The game finally ended in a six to six tie, but this event is sure to become a traditional activity of the Senior class in years to come.

▲ Coach Jim Perez discusses a play with the powderpuff football team. The Granite Hills "Flygirls" practiced many hours for competition against the Grossmont team.

► Alfalfa and Buckwheat, otherwise known as Scott Smith and Sean Kelly, wait for their food to arrive. Breakfast began at 6:00 a.m. for the seniors at El Amigo restaurant.

► Robin Kramer and Kathy Shultz exercise their bridesmaid duties during the ceremonies in the quad. Members of the Family Relations class are chosen to be in the wedding party.

► Tim Raymond escorts his "daughter" Sherry Thompson down the aisle to her soon-to-be husband Brian Goldy. The traditional mock weddings are a popular senior activity.

FACULTY

Staff has fun too

In recent years, teaching has become considered by many to be a thankless job. Long hours, low pay, and frustration over public opinion of teachers have contributed to a new phenomenon called "teacher burnout." Teaching does have its rewards, however. The joy of watching students grow and mature, the pride in sharing knowledge, and the comraderie among the faculty are only a few of the incentives to teach.

In some schools, students view the faculty members as one-dimensional and uninteresting. This is definately not so at Granite Hills. Besides excelling at their immediate professions, the staff members participate in a wide variety of hobbies and diversions. Some the the most celebrated activities on campus are Mr. Fremont's and Mrs. Brook's annual trips to Europe. Mr. McRostie has joined the computer craze, and even built a moveable house, "Comput-o-cart," for his machine. He is one example of the teachers who are taking a byte out of life. Mr. Kennedy, of Guidance Center fame, is a bicycle nut who owns an antique big-wheeled bike, along with an appropriate turn-of-the-century costume. Other members of this active staff include writers, skiers, hikers, photographers, and chefs.

The faculty's activities are not limited to after-school hours. During school, the fun-loving teachers had a football pool among such 3A power-houses as Slippery Rock College. Faculty members also found creative ways to evade restricting policies. Lounges, for example, are sexually segregated, much to the dismay of the more social staff members. One way that the members managed to lunch together, for example, was to assemble to watch Mr. Fremont's European slide shows. This zany group became known as the "Lunch Bunch," and they learned how to make lunch an exciting experience.

Students at Granite Hills are benefitting greatly, even though it is indirectly, form the colorful, interesting lives of the faculty. Their zest in their personal lives reflects on the quality of teaching that they offer. The faculty's zealous approach to life, as well as their jobs, have equipped them with the power to make a profound difference in the lives of their students. Ties formed

A spirit of friendship and cooperation has evolved between faculty and administration after the early year strife over salary negotiations and a day on which many faculty members picketed the school before classes.

Dr. Smith, in her third year as principal, helped to soothe faculty concerns during the negotiations by meeting directly with faculty members.

Brian Smith and Steve Larivee joined Dan Arens who has been a vice principal for years. Both bring enthusiasm and a willingness to try new approaches. In fact, Mr. Smith's appeal to faculty for plants for his new office resulted in his desk being covered with old and wilted plants.

► Dr. Smith looks apprehensive as she takes her turn at the Dunk tank. At this Kiwanis Club fund raiser, she managed to stay dry all day.

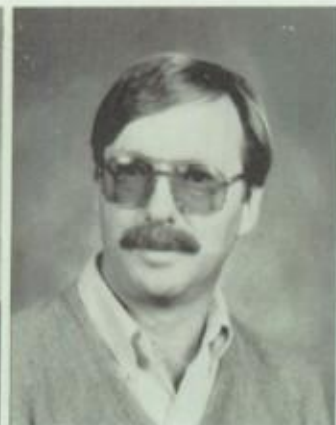

▲ Waiting for his turn to eat, Mr. Larivee models his apron. Most school days he handles discipline and referrals.

► On the phone, Mr. Arens seems to enjoy his newly decorated office. Last year's senior voted funding for this project from C.A.P. funds.

► Hard at work over the hot stove, vice principals Dan Arens and Brian Smith entertain the faculty. This lunch was a before school chance for teachers and administration to renew their friendships.

Band plays on

Mr. Magana, the band director, is one of the youngest members of the Granite Hills staff. His young attitudes and boyish face have had him confused as a student on numerous occasions. His youthful personality has also endeared him to his students. The members of the band feel that his youth helps them better relate to him. This could be one factor of the many recent successes of our band in competition.

Staff steals the show

Enjoying his first year as Granite Hills' ASB advisor, Mr. Wakefield enthused about the "great . . . really good faculty participation" in the Halloween costume contest.

Teachers that morning were greeted by staff dressed as emergency room attendants, complete with Mr. Smith as a corpse laid out in the office, who abruptly sat up and demanded a United Way pledge from those who had not made one. Those who could stop laughing long enough to drink were given a "blood" donation cup of tomatoe juice.

Contest winner for the faculty, Mrs. O'Coyne, won not only congratulations. Mr. Wakefield dressed as Santa awarded her the ultimate prize — lunch at the Bull and Bear, still in costume, with Mr. Arens, dressed as himself, as her escort. According to Wakefield, O'Coyne was "wonderful . . . embarrassed . . . looking like a floozy" while Mrs. Butth and others, also in costume, cheered her on.

Remembering her day, Mrs. O'Coyne blushes as she laughs about the fun she had preparing her costume and trying to stay in character while everyone who saw her laughed.

Other noteworthy faculty and staff actors included Mr. Williams as a Banana Republic revolutionary, Mrs. Huffman as Aphrodite, Mr. Fremont as the Mad Hatter, Ms. Coffin as a '60's bridesmaid, and Mrs. Butth as a penguin.

Mrs. O'Coyne won the grand prize, but many of her cohorts had almost as much fun surprising their students as she did.

Decker Makes Wine

Quentin Decker's hobby is wine making, an intoxicating pastime. He started making his own wine in 1971 and produced wine every year until 1976 when he stopped. This year he began again and believes this year will be a vintage year.

The actual process is quite involved and requires hard work, patience and a special permit from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Mr. Decker and some friends drive to Temecula to pick one ton of grapes which requires two large trucks to transport. The grapes are then crushed to separate stems, juice and skins on the same day. Later the grapes are pressed and fermentation is begun. The mixture is then placed into casks for 6 months then bottled. In a year — Voila — California wine.

▲ Mr. Schimpf's vast collection of frogs sprawl all over the lab. Students and friends have given them to him for years.

Favorites picked

For the first time, the entire student body was polled about its favorite items, and Mr. Schimpf and Mrs. Roisman were selected as this year's outstanding teachers.

Mr. Schimpf, a biology teacher with a passion for frogs, is involved with the community as the advisor for our chapter of SADD. His offbeat humor and laid-back personality have endeared him to many of his students.

Mrs. Roisman is an English teacher and was the advisor for the school newspaper for 15 years. Student Kara Cota remembers her as "a teacher who explains her lessons dearly and well," which encourages students. All in all, the Granite Hills student body has many excellent teachers, with these being only a few.

Love Always, Theresa M. Kenyon

TO LOVE

To experience the intense pain of the sincere and never ending love that is bursting from my heart's domain through tears and laughter and feelings unknown.

To learn and wonder and always grow in the fulfilling way you touch my soul with the gentle warmth I've come to know and the understanding that you have shown.

To share my hopes and my endless dreams,
my special moments and memories too, with you whose heart is so close it seems though you can be far I'm never alone.

To conquer the world and dance through life,
taking moonlight walks, joining hands and hearts, hoping that one day I'll be your wife, rejoicing in how our friendship has grown.

To know in my heart you're always there loving me regardless of what I do, showing me how much you really do care, feeling the special love that's all our own!

... And this and more is what it means to me to love.

BY: THERESA MARIE KENYON

A SONGWRITER'S DREAM BY: THERESA MARIE KENYON

My goal is not only to get the most out of life, but, most importantly, to give of myself to the world through the gifts that God has given me to use in order to create a more loving and forgiving world. There are so many things to do and people to help. I keep asking where I should start, but there's never an answer, never a sign. Like a wandering child I feel so small. For what's a girl like me to do with a loving heart in a hating world? Why can't I just ignore my thoughts and dreams? I live from day to day, not really believing they'll ever come true. But I'm not going to give up. I'll fight for my dream if I can help but one person. I seek neither fame nor fortune, for I believe these things only get in the way of what's really important, love for God and for all mankind. My goal is to take what is in my heart and soul and create music and literature that will promote love and peace in the world.

In the beginning . . . "just friends." We would say, but our love grew stronger each and everyday. There were those times when we were apart and the loneliness we felt tore at our hearts. But we've made it thru good times and bad, drawing strength from the love that we've had. We've shared so much together I'd say there's more to come, for our ecstasy together has only begun.

▲ In Dallas, a Delta Plane crashed, leaving a mere two survivors. This year we saw more plane crashes than any other year in history.

▲ This house was literally knocked over by a storm in Fairfax, California. The storm spread through five Western states and Canada, killing seventeen and leaving 36,000 homeless.

▲ Stranded by the flooded James River, these cows await their rescue. Many cities and counties were declared states of emergency either on the state or federal levels.

► USA for Africa's song "We Are The World," topped the charts for many weeks and received a Grammy for the Best Song of the year. Proceeds were donated to relief for Africa's starving.

1985-86 saw more disasters than any other year in recorded history. Floods, earthquakes, and hurricanes killed thousands worldwide. Robert Schubert, president of the American Red Cross, called 1985 "an incredibly destructive year." An enigmatic disease known as AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) has claimed more than 7,500 lives, including the well-known actor, Rock Hudson. Air travel, once considered a safe, quick way to travel, has become a source of fear. More than 1,946 people died in plane crashes.

Again and again reports of death and destruction invaded the news. An erupting volcano in Columbia caused a mudslide that smothered 25,000. Residents of Mexico City suffered a catastrophic, ninety-second earthquake. Registering 8.1 on the Richter scale, this quake killed over 7,000 people and left more than 500,000 homeless. Four hundred died in Chinese floods, 268 drowned when a dam burst in

Nature vents

Italy, and Puerto Rican mudslide killed 186 and left hundreds more missing. Famine eased somewhat in Africa, but by December of 1985, 18 million (the number of students it would take to fill 720,000 high schools the size of Granite Hills) were still at the point of starvation. A 30-hour tropical deluge in Puerto Rico triggered a landslide that obliterated an entire shantytown. Approximately 150 were killed as mud buried their tiny shacks. A mudslide in Stava, Italy, swallowed twenty homes and three hotels. In America, summer brought with it wildfires, destroying over a million acres. Locally, the Normal Heights fire caused upward of $8.5 million in damages. In the winter, floodwaters inundated the South. Even Northern California suffered devastating floods (President Reagan called it an official "disaster area"). The North American mainland, not known for hurricanes, withstood five this year. Juan, Elena, and Gloria, the most severe hurricanes, each caused approximately one billion dollar in damage. Some survivors were left without electricity for up to two weeks. The most devastating of Nature's tantrums was a cyclone that blew into the Bay of Bengal. The storm brought 100-mph wind and twelve-foot waves, stripping the Bangladeshi islands of trees, homes, and life. Several islands even vanished into the water.

Human violence added to the destruction of Nature. Reports of hijacking and terrorism became daily topics of the media. In a showdown between Philadelphia police and cultists, eleven were killed and an entire neighborhood was incinerated. Violence in South Africa became fierce: over 900 were killed and more than 8,000 were arrested in the last sixteen months of rioting. Richard Ramirez, also known as the Night Stalker, inflicted pain and terror from San Francisco to Southern California. Only 25, he was responsible for sixteen murders and twenty-one other attacks. The United States' act of retaliation on Libya sent waves of shock around the world, as fear of nuclear war became ever more acute.

One encouraging aspect of the disastrous year was the realization that in times of crisis, humanity unites. Prejudices are left behind as people help one another. Members of the performing arts from many different ethnic backgrounds around the world banded together in England and the United States for the sole purpose of helping fellow human beings who were starving. Their efforts raised millions of dollars to aid drought-ridden African nations. Survivors of the Mexico quake received aid from concerned people all over the world. It is irrelevant that an Englishman or an American was helping a Mexican or an African. The important fact was that it was Man helping Man, reaching out to comfort and lend a hand; assuring one another that the race will survive.

▲ The father of the Burk family contacted Aids through a blood transfusion, and transmitted it to his family. This dispelled the notion that the disease is only for the homosexual.

▲ This fire blackened 175,000 acres in Florida. It was one of a series of the worst in Florida's history.

▲ The Regis Hotel collapsed in the Mexico City earthquake on September 26, 1985. Approximately 250 buildings crumbled to the ground in the minutes after the quake.

86 was a year for renewal

The decision of the Coca-Cola industry to create "New Coke" set the pace for the year's events, whether they were trivial or of international importance. It seemed that in all areas of the news there were "old" and "new" versions of people, products, and procedures. The chemical make-up of New Coke was not impressive to many consumers, so the company decided to keep both Original (also known as "Classic") and New Cokes on the market. A more serious chemical development dealt with the tampering of OTC medicine. Consumers saw a reenactment of the "Tylenol Panic" of 1982, when seven people died in the Chicago area after using tainted Tylenol capsules. Recently, Diane Elstroth, 23, died of cyanide poisoning. Although public fear was not so acute as in '82, Tylenol stock fell six points during the week of Elstroth's death. On a more widespread level, chemicals have posed a threat in the form of toxic waste. October 14th's issue of Time magazine displayed the same cover on the horrors of Toxic waste as a Time in 1980. Soon after the 1980 article, national interest provoked Congress' passage of Superfund to clean up toxic-waste sites. Five years later Superfund has expired, and new proposals are being introduced in Congress.

Several individuals have made headlines this year as well. A tragic plane crash caused the death of Ricky Nelson, a figure from the vintage radio and TV show "Ozzie and Harriet." Pete Rose saw a victorious year, as he broke Ty Cobb's record for most career hits. At the age of 44, his incredible accomplishment earned him a standing ovation from his fans, not to mention a Corvette from the team owner. Bob's Big Boy, the restaurant's legendary trademark, was faced with possible termination this year. As a publicity stunt, the corporation held a mock "vote" which determined that the hefty hero would remain.

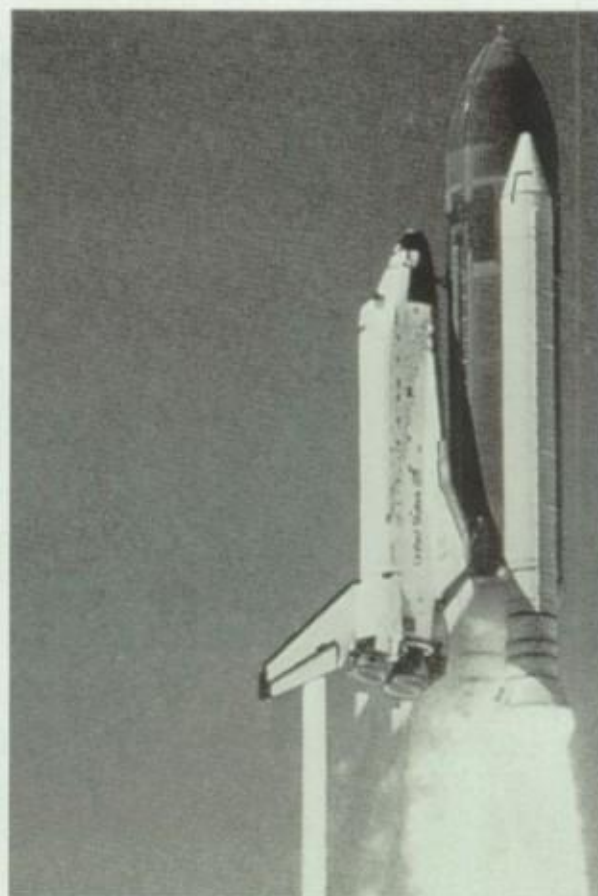

Seven tragic heroes lost their lives when the Challenger, America's latest space shuttle, exploded soon after lift off. This flight attracted a great deal of public attention while it was still in the planning stages because it was the first flight in which a teacher was sent into space. The catastrophe touched the hearts of Americans in a vivid way because the teacher aboard was a "normal person" like themselves and someone with whom they could identify.

American patriotism also increased this year, partly due to the awareness of the corruption of other governments. Prime Minister Palme of Sweden was shot to death by assassins. In the Philippines, a tainted election kept Marcos in power for a time. National outrage against him was so strong, however, that he was forced to hand over power to Corazon Aquino. Many Americans were distressed by the situation, especially the fact that the U.S. granted Marcos sanctuary in Hawaii.

A clean way to gamble hit California. The California Lottery, whose purpose is to raise funds for the public school system, became a state-wide craze. Granite Hills directly felt the benefits of the lottery, in the form of approximately $65,000. Dr. Smith, notified of the amount during the third week of February, held a meeting February 25 to determine just where the lottery money would be spent. At this open meeting, about forty teachers attended to voice their opinions. Together, the faculty negotiated each department's allocation of money. Amounts for departments ranged from $11,500 to $917. Dr. Smith was proud of the "way in which the teachers handled the whole process. The faculty saw the overall view of the school's needs, rather than solely their own." After the meeting, which lasted about six hours, the majority of the people involved felt that they received a fair share.

A week after the Lottery meeting, an accreditation team made a visit to Granite Hills. The seven-person group sat in on classes, talked with students, and audited the school's overall program. They were extremely impressed with the school, and gave it a full six-year accreditation. Granite Hills was not to be left out in a year of developments and changes.

▲ The space shuttle Challenger lifts off in Florida. The shuttle blew up just seconds after takeoff.

► Shrieks of excitement come from Todd Lane, 29, as he hits the jackpot on The Big Spin. Before he came into his fortune, he was a garbage collector in Bakersfield, California.

Computers help — not control

Teenagers growing up in the 80's have often been called the "computer generation." Nearly every facet of teenage life involves computer technology in some way. Schools now offer courses in computer literacy, and homework in many classes is done on home computer systems. While "Pac Man Fever" is not the craze it was a few years ago, computers still permeate the entertainment industry in the form of movie videos. Many jobs, even at a high school level, utilize computers. Quite a few fast-food restaurants, for example, use computerized cash registers and order screens. This clearly dispels the old myth that a person must be a super-genius in order to operate a computer. Although it would seem that to deny computers would be to deny living, many individuals have proved that this is not so.

When the public first began to hear about computers, interest mixed with apprehension. Those in the computer industry understood the reaction: people tend to fear the unknown. Many people joked about the possibility of computers "taking over" the world; these jests, however, many times covered up true fears. Before long, in industry doubts and fears of workers were actualized as countless men and women were laid off and replaced by computers. Surprisingly enough, not much time passed until computers became a wild fad with people spending countless dollars on a product that was a virtual taboo in the past.

Today in 1986, forty years after the first computer, America has finally reached a balance and is establishing a healthy relationship with the computer. More and more people realize that computers are not a vital part of life and that neither human existence nor success is dependent on them. The Top Ten graduating seniors of Granite Hills, for example, do not depend on computers for academic success. Vivian Chow, the class Valedictorian, believes that, "computers, like any other machine or tool, are useless without the power of a human being behind them. Their potential is limited to that of their creator, but the human brain has an unlimited capacity to learn." Computers are not to be feared, as they have no innate power. Likewise, they are not to be revered, because their brilliance can not outmatch that of their programmer. Secretary of Education William Bennett maintains that, "One of the computer's best uses may be to handle areas where a great deal of repetition is required to free up people for more creative endeavors." In other words, they help us to take a byte out of life!

As the Editors-in-Chief of the 1985-86 Pageant, we would like to express our thanks to the many people who helped us to survive our senior year. First of all, thank you, Ms. Coffin, for giving us the courage to be daring (not to mention the popcorn and chocolate cheese!) We would also like to thank: Ellen, for your creative ideas; Shari, for being the unofficial "Class Procrastinator;" Tim, for the endless hours of typing; Patty, for keeping Underclass under control; Larry, for being there above and beyond the call of duty; Matt, for the sorely-needed massages; Cassie, for opening your home; Robby, for Selina, and for keeping us "on our toes;" Carlo, for helping to pick up the pieces; Pam, Julie Howe, Dona and Josh, for meeting every deadline; Julie Hannah, for taking over Academics at the last minute; Tony, Erin and Gabby, for a fantastic Student Life section; Travis, for a great Music spread; Al, for his deadline day help; Wendy and Rick, for their driving expertise; Clint and Brian for their enthusiasm; James, for being there on deadline; Mike, for all-around help and Taco runs; Ty, for art work; Heidi's Dad, for being the Official Yearbook Pop (and for the popcorn!); all our friends for listening to endless yearbook "challenges." Individually, Heidi would like to thank, "My Dad, for always being there to support me; Kim, for remaining so 'calm' and keeping my hair intact; my Secret Pal, for my organizer; and Mom — I love you all." Kim would like to thank, "My parents, for their support; Heidi, with whom I developed a strange, dry sense of humor; Sherri, for helping me to realize that there is life after yearbook; and the brethren in Alpine."

Most of all, we want to thank our Lord Jesus Christ, for giving us salvation and the strength to make it through this year.

The more people change the more they stay the same

Many times we fear change. Change implies that we will become vulnerable, a state that few are willing to enter. Without change, however, we and our world would stagnate. Our natural resources offer a helpful example. Sources of energy, once they are used, do not cease to exist; rather they change forms, and remain useful. Likewise, to remain active, productive components of our society, we must continue to grow and to attune ourselves to a rapidly-changing world.

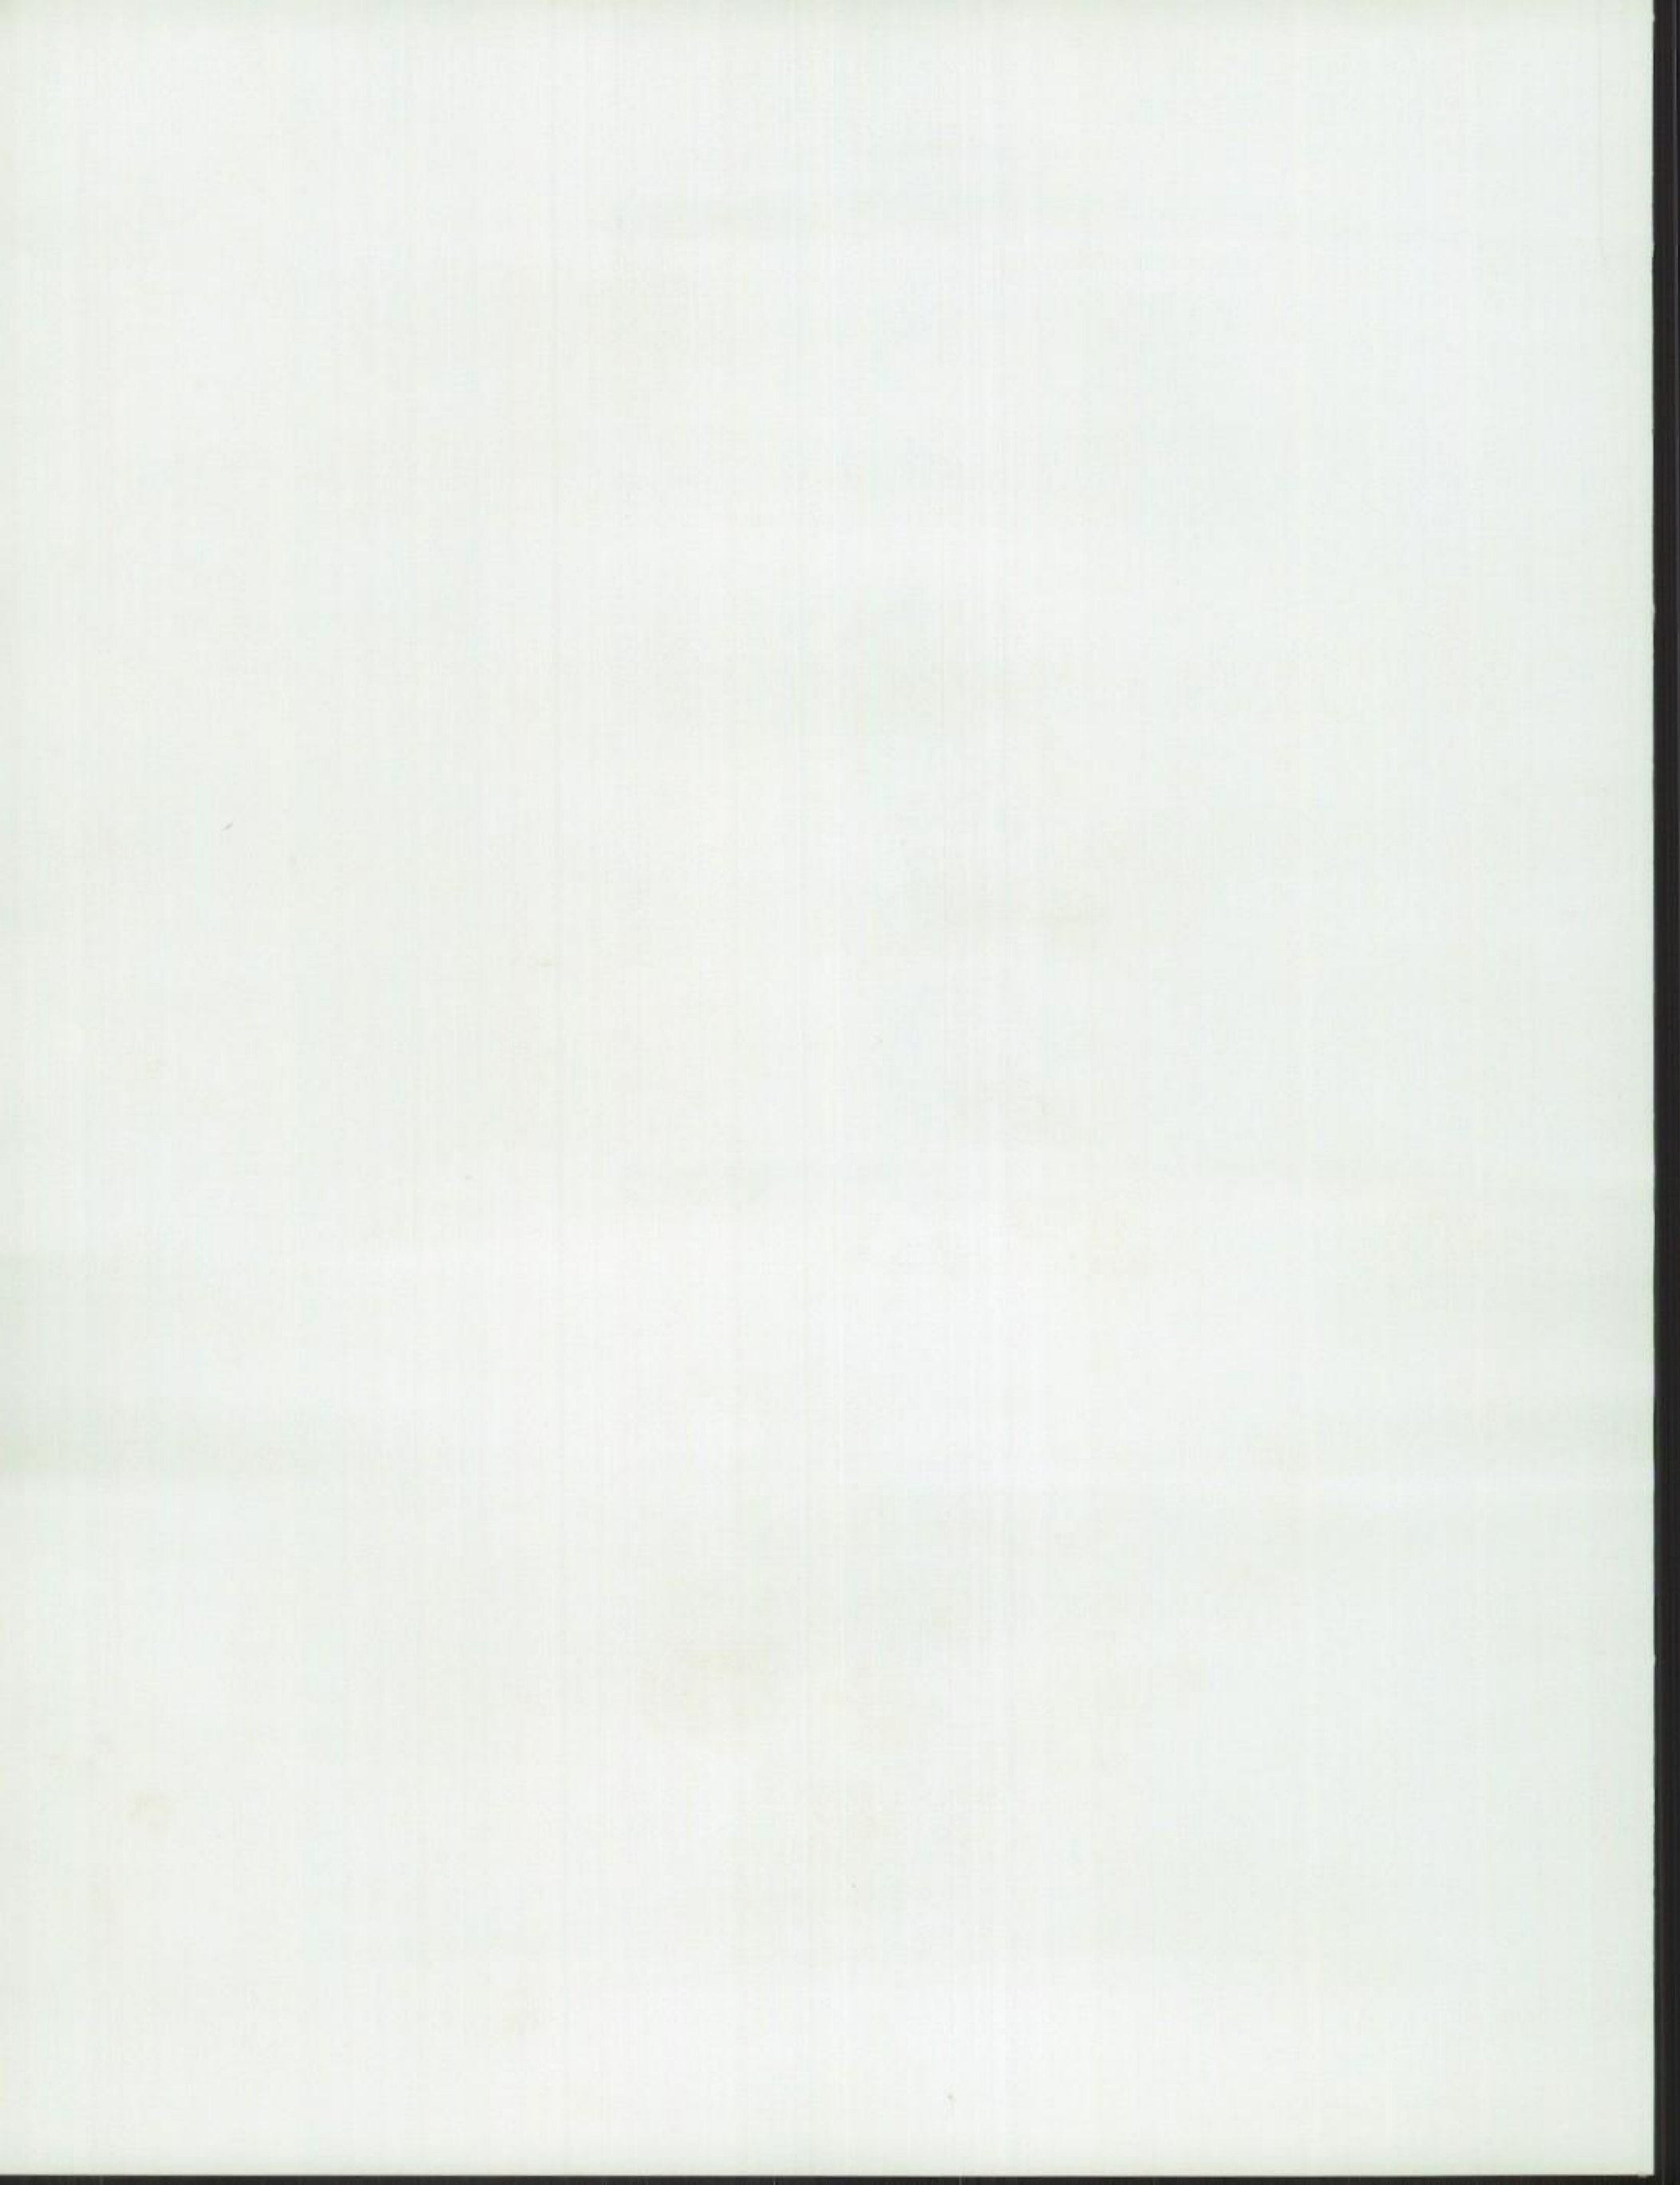

"Change" does not necessarily mean a complete upheaval of one's life. It is not the fundamental, innate qualities of Man that will change through the years, but the facilities he utilizes to express those qualities. Whether a person writes with a stick in the sand or with an IBM computer is of little importance; the principle matter is what is being written.

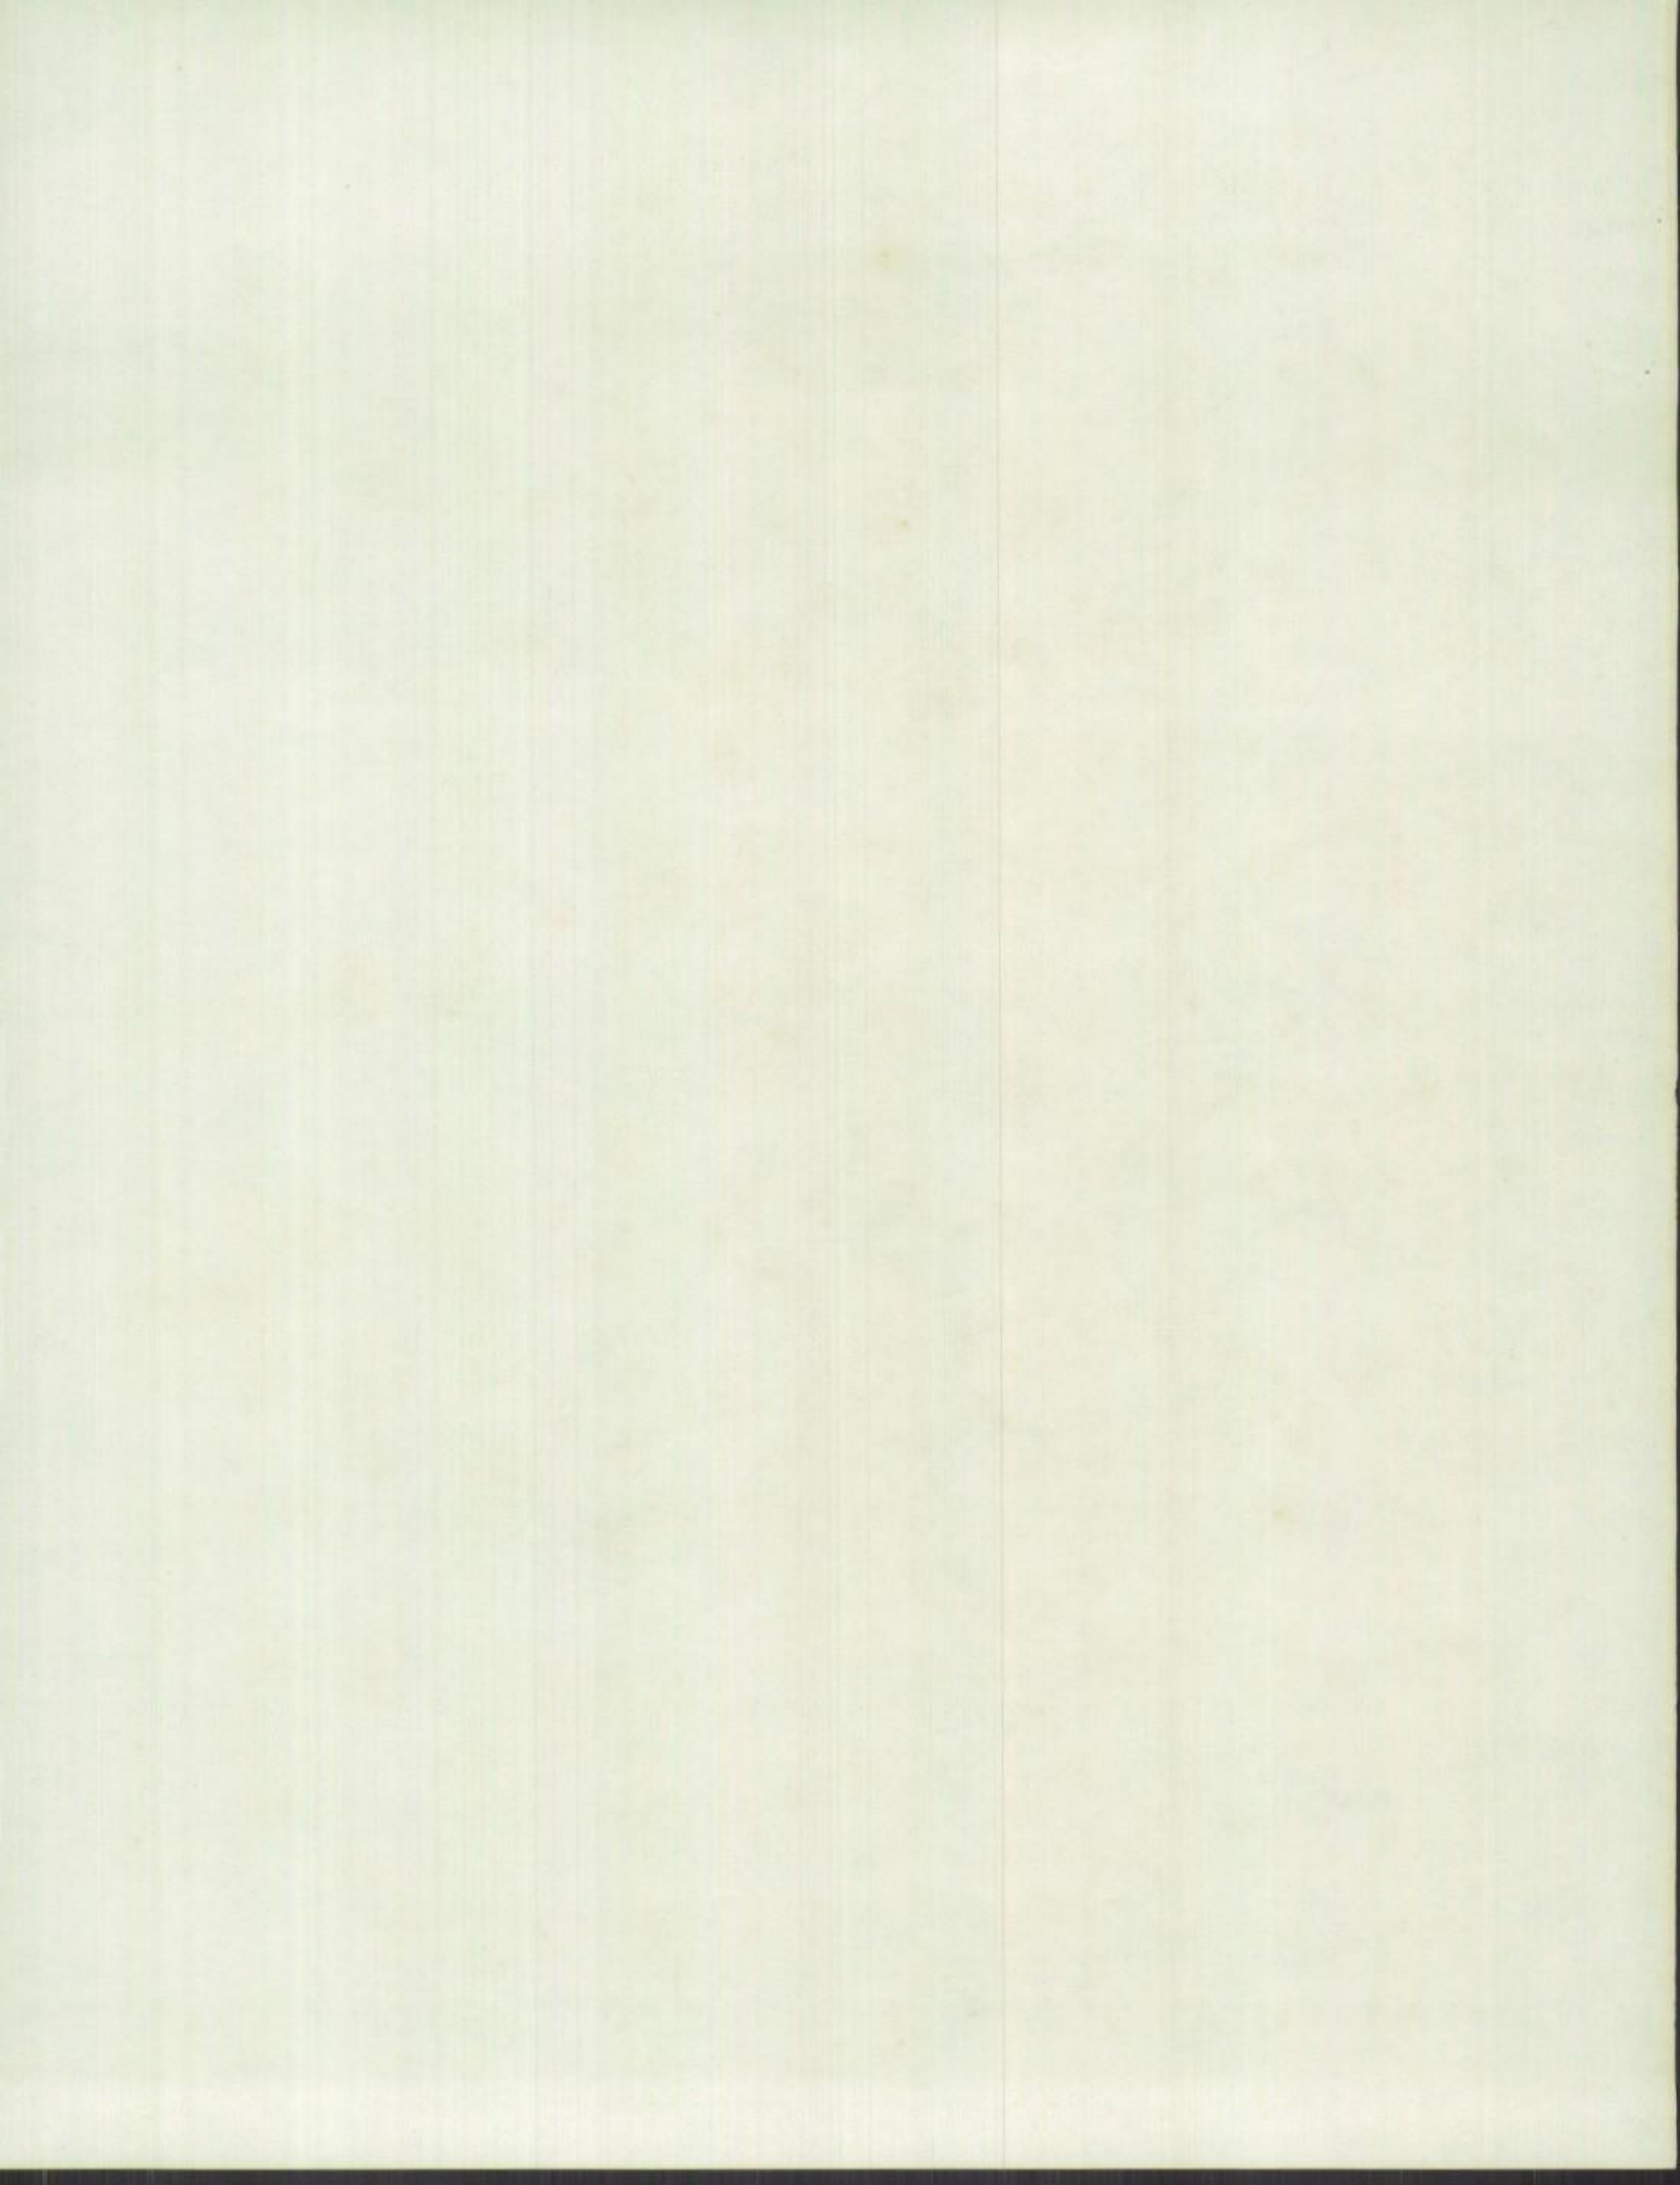

The same concept is true in our lives. Man's means of achieving his goals will be continually modified if he is to succeed in his world. His varying methods do not alter his humanity; rather, they prove it. Only a human being has the power to create original solutions to deal with new situations. Let us, therefore, keep our ideals and goals in mind, and creatively seek new and different ways in which to achieve them.
